Pictures and the Girl Question

A recent sunshiny afternoon brought with it to our office a singular couple, unmistakably husband and wife. That theirs was an at-least-to-them important mission, was evident, and it was also immediately made plain that they had come both for information and to speak their minds. Some people combine these qualities remarkably.

Ten minutes after their arrival we were this much wiser: Our visitors were a respectable, Christian pair from Spokane. They were blessed financially and in various other ways not so vital; but nevertheless, they carried an appalling burden. It was their religious responsibility for a young unknown orphan niece whom they had reason to believe had, in our fair city, "gone to the bad," or who had, at least, "joined the movies," which was in their minds unquestionably one and the same procedure. In any event it was certain that her character had been exposed to the influence of an evil which it could not surmount, since she had suddenly disappeared from the Bible Institute where other loving relatives had established her that her enjoyment(?) of the world might include no danger. Having made sure of the absolute moral protection that this haven would supply, the conscientious connections had taken themselves off with never a thought but that they had attended to all that was necessary. In fact everybody who played a principal part in the transaction was all pleased and self-satisfied save the romantic little nineteen-year-old who ran away when she found life more attractice than her lonely but ever so secure a shelter.

Her present moral pursuers early made it known that they expected us to delve into the pit of the devilish business upon the edge of which we totter and deliver her unto them that she might be contaminated no longer. They further elucidated that although taking such a one into their clean and godly house would now be a load almost too great to stand, still duty had called and they were ever faithful.

As you have already suspected, she whom they sought was not to be found upon any of our casting registers. Clearly if she had joined the rank and file of that great army of ambitious extra girls who fight their battle for screen recognition so bravely week by week, she had done so in a manner that left no tell-tale tracks for interfering benefactors. We knew nothing of her, but partly because we resented the scarcely-veiled, unjust insinuations of these strangers, we pitied her. To most red-blooded modern girls life with them would be insufferable. On the other hand, there existed not a chance in ten that her cinema dreams, if such were what her youthful imagination had revealed, could be realized. Would she have outlook enough to shrewdly bridge the almost unending hours of waiting, when, out of work and without resources, she faced hunger? Such is the experience met by nearly all who finally taste success in this most fascinating and consequently most overcrowded of professions.

Whose problem after all is the salvation of these thousands of enchanted girls, who possessing more perseverance than talent, continually arrive at the film capital to commence startling careers?

Being a woman and therefore a bit illogical (ask any of the males who surround us) we were still meditating upon this seemingly inevitable condition a day or so after the occurrence of the above-mentioned incident when, looking up from our restaurant dinner table, we encountered a familiar picture. It was our favorite waitress, who, despite her competence as a trade juggler, indulges herself in two rows of ridiculous peroxided little curls and a superfluity of messy mascaro. Both the waitress and an idea were coming our way. They arrived simultaneously.

"Pansy," we asked, "how long have you resided in Los Angeles?" If our unprecipitated query surprised her, she gave no sign.

"Oh, about a year, I guess." Then informatively, "Came from Wichita."

In answer to our next question the usual reply was forthcoming, "Yes, I thought I'd get into the pictures, but, say, even a pretty blonde ain't got a show. She's lucky if she even gets on extra, and you hafta eat."

What thousands of crushed hopes might have been contained in that brief explanation, or had it merely meant a sporting chance taken, an adventure over? Pansy's heavily laden lashes protected that which we strove to discern. "A T-bone rare?" she interrogated gently.

It is true! The girls who wait on us over counters, wires, and tables are those who having learned much about the law of average are making the best of it. If there are others who have been less sensible or weaker the motion picture industry must not be held responsible. It is only justified in satisfying the demand of the public. Its press agents cannot cease activities because their stories of life in the film colony bring impressionable souls to disillusionment. But they're worth a little thought—these children—for vision has been theirs,—and they are all about us.

Let us be known at least to them as the hard-working people whom we are, striving in common with the rest of the world for that which we obtain, rather than the lotus-eating, much-to-be-envied sons and daughters of luxury and folly. Such a knowledge on their parts would prove a wonderful equalizer. Is it to be desired? F. R.

Film Capital Production Notes

LOUIS B. MAYER TO FILM "THE WANDERING JEW"

Closely following the announcement of his plans for the production of "King Lear," Louis B. Mayer has made known his intention of filming "The Wandering Jew." The story is now being prepared, and the producer expects to start actual work on the picture within a very short time. The name of the director has not yet been given out.

In addition to the Anita Stewart company, Mayer now has John Stahl making a series of all-star attractions for First National release. and he has further made provisions for the production of a number of specials. "King Lear" and "The Wandering Jew" are only the first of these latter, and will be produced with all star casts.

DE HAVENS START NEW PRODUCTION

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven have begun the picturization of "My Lady Friends" at the Louis B. Mayer studio. It is their third for release for Associated First National.

The direction will be in the hands of Lloyd Ingraham, who will be assisted by George Crone. Barney McGill is the cinematographer and Leon P. Eycke assists him. Ben H. Cohen is the production manager.

The story was written by Frank Mandel and Emile Mitray.

Mr. De Haven is personally choosing the cast.

NEW TALMADGE PICTURE CHOSEN

"The Wonderful Thing," which Joseph M. Schenck recently purchased upon the completion of its Broadway run, will be Norma Talmadge's new vehicle to be produced in New York.

Herbert Brenon will direct the George Broadhurst story.

TITLING LAST PICKFORD PRODUCTION

The work of titling "Through the Back Door," Mary Pickford's forthcoming United Artists release, is being carried on at the Fairbanks home in Beverly Hills, Calif., under the direct supervision of Miss Pickford.

Gerald Duffy has been chosen to title this vehicle.

Jack Pickford and Alfred E. Green, co-directors of "Through the Back Door," are doing most of the cutting and editing, while E. M. McDermott, head of the cutting department, is putting the picture together.

It is expected that this production will be ready for public exhibition about the middle of May.

WORK TO START ON FAIRBANKS PICTURE

With the cast complete, work is scheduled to start on "The Three Musketeers," with Douglas Fairbanks in the principal role, as soon as the costumes are finished.

The designing and supervising of all sets is in the hands of Edward M. Langley, art director for the Fairbanks company.

STAHL CUTTING INITIAL PRODUCTION

John M. Stahl is now engaged in cutting his initial independent unit production, "The Child Thou Gavest Me," which he recently completed for Louis B. Mayer, and which will be presented by Mr. Mayer through Associated First National channels.

JEROME STORM FINISHING MACDONALD PICTURE

Jerome Storm is cutting and editing the Katherine MacDonald production to direct which he was especially engaged by Ben Schulberg. No title as yet has been given the picture.

AT THE ROACH STUDIO

Ruth Roland has signed a long term contract with Hal E. Roach, who will produce her next serials which will be released to Pathe.

Shooting will commence about April 18th at the Culver City lot, and W. S. Van Dyke will direct, assisted by Charlie Stevenson. Arthur Todd will be first cameraman.

"The Golden Canyon" is the working title of the script by Val Cleveland and is in fifteen episodes.

Gaylord Lloyd will finish the third of the Gaylord Lloyd Comedies next week.

Bob Eddy will alternate with Nick Barrows in the direction of Eddie Boland in his comedies.

Harold Lloyd's last picture, "Among Those Present," will be released in about two weeks. Lloyd is planning an immediate trip to New York.

AT REALART

Elmer Harris, Supervising Director, is piling up a list of original screen stories to be used by Wanda Hawley and Bebe Daniels. "The Clinging Vine" will shortly go into production featuring Wanda Hawley. Around April 13th work will start on a new feature for Wanda Hawley adapted to the screen by Elmer Harris from an original story by himself.

The English comedy, "Anne Annington," by Lachmere Warrall, will be the next starring vehicle for Mary Miles Minter. Douglas Doty has written the scenario and Joseph Henabery will direct. The temporary screen title will be "Her Winning Way."

Hector Turnbull's second personally supervised story is now under production. The title is "Everything for Sale," and it is being directed by Frank O'Connor.

Mary Miles Minter has completed "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," directed by Joseph Henabery.

AT GOLDWYN

Reginald Barker's next production, "Who Shall Judge?" will soon go into production. The story was adapted to the screen by Ruth Wightman from an original story by Gouverneur Morris.

"The Glorious Fool," Mary Roberts Rinehart's original story, adapted for the screen by J. G. Hawks, went into production last week under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

Will Rogers and his company are on location in Arizona making scenes for "Doubling for Romeo." Clarence Badger is directing.

Frank Lloyd, Phoebe Hunt, Jack Holt and other members of the company making "The Grim Comedian," Rita Weiman's first original screen story, will leave this week for Big Bear, where they will spend a week making exteriors.

Wallace Worsley, who is directing "Ace of Hearts," Gouverneur Morris' original story, will take his company to Pine Crest, Calif., this week for exteriors. Lon Chaney, Leatrice Joy and John Bowers will be the only members of the cast to make the trip.

AT UNIVERSAL

Director Stuart Paton will begin work presently on Priscilla Dean's next production, "Conflict," which is from the popular story of that name now running in the Red Book Magazine.

The titles of two recent productions have been changed. The Frank Mayo picture produced under the direction of Robert Thornby and originally called "The Truant,"

Current Reviews

"THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS"

Symphony

Without doubt the most spectacular Indian story ever filmed is Maurice Tourneur's celluloid version of James Fenimore Cooper's famous Leather Stocking tale, "The Last of the Mohicans." The scenario remains fairly true to the story, which deals with the French and English conquests of the new world in the Eighteenth Century. It contains real history and thrills a-plenty, consequently it will hold any audience.

Too much footage, however, is devoted to the funeral of Cora. Particularly the several glimpses of the corpse result in an unnecessary morbid tone.

The red men are for the most part well chosen and consistently decorated. In view of the fact that the much-blanketed and befeathered Indian has been the only type of savage to receive a screen showing heretofore, the historically correct make-ups of the Hurons and Delawares in this picture is a great relief.

The photography and the composition of the "shots" compel particular mention. Indeed, the scenery in itself could not have been surpassed.

Barbara Bedford characterizes the heroic and stoical Cora Munro of the original, with impressive restraint. Interest in her artistically rendered role never slacks. She plays the type of woman who made pioneering possible.

Albert Roscoe is more than convincing as Uncas, the last of the Mohican tribe. His love for the English girl is made very beautiful by the effect of repression which he also creates.

Wallace Beery proves that no heavy of any race is beyond him with his interpretation of Magua, the treacherous spy.

Lillian Hall and Henry Woodward are well cast as Alice Munro, Cora's weaker little sister and Major Heyward, her gallant lover.

James Gordon is good as Col. Munro, father of the girls.

Theodore Lorch makes probably the best Indian of the lot as Chingachgook, Uncas' father. He hasn't many scenes, but their realism makes them invaluable to the atmosphere.

George Hackathorne utilizes his footage as Capt. Randolph, the coward, to advantage.

Nelson McDowell adds the one and very much needed comedy touch to the piece in the role of David Gamut, psalm singer.

Harry Lorraine, Jack McDonald and Sydney Dean, all play minor roles well.

Clarence Brown co-directed this Associated Producers' production with Tourneur.

"THE SPENDERS"

California

B. B. Hampton presents his screen version of Harry Leon Wilson's "The Spenders," locally this week. Any way one looks at it this picture is a marvelous improvement over "The Killer," which we reluctantly reviewed in the last issue.

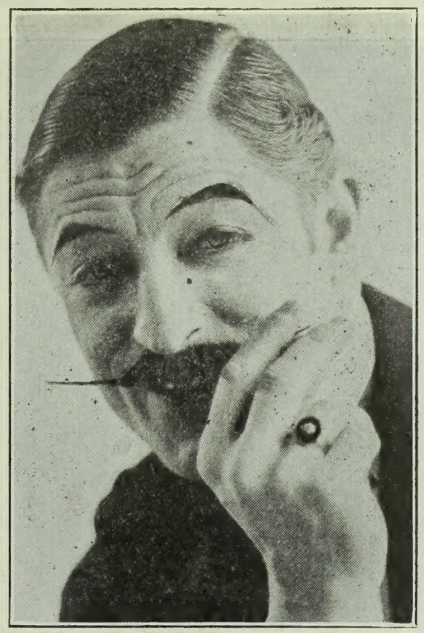
The story of the current release runs in a considerably lighter vein than Hampton's productions usually do, but it is heavy enough to result in a satisfactory drama.

E. Richard Shayer's scenario, although it loses much of the novel's philosophy, is generally consistent.

The cast is mostly good and the photography is standard.

Niles Welch heads the list of players as P. Percival Bines, a member of the third generation of wealth, or the inevitable spender. His interpretation of the juvenile who for all his folly always holds the sympathy is really delightful. He has rarely been more pleasing.

Joseph J. Dowling, as his grandfather, Peter Bines, the shrewd, wealthy pioneer, who "started in shirt-sleeves" is ideal. The relation of these two roles is the story's keynote.



GEORGE WEBB

Playing Blackie Daw in George Randolph Chester's Special Production, "The Son of Wallingford"

Claire Adams plays opposite Welch in the role of Avice Milbrey, a not-very-diverting victim of society.

Robert McKim offers one of his always satisfying performances as Rulon Shepler, a typical "Wall street wrecker."

Betty Brice and Harry Holland as Psyche Bines and Lord Mauburn provide some timely comedy.

Adele Farrington, Virginia Harris, Tom Ricketts and Otto Lederer all do small parts effectively.

"THE UNKNOWN WIFE"

Superba

Edith Roberts plays in Universal's "The Unknown Wife," a rather inappropriately titled story which is more simple than invigorating. However, it passes a fairly interesting hour and has no big mistakes to "pick on."

The lighting and camera work might be improved to everyone's increased satisfaction.

Miss Roberts this time does Helen Wilburcon, an unsuspecting little country girl who marries a reformed convict. Her role is not particularly complicated.

Casson Ferguson's rendition of Donald Grant, the male lead, is excellent. He takes all possible advantage of his opportunities.

Spottiswood Aitken plays Helen's father competently.

William Quinn, Joe Neary, Augustus Phillips, Bert Frank, Mathilde Brundage, Jessie Pratt, Edith Stayart and Hal Wilson are also included in the rather long list of players.

William Worthington directed.

"THE DEVIL"

Tally's

George Arliss is seen here in an Associated Exhibitors adaptation of his renowned stage drama, "The Devil," by Franz Molnar. It is altogether probable that photographed, this play is more impressive than was the stage presentation even when the loss of the remarkable lines is considered. This, of course, is partly due to the advantage of the close-up and then to the introduction of some novel technical effects which lend much to the supernatural elements treated.

That the camera work and lighting of this particular picture are far below par is unfortunate. A peculiar story of this sort should, by all means, have been well photographed.

Mr. Arliss presents the public with one of the master performances of the year when he gives us Dr. Muller, or the Devil. So subtle, so fascinating does he make his character that (whether one looks upon it as literal or allegorical) the apparent desirability and attraction of its sin is easily understood. Dr. Muller will long stand in the minds of his audiences as evil, filmed. He will be symbolic of the devil, and we doubt that his role will ever be surpassed in this line. The entire story is but an excuse for it.

Sylvia Breamer plays Mimi, the little French model, whose life his viciousness nearly ruins. Her part is accomplished with regard for type and is quite consistent.

Although Lucy Cotton makes no great impression as Marie, the Parisian society girl who finds Muller's suggestions irresistible, she is satisfactory.

Edmund Lowe does some highly interesting work in the role of Paul de Veaux, a young artist, whose temperament needs very little assistance from the always present Doctor. Lowe is a very different type of leading man.

Roland Bottomley also offers a good piece of acting in Georges Roben. Sections of his action are especially worthy of mention. He handles his heavy business remarkably.

Mrs. Arliss is seen in the small part of Marie's aunt and chaperon.

James Young directed the production, which is released by Pathe.

"STRAIGHT IS THE WAY"

Grauman's

"Straight is the Way," a Cosmopolitan comedy of crooks and spooks, is this week's attraction at Grauman's. Despite the facts that its story (in common with all regulation fairy tales and screen farces) couldn't possibly happen, and that it even drags a bit in places, this picture contains much material that forms excellent entertainment. The subtitles in themselves are good for a merry evening.

The photography is better than average and the direction does all that is possible with the scenario.

Matt Moore's part or Bob Carter, a near crook with good intentions and a romantic soul, heads the cast. The young actor is to be credited with accomplishing a great portion of the amusement of the whole. We know of few comedians whom we would rather see perform.

After a long absence from the screen, at least in this section, Gladys Leslie returns to do charmingly the ingenue in this production. She plays Dorcas, the last of a financially decadent line of New England aristocracy. That Dorcas is too guileless

FELIX FEIST ASSOCIATED WITH JOSEPH M. SCHENCK

Felix Feist, recently resigned Vice-President of the Goldwyn Film Company, has joined Jos. M. Schenck's staff, to supervise the distribution and sales, not only of Norma Talmadge Pictures and Constance Talmadge Pictures, but also of all of the other Schenck productions, including Buster Keaton Comedies, Mutt & Jeff Pictudes, Allen Holubar Pictures, Sidney Franklin Productions, and the John Emerson-Anita Loos special productions.

Mr. Feist will take up his new duties at once, and will make a trip throughout the United States, representing Mr. Schenck. He will visit the exhibitors and promote new ideas of collaboration. He will also attend the convention of the New York State Exhibitors, to be held in Rochester this week, and will then start out on a two weeks' trip to Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo and other neighboring cities. In the fall, he will make a ninety day Western trip before visiting the South.

Charles Force is doing a heavy with the Hobart Bosworth Company, which is on location in San Francisco.

Tully Marshall, husband of Marion Fairfax, will appear under his wife's direction in her first picture, "The Lying Truth."

Marjorie Daw and Pat O'Malley will play the leads in "The Lying Truth," the initial offering of the Marion Fairfax Productions.

Jack Gilbert has been cast in Reginald Barker's next production, "Who Shall Judge?"

Eddie Barry and Helen Darling have been added to the cast of "Nothing Like It," Al Christie's next all-star comedy.

Raymond Lee is playing in the Universal production, "Fanny, Herself," under the direction of Tod Browning.

Betty Schade has been added to the cast of Tourneur's newest screen offering, "The Foolish Matrons."

James Kirkwood has returned from New York and will commence work presently on "The Great Impersonation," under the direction of George Melford.

Miss Bobbie Hunter has been appointed head of the scenario department of the Kinema Bureau. All scripts are to be handled by her.

Hazel Daly has been selected to play opposite Tom Moore in his current Goldwyn starring vehicle, "Beating the Game," an original story by Charles Kenyon.

Frankie Lee, who was the little cripple boy in "The Miracle Man," will be seen in the same sort of characterization in Maurice Tourneur's forthcoming production, "The Foolish Matrons."

Hobart Bosworth, who is a featured player in the new Tourneur production "Foolish Matrons," will soon start work with his own independent producing company which will be known as Hobart Bosworth, Inc.

Mr. George F. Law has been appointed manager of the Winnipeg branch of the Canadian Universal Film Co., it is announced by Mr. Herman Stern, Universal's Division Sales Manager for Canada.

Pickups By the Staff

ROSE CONSULTS WITH MOROSCO IN NEW YORK

Edward E. Rose, of the Morosco dramatizing forces, has returned to New York to confer with his chief regarding future productions here. Before his departure he prepared in scenario form his adaptations of "Slippy McGee" and "The Rose of the Ghetto," which were dramatized by him from the books. While "Slippy McGee" has been produced on the stage here, "The Rose of the Ghetto" is one of the five plays awaiting production here by Morosco. The others are "Whistler," "Mom," "Sweethearts for Three" and "Rainbow Bridge."

Although Morosco now has thirty-three plays for picturizing, he is steadily acquiring more. His picture schedule calls for steady production for more than three years. "The Half Breed," his first feature for First National release, is more than half completed and the second picture will be started immediately after the stages have been cleared.

WELL KNOWN NATURALIST VISITS UNIVERSAL

Edmund Heller, big game hunter and naturalist on the staff of the Smithsonian Institute, recently was the guest of Pliny Horne, the Universal camera-explorer. Prof. Heller accompanied him on his last African trip and the two held a happy reunion.

FILM STAR WRITES PICTURE EXPERIENCES

A series of articles dealing with her own experiences in pictures is in preparation by Mildred Davis for an eastern magazine. It is to be published in book form on its completion.

BEBE AWAITS SUPERIOR COURT DECISION

The Bebe Daniels' jail sentence affair is still undecided. At present writing, no date has been set and Miss Daniels is completing her work on "The March Hare."

The question as to whether or not Miss Daniels will serve the ten days in the Santa Ana jail to which she was sentenced by Justice John Cox rests upon the decision of the Superior Court of Orange County on the existing appeal from the verdict of the lower court.

ANZIA YEZIERSKA LEAVES FOR NEW YORK

Anzia Yezierska left last week for New York, after spending eight weeks at the Goldwyn Culver City studio developing "Hungry Hearts" for the screen. Julian Josephson collaborated with the author on the screen version of her story.

Charlie and Sid Chaplin have brought their mother from England and will establish a home for her in Los Angeles.

It is rumored that Betty Blythe will appear in two pictures to be made abroad in the near future under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards.

Cullen Landis, who has just finished playing an important part in "The Old Nest," is spending his leisure time with a fishing rod at Long Beach.

FORMER FILM MAN ADMITTED TO THE BAR

Harry A. Finkenstein, former film man, has been admitted to practice law and will be associated with the law firm of Ingle Carpenter and M. J. Finkenstein.

He is a graduate of the University of Southern California, and belongs to the American Legion.

UNIVERSAL BRANCHES IN AUSTRALIA

According to a recent statement by Mr. George E. Kann, export manager for Universal, there now are four Universal branches in Australia and three in New Zealand, situated in the following cities: Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane, Wellington, Auckland, N. Z., Christchurch, N. Z.

Wanda Hawley is now enjoying a vacation.

Director Jack Ford is the proud father of a ten-pound boy.

Charlie Chaplin has entitled his sixth production for First National "Vanity Fair."

Rudolph Valentino has completed his role in "Camille," and will spend a brief vacation at Palm Springs, his first in more than a year.

June Mathis has started work on the scenario for Rex Ingram's new Metro feature, a Balzac story, the title of which has not yet been announced.

Doris May and Kathleen Kirkham are going to New York with other members of the cast of "Foolish Matrons," Maurice Tourneur's picture, to make scenes for the picture under the direction of Clarence L. Brown.

Buster Keaton and his manager, Lou Anger, have gone to New York on an extended trip and while there Keaton will marry Natalie Talmadge. He expects to return to Hollywood in the near future and continue the making of his two-reel comedies.

DIRECTOR JAMES YOUNG CELEBRATES SECOND WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. James Young celebrated the second anniversary of their marriage by entertaining a large group of film celebrities at their home in Hollywood on Saturday night.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brunton and Master Jack Brunton, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Bryant Washburn, Mr. and Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa, Mildred Harris Chaplin, Marie Prevost, Ora Carewe, Virginia Nordon, Lawson Butt, George Ingleton, Mrs. Hampton del Ruth, B. F. Fineman, Capt. R. B. Kidder, and Randolph C. Lewis.

Studio electricians who are working with Mr. Young provided special illumination for the ball room.

FIRST ANNUAL PICNIC AND BARBECUE OF UNIVERSAL ORGANIZATION HELD

The first annual picnic and barbecue of the "Big U" organization was held recently on the Universal Santa Susana Ranch. Carl Laemmle was the host and with him in the receiving line to welcome their coworkers were R. H. Cochrane, vice-president; Abraham Stern, treasurer, and Irving G. Thalberg, general manager.

The ninth "Hall Room Boys" comedy is in production.

Marie Mosquini will start building a home next month in the Wilshire district.

Gareth Hughes is to serve as head of Viola Dana's supporting company for her three forthcoming special productions.

Vivian Rich has purchased four and one-half acres in Laurel Canyon and will begin the building of her home as soon as convenient.

Phil de Esco and Jack Douglass, technical experts with the George H. Kern productions, have gone to Catalina to arrange the biblical Kern's "Unfoldment."

David Robbins, who has been the chief of Universal's New York office projection department for the past five years, has resigned to enter the exhibiting field. With a partner, Mr. Samuel Krauss, he has formed the Erie Basin Amusement Company.

While awaiting the return from New York of his producer, Cyrus J. Williams, Tom Santschi has been on an extended vacation in the mountains. While away he has written three original outdoor stories which he will produce for Pathe.

The Star Ranch Westerns have been sold by the C. B. C. Film Sales Company to Lightning Photoplays Corporation of Boston, for distribution throughout the New England States.

A new magazine, "The Photodramatist," will appear in May under the guidance of Allen Putnam. The magazine is a new educational enterprise of the Palmer Photoplay organization.

Harry "Snub" Pollard is entertaining his mother, Mrs. Isabel Pollard of Melbourne, Australia, at his Los Angeles home. Mother and son have been separated for over fifteen years. Mrs. Pollard expects to return to Australia the last of May.

Production Notes

will reach the screen under the title of "The Valley of Rogues," and "The Evil Half," Norman Dawn's story in which Eva Novak is starred, has been changed to "Wolves of the North."

George Larkin and Josephine Hill are being featured in a series of two-reel action dramas ,which Edward Kull is directing.

"The Terror Trail," a serial, is temporarily sidetracked until Eileen Sedgwick, who is ill, can recover sufficiently to resume work.

Hoot Gibson has begun production on a two-reel action drama under the direction of Lee Kohlmar. It is called "Too Tired Jones."

Jack Perrin has started work on "The Claim Jumpers," a two-reel western which Edward Laemmle is directing.

Harry Carey is in Truckee for the concluding scenes of his latest photodrama, "Christmas Eve at Pilot Butte."

Lee Moran is putting his usual comedy kick into "Whose Wife is Kate?" a two-reel mirthmaker, written by Harry Thew and Cleveland Moffett.

Art Acord is now making interiors for "The White Horseman," his forthcoming Universal serial, being produced under the direction of Albert Russell.

Harry Burns, the animal director, will shortly begin production on a new series of monkey comedies in which Joe Martin will be featured. A. C. Stecker, chief of the arena, will assist Mr. Burns.

Elmo Lincoln has started on a new serial based on the exploits of Tarzan of the Apes.

C. F. Bender, assistant to Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor, has addressed a communication to the leading universities of America, offering $50.00 to any student who will suggest a book or magazine story available for picture purposes. Bender believes that many stories appear in local or obscure magazines and newspapers that might furnish excellent material for the screen.

Edith Roberts has returned from Catalina Island, where the opening sequences of "My Lady of the Island," her latest photodrama, were filmed under the direction of Norman Dawn. The story is from the pen of Beatrice Grimshaw.

AT METRO

The unit system was inaugurated at Metro's Hollywood studios with the start of "A Trip to Paradise," Maxwell Karger's new production in which Bert Lytell is starred. The unit plan will be extended to all the other productions made by Metro. Rex Ingram and Bayard Veiller already have been assigned to head these units. Other directors will be named in the near future.

Viola Dana and the members of her company who have been at Catalina Island for several days, filming exteriors for Life's Darn Funny," have returned to the studios.

GORE BROS.-RAMISH AND SOL LESSER BUY TWO NEW THEATRES

A deal has been consummated between W. J. Johnson and J. E. Wrightsman of Long Beach, Calif., and Gore Bros.-Ramish and Sol Lesser which approximates an investment of $250,000 and brings into the rapidly expanding chain of West Coast Theatres, Inc., two additional first-run motion picture theatres, the Palace, at 127 E. Ocean, and the Liberty at 60 Pine St., in Long Beach.

Robertson-Cole has just released "What's a Wife Worth," the second Christie-Cabanne production.

AT THE WARNER STUDIO

"Money Flies" is the title given the first of a series of twenty-four two-reel comedies featuring Louise Fazenda which is being produced by Warner Brothers for Educational release.

Charlotte Merriam and Neely Edwards are working in a series of one-reelers for this company. Their pictures will be released through Educational. Reggie Morris is directing the series which includes twenty-four comedies. Jean Havez has provided the present script.

With the script of his first two-reel comedy practically complete Jack Gardner is ready to begin work on the production of a series of twelve pictures starring his wife, Louise Dresser, and Willard Louis.

This issue marks Cameral's third birthday and sends it out upon its fourth year with the profession which it has so long represented.
In the months that are to come this little publication will continue to hold to the policy of just loyalty to its people which it has entertained since its inception.
The management desires to take this opportunity to again invite the suggestions of each and every member of the motion picture industry for its improvement.
Growth is experienced only through co-operation and the way is clear for big things ahead!

CHATBURN ANNOUNCES PLANS AND PERSONNEL OF HIS ORGANIZATION

Before leaving for the East this week to supervise the Kansas City premiere of "Madonnas and Men," T. W. Chatburn, president of the T. W. Chatburn Enterprises, announced that Los Angeles would continue to be the home office of his organization.

The personnel of the Chatburn Enterprises includes L. M. Cobbs, assistant general manager; W. H. Hepburn and E. S. Holmes, sales promotion directors; W. H. Creus, auditor; M. J. Cohen, director of exploitation, and Harry Hammond Beall, director of publicity. H. V. Oviatt has been placed in charge of the San Francisco Exchange and Robert Brackett has been named as special sales representative of the organization.

Mr. Chatburn plans to deal exclusively with the distribution, production and presentation of feature pictures. It is his plan to road show practically all of his attractions, leasing a theatre in each of the Keith Circuits for the first run of his pictures.

During his Eastern trip, Mr. Chatburn will arrange to open up a number of additional exchanges through the East, the Middle West and in the Pacific Northwest.

AT LASKY'S

George Melford has begun work on his production of E. Phillip Oppenheim's novel, "The Great Impersonation," with Ernest Traxler as Assistant Director.

Cecil B. de Mille is shooting the opening scenes of his new production, which was suggested by Leonard Merrick's story, "The Lady and The Laurels."

William de Mille is in consultation with Rita Weiman concerning the story which she is writing for his next production. The title and other details are as yet unannounced, and work will not begin until some time in May.

Sam Wood is making the concluding scenes of Gloria Swanson's first starring picture, "The Great Moment."

Frank Urson has been making interior scenes for the opening of "The Hell Diggers," Byron Morgan's story, which he also scenarized. Wallace Reid is the star and Agnes Ayres will play opposite him. The company will go North shortly to shoot scenes of the mining districts of California which will be used in the picture.

MAX LINDER ENTERTAINS OPERATIC STARS

While the Chicago Grand Opera Company was in Los Angeles, Max Linder, the French comedy star, was host to a party of the songbirds. He entertained Lina Cavalieri, Lucien Muratore and Du Franne, taking them around his studio at Universal City.

SCENARIO DEPARTMENT

Edited by

WYCLIFFE A. HILL

President, The Photoplaywrights' League of America.

Beginning with this issue of Camera! this department will become a regular feature of the magazine and will be edited by Wycliffe A. Hill, President of the Photoplaywrights' League of America. Many of Camera's readers will remember Mr. Hill's interesting and illuminating articles on Scientific Plot Building and Continuity Writing, which appeared in our columns last year. Requests for information concerning any phase of scenario writing and suggestions for the betterment of this department are invited from our readers.

MARKET CONDITIONS

With a gradual improvement in the motion picture industry in general, the scenario market is also beginning to show signs of taking on a much more prosperous appearance. This is due to the increased activity on the part of the established companies and to the entry of a number of new companies into the field.

The best and quickest markets that I know of just at present are for the following types of stories:

Five-reel ideal drama for character ingenue lead. Story must be free from any sex appeal and the love interest may be secondary. Very little melodrama desired but lots of heart interest and some pathos with a good line of comedy added.

Two-reel situation comedies for girl lead. No slapstick and no hokum, but some clever and clean gags are all right.

Stories of the north woods for young western star. Must not be too expensive to produce and must have plenty of good, red-blooded action.

Five-reel comedy-dramas for juvenile leading man. Not merely are ideas desired, but stories must be worked out in detail with as much business as possible without padding.

Two-reel rube comedies for male lead. Something along the line of the "Snakeville" comedies which were formerly produced with Vic Potel.

Big six or seven-reel story with universal appeal.

Five-reel character stories for ingenue lead and with backgrounds such as Eastside, New York, Greenwich Village, or Spanish stuff. These stories are for a star of a peculiar type.

Of course the picture companies are nearly all in the market for stories of one kind or another, but the above list will describe some live calls which have just gone out. I will try to apprise my readers each week of other up-to-the-minute openings that exist at the studios and for new companies who call upon me.

WHO WILL TAKE BILL HART'S PLACE?

Many of us who have typical Bill Hart stories are wondering just who will fill the gap that will be left when he leaves the screen. It is understood that Hobart Bosworth is to be confined to sea-faring stories for a time. As far as I can learn Dustin Farnum is not very active just now and neither is Tom Santschi. There was some rumor that Joe Ryan at Vitagraph would shortly be featured in five-reel westerns, but nothing definite has been announced. I know of several wonderful stories for such a star, and as I say, many of us are wondering to whom we will offer them.

William Piggott is doing the continuity for a spectacular feature to be produced in the near future by a new company. Mr. Piggott was formerly production manager for westerns and serials at the U.

Cecil B. De Mille is quoted as having said in an interview the other day that "Most of the people who feel that they can write for the screen haven't the remotest idea of what is required of the scenario writer. And very, very, few of them will take the time or trouble necessary to master this most difficult art."

I thoroughly agree with Mr. De Mille. The average amateur does not know the difference between a mere narrative and a dramatic plot. Many of them submit narratives which when reduced to action would not "pan out' 'a respectable split reel, and then they are inclined to become very much offended when their stories are rejected by the producer.

Another very common or frequent reason for the failure of the beginner to "put over" his or her story, is that although it may contain a very good idea, he or she will not take the time to carefully work it out so that all of the loose ends may be eliminated and a rounded-out plot be the result. There was a time when picture companies paid for mere "ideas," although they did not pay very much. Now, they want the stories submitted to them in a more perfected form. In other words, they want the idea and the vehicle to carry it. Of course, that is one of the reasons why they are paying more money for them. The other reason is that good stories are very, very hard to get.

H. Tipton Steck is writing continuities for Pauline Frederick.

Philip, or "Captain," Hubbard is reported to be with Robertson-Cole now.

I am told that L. V. Jefferson has been engaged by a new concern in the Union League building to write continuities for the stories of Gene Stratton Porter, which they will shortly produce.

AT VITAGRAPH

Albert E. Smith has returned to the studio from his ranch at Escondido.

Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester have been in Whittier this week making scenes for "The Son of Wallingford," which the Chesters are directing as a Vitagraph special.

Antonio Moreno has returned from a motor trip through California and Arizona and will soon start a new feature which Chester Bennett will direct.

Earle Williams has departed for a motor trip of the Yosemite valley before starting his next Vitagraph production.

Director David Smith is preparing to start a James Oliver Curwood story, likely "Flower of the North," as a special production.

TOM SANTSCHI RENEWS CONTRACT

Cyrus J. Williams has signed Tom Santschi for another series of eight western pictures which are to be released by the Pathe organization.

PATHE PRODUCER RETURNS

Cyrus J. Williams has returned to Los Angeles after a brief business trip to New York where he held conferences with Arthur S. Kane of Associated Exhibitors and President Paul Brunet of Pathe, for whom he is producing two series of pictures, the Tom Santschi westerns and "Adventures of Bill and Bob."

Charles Stallings is the owner of a sixty-acre vineyard of raisin grapes at Fresno.

THE CINEMA COMPOSERS CLUB AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY CO-OPERATES WITH CHESTER PRODUCTIONS, INC.

The C. L. Chester Comedy Company is co-operating with the Script Committeea of the Cinema Composers at Columbia University. The Chester Company desires lively and entertaining comedies, and in the selection of material will give every consideration to any script bearing the stamp of approval of the Committee on Scripts.

The Committee on Scripts has been organized by the Cinema Composers as a clearing house for the original compositions of its members. Each script received is read carefully, and if approved by the Committee is sent to the producing company to whose needs it is best suited. In order to receive the stamp of the Committee, a script must measure up to the standards set by the University.

THE PICTURE MAN'S LATEST HAUNT

The picture colony has discovered a new haunt which it appears to be rushing loyally. It is the Oriental Coffee House, located on Fourth street, and owned by Mr. Manos. We readily understand the attraction which this exotically canopied, incensed and rose-lighted playground holds forth to our friends and comrades, since we find ourselves dropping around now and again to revel in the informal music and always hospitable atmosphere which marks Mr. Manos' enterprise. There we observed in person and in the jolly little guest book the faces and names of filmdom's greatest and best loved. One glance about the congenial rooms tells the tale. Truly, sincere cordiality, a characteristic of this lovely bit of the eastern world, is an art in itself. It is obvious that screenland appreciates it.

To Ye Editor of the Camera!

Greetings!

It is not often that we feel inclined to write a letter of acknowledgement for service that we have paid for in hard cash to any advertising medium, feeling that the exchange of our money entitles us to the normal average service offered by the normal average publication, but as we go over our mail each morning and as we check up the number of personal interviews each evening that have all been derived from our few short advertisements in your columns, we feel inspired to step out of our way, drop the cold-blooded standard of dollars and cents and thank you for that excess of service over the purely normal average which you seem to be able to give us. We can only say that the returns so far from the ads in your recent issues have been phenomenal; and, better than that, we notice that they are increasing in proportion each week, proving beyond a doubt that your magazine is not only read widely by the profession and all who are interested in it, but that your readers evidently have confidence in you and in your publication. More power to you. Would that there were more legitimate vehicles like yours. You have certainly set a standard and we take pleasure in announcing this fact to whomsoever might be in search of a vehicle that will bring them results for the money spent.

However, we can forego the right to express a hope that you will not take advantage of our enthusiasm and increase your rate for advertising to a point where you would sink to the "average normal," but sincerely trust that you will be content to continue on your way giving the best service possible for the least cost to the advertiser. As long as you continue to do this you may be assured of our patronage and we believe also the patronage of every discriminating advertiser.

Sincerely yours,
KINEMA BUREAU,
(Signed) Seymour Hastings.

BEFORE THEY WENT INTO PICTURES

Wallace Fox spent three years in U. S. Diplomatic Service with Ambassador Henry Morganthau at Constantinople.

Charles Huber owned and operated three motion picture theatres in Saint Louis from 1910 to 1912.

Herbert Sutch was for fifteen years an actor in stock, repertoire and road shows.

Joe McDonough was advance agent for musical shows.

William Ginley was a stock and road show actor.

James Whipple has been an acrobatic juggler, as well as a cowboy in the Argentine, and was interested in a banana plantation in Jamaica, also sugar plantations in Central America and Cuba.

Irving Luddy managed the Flatbush Theater.

Elliott Howe started as a mining engineer and later joined the 101 Ranch.

Roy H. Marshall managed the Pacific Coast Hotels System.

George Webster acted as purchasing agent for a system of chain stores at Melbourne, Australia, and has also sailed The Seven Seas.

Bryant Washburn is soon to tour the principal cities and appear personally at theatres showing his new production, "The Road to London."

NEW LABORATORIES FOR ROACH PRODUCTIONS

A permanent organization was effected at a recent meeting of the stockholders of the proposed $50,000 laboratories of the Hal E. Roach Studios, when the following officers were elected: T. J. Crizer, Manager; Walter Lundin, Assistant Manager, and Charles Parrott, Treasurer. The organization, which will be known as the Studio Film Laboratories, has for its object the developing, printing and handling of all films of the Hal E. Roach Productions.

Incorporation papers will be sent to Sacramento presently.

Alberta Lee is with Fox.

Melbourne McDowell has just finished an important part with Realart.

Milla Davenport is playing Gretchen in "Rip Van Winkle."

Max Asher is playing the innkeeper in "Rip Van Winkle."

Robert Stephoff, after four months' illness, is back in pictures.

Jo Butterworth is working with Bert Lytell at Metro.

Hal E. Roach has returned from San Francisco where he has been on important business.

Mary Forbes, one of England's stage stars, has a prominent role in John M. Stahl's "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

E. D. Horkheimer, late general manager of the Balboa Studios, has taken charge of the casting for the Classic Agency.

"Making the Grade" has been selected as the title for David Buller's first starring vehicle under his new Lesser contract.

"Lavender and Old Lace," the Renco production which was directed by Lloyd Ingraham, is about to be released.

Tom Gibson, who directs Morante Comedies, has moved down to his cottage at Hermosa Beach for the summer.

Henry King is preparing to make a three-weeks' trip to New York on a combined business and pleasure mission.

Alexander V. Bodo, director for the Italian-American Film Co., has gone south to find Spanish locations for his next production.

Artie Glass of the Classic Agency has installed a special department to handle theatrical and vaudeville acts. Gladys Lamphere and Hawkheimer will take charge.

The John Emerson-Anita Loos story, "Beauty or Brains," on which Constance Talmadge is now at work, has been definitely re-titled "Woman's Place."

Director Erle Kenton, who was especially engaged to direct "Money Flies," the Warner Brothers' initial production for Educational, severed his connection with those producers at the completion of the picture.

F. W. Eldridge, Managing Editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, was the guest and principal speaker at the last bi-monthly meeting and banquet of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers, where he gave a talk on "Publicity; What It Means To a Newspaper."

Can You Answer This Call For

New Photoplay Writers?

This Test Will Tell You

THE new career of screen-authorship is open to men and women of creative imagination and dramatic insight.

A search for new writers of photoplays—novices of genuine ability who can learn the art—is being made by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation and is being sponsored by Cecil B. De Mille, Thos. H. Ince and other prominent producers who realize the danger of a serious shortage of acceptable screen stories unless more men and women of genuine ability are trained for this lucrative work.

The producers further believe that many apt men and women could be induced to take up the study of photoplay writing if they could be given some advance assurance that they really possess the natural qualifications for eventual success.

Therefore, a novel test of the two essentials—creative imagination and dramatic insight—has been devised in the form of a questionnaire similar to the vocational tests employed by the U. S. Government during the late war.

This questionnaire was prepared especially for thi purpose by Professor Malcolm Shaw MacLean, former instructor in short story writing at Northwestern University, and Mr. H. H. Van Loan, one of America's leading photoplaywrights. The test is designed to bring out indications of natural ability, if the applicant possesses it, thus enabling the Palmer Photoplay Corporation to select for training, only those whose possibilities of success are promising.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is a national educational institution established in Los Angeles, which teaches the technical construction of photoplays by scientific home-study methods, thus making a lucrative vocation available to talented persons wherever they may live.

The adoption of the vocational selection plan by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation is one of the most forward steps ever taken by an educational institution, the Palmer institution being the first correspondence school, so far as is known, to restrict enrollment only to those who first evidence their fitness for the work.

The questionnaire will be sent to all who will apply to the and altogether innocent to live in this century, merely increases the fanciful note which runs through the entire story.

Mabel Bert is unusually well cast as Aunt Mehitabel, a gentle but firm believer in the glory of her long departed relatives and the ouija board. She makes the role very delightful.

George Parsons also adds enjoyment to the yarn as "Loot" Follett, a thief who struck us as being admirably harmless.

Henry Sedley enacts Jonathan Squoggs, the really "dirty villain." It goes without saying that he it is who holds the mortgage.

Van Dyke Brooks and Emily Fitzroy do minor parts.

Robert Vignola handled the direction.

"THE FAITH HEALER"

Grauman's Rialto

"The Faith Healer," which as its title indicates, is another film treatment of the spiritual cure of physical ills, has opened here for an indefinite run. While this George Melford production cannot be said to compare with "The Miracle Man" from any point of view, it forms very good entertainment and on account of the present popularity of its subject, will without question draw well. It is an adaptation of the William Vaughn Moody original.

The photography is average.

Milton Sills is seen in the title role which he makes more pleasing than usual. Certainly, tramping along the open road, carrying joy and health in his faith and Bible, he is picturesque.

Ann Forrest plays Rhoda Williams, another "fallen sister," whom the humble preacher saves. She is particularly good in this sort of a role.

Adolph Menjou's opposition as Dr. Littlefield, the roue heavy, is very clever. We will be interested to see more of his work. He is comparatively new in these parts, we believe.

Fontaine La Rue is well cast and plays to everyone's satisfaction, the part of Mary Beeler, the Faith Healer's big demonstration.

Frederick Vroom, Loyola O'Connor and little May Giraci all provide an interesting family background for the invalid as her husband, sister-in-law and daughter.

Edward Vroom, Robert Brower and Winifred Greenwood complete the cast of this Paramount picture.

"STRAIGHT FROM PARIS"

Miller's

A drama which is not too heavy to be calmly entertaining and still not light enough to allow the attention to wander, is the current Harry Garson release starring Clara Kimball Young which is entitled "Straight from Paris." Indeed, Sada Cowan's story of Lucette, the little milliner, is exactly what we would label a charming afternoon's diversion.

Technically the production is good.

The cast is excellent.

Miss Young is rather well placed as Lucette, whose smart hat shop supports herself and her one-time aristocratic French grandfather. The star's followers will be sure to enjoy this, her latest work.

We know of no one who could play Robert Van Austen, the very naughty but if not almost lovable, still quite understandable young heavy, more beautifully than does Bertram Grassby. Robert is Lucette's fiance, for a space. It has been some time since Grassby has been seen in a juvenile but as usual he delivers the goods.

Thomas Jefferson gets both a tear and a laugh with his characterization of Henri Trevel, Lucette's affectionate old grand father, whose sincere grief over the death of his wife he attempts regularly to drown in alcohol.

William P. Carleton as Robert's uncle, John Van Austen, entirely satisfies both the audience and Lucette when he steps into the younger man's romantic place and "marries her instead."

Betty Franciso's opposition as Doris, Robert's original "sweetie," is excellent. She forms a striking contrast to the star. Happily her clear-cut personality photographs.

Clarissa Selwynne handles Ada Van Austen, Robert's impossibly autocratic mother, capably.

Girard Alexander as Mr. Stevenson, an other society snob, completes the cast.

Harry Garson directed "Straight from Paris" personally.

"NOT GUILTY"

Ambassador

First National releases the Sidney A. Franklin screen production of Harold MacGrath's "Parrot & Co." this week under the title, "Not Guilty." Although the picture's introductory subtitle states that it features Sylvia Breamer, the story deals primarily with a man and his brother. The feminine lead merely supports. The plot centers around the voluntary mixed identity of the brothers that one may assume the crime of the other. It is a well handled production with considerable story value.

It is marked by exquisite scenery and some beautifully cut-in stock scenes of the Ganges River.

The photography varies. Some of the soft focus utilized in the close ups misses.

Richard Dix does some exceptionally clever performing in the roles of Paul and Arthur Ellison. One is sympathetic and the other heavy. The picture belongs almost bodily to this stage recruit.

Miss Breamer also does good work as Elsa Chetwood, a daughter of wealth, who, through a mistake, becomes engaged to the wrong Ellison. Her intense eagerness does much to make her parts always attractive.

Molly Malone quite fills the bill as Margy Ellison, the fluffy little ingenue.

Herbert Prior and Lloyd Whitlock combine forces to form the opposition, which immediately leads up to the climax. They do Newell Craig and Frank Mallows, gamblers.

Elinor Hancock and Alberta Lee complete the cast as Mrs. Ellison and the chaperon.

Franklin personally directed the production.

George Beban is still traveling in connection with his picture, "One Man in a Million," and has just recently visited Winnipeg.

Charles Huber, when doubling for Miss Gerrard of the J. D. Hampton Company in Yosemite, narrowly escaped going over Vernal Falls in a canoe.

Having completed some special work at the Louis B. Mayer studio, Nat C. Deverich has journeyed northward to Harry Leon Wilson's estate near Del Monte where he will be the guest of the author for several weeks.

George Randolph Chester, author-director of the "Get Rich Quick Wallingford" story, now in production at Vitagraph Studio, selected George Webb to portray the internationally known character of "Blackie Daw." There were forty-one actors considered for the part.

Detrimental Publicity

One of the most spectacular publicity feats of the month is being accomplished in conjunction with the ten-day jailing of Bebe Daniels at Santa Ana as the penalty for driving her motor car fifty miles an hour in Orange County. It was to be expected that the imprisonment of a motion picture star in a little town such as this would prove a sensation locally, but scarcely could one have looked for an affair of the sort to be given the prominence which it has received not only in the Los Angeles dailies but nationally as well.

All of this is obviously due to a live wire publicist to whom, although we question the suitability of his present subject, we have necessarily "to take off our hats." He has certainly obtained a miraculous amount of attention from the press! Miss Daniels' elaborate farewell party, her ceremonious departure for and arrival at the jail, her luxuriously appointed cell, her delicious hotel meals and in fact even the Santa Anans' various objections to and endorsements of the remarkable treatment enjoyed by the fair prisoner, have filled many printed columns and been the subjects of dozens of published photographs.

Nor has the actress alone been advertised as a result. The already much-publicized Judge Cox, who passed sentence, and many talkative citizens of the enterprising community in which he holds judicial sway, not to mention a Broadway (Los Angeles) theatre running a Daniels-Realart production, have done their share of "cashing in." Yes it certainly would seem to be another case of many benefiting by the energy of one!

However, although we have conversed with several press agents who are greatly envying the possession by another of such an opportunity to disport publicity talents, we cannot help reflecting upon the inadvisability of it all. Admittedly the whole procedure makes an acceptable story or series of stories for nearly any publication; but what will be their final effect upon the public?

Of course most of us realize that breaking a motor regulation is a comparatively common, far-from-criminal act. The fact that one judge has created for himself a famous reputation for jailing those members of society who are brought before him for thus offending the law in his territory does not make the misdemeanor any greater. There are, nevertheless, all about us souls to whom the idea of imprisonment is at all times, under all conditions, disgraceful. These more conventional people unquestionably compose a great section of the picture going population. Ultimately, the popularity of Miss Daniels or of any other favorite is liable to suffer materially from the broadcast advertising of this distasteful form of punishment.

There is more required of the Perfect P. A. than that he "get his stuff over." He might remember to the great advantage of his client and resultantly his own benefit that a careful selection of topics is particularly imperative in his line.—F. R.

Players' Telephone Exchange

A service which occurs to us as having been much needed by the profession is now available through the establishment of The Players' Telephone Exchange which has recently opened offices in Hollywood.

The function of this exchange is to maintain a phone call "clearing house" between the studios and their various employees in both the artistic and technical departments. For instance, players, cameramen, directors, etc., who may be expecting calls at any hour can, by leaving with the exchange instructions as to their whereabouts, be reached at any time.

On the other hand, information concerning the availability of any one identified with the service may always be had by the studios.

Ruby Hill, long identified with the local picture colony, has accepted the management of the new enterprise, which promises to prove a valuable innovation.

Will Assist Producers

We publish the following letter because we believe that it will assist those producers who desire reliable advice upon prison stories. Mr. Eytinge has repeatedly favored the profession whenever he has come in contact with it. We all appreciate this generous offer:

"A Bright Mornin' to Ye,
Fanchon Royer:

"Rollin Sturgeon made a flying visit here last week—he's finishing Hal Reid's ancient ten-twenty-thirty "Human Hearts" and he wanted to chin-chin with an expert on prison atmosphere, etc.

"His visit of an hour or two may have been entirely profitable—at least he said so—and that brings to mind the possibility that I can help out other directors who would like to have candid, sincere and expert criticism of prison sequences, of the logic of prison scene continuity, of general criminalistic actions and the like.

"Naturally, because of the many courtesies shown my fellow-inmates and myself by picture producers, there would be no charge for this service, or any that I can render. I'm not entirely ignorant on the picture side, having managed our screen program for years, as well as acted as a liason link between management and directors when producers were visiting here taking shots and action.

"So then, if you want to tell your director friends that a chap with twenty years of "inside" experience in three prisons, plus extensive study into the scientific aspects of both criminalistics and penology, is ever willing to assist 'em, why go ahead. They're welcome to call on,

"Yours co-operatingly, "EYTINGE."

Film Capital Production Notes

VICTOR POTEL TO INTERPRET BUTLER CHARACTER

Ellis Parker Butler's Philo Gubb stories, through a deal just negotiated by Garwood and Hungate, agents for the author, will appear on the screen.

Victor Potel will create Philo Gubb.

Webster Cullison will handle the direction, and co-directing with him will be Melville Brown.

The new company, which has acquired the rights to thirty-five of Mr. Butler's Gubb stories, has leased production quarters at the Francis Ford studios.

NEW GERSON PRODUCTION STARTED

The screenings of "Trouble Brewing," the first of the Wm. A. Howell Comedies, has been completed and the cutting and titling will be finished this week. The Gerson Company is releasing a comedy a month for the National Exchanges, Inc.

Director Tenny Wright has started work on "Brok'n Idle," the second of the William A. Howell Comedies.

KATHERINE MacDONALD TO PRODUCE TWELVE FEATURES

Katherine MacDonald, who has again signed with the Attractions Distributing Corporation, has begun shooting her eleventh Associated First National release, which is to be the first of the twelve features under her new agreement. By the terms of the contract Miss MacDonald is to make twelve pictures in the ensuing two years and is to receive approximately $50,000 per picture for her work.

PRODUCING RIX STORY

Helen Holmes, Jack Connolley and Leonard Clapham are among the players in the cast of "The Ghost City," now filming at the Spencer Productions studio, Los Angeles.

Thet picture is a five-reeler, and was taken from the story by George Rix, author of "The Torrent," and is being directed by William Bertram. The production will be sold through C. O'D. Blanchfield, Superba Theatre Bldg.

AT GOLDWYN

Will Rogers' next picture, "The Poor Relation," a stage play by Edward Kidder, will soon go into production under the direction of Clarence Badger.

Director Frank Lloyd and company will return this week from Big Bear, Calif., where they have been filming exteriors for "The Grim Comedian."

Wallace Worsley and the cast of "Ace of Hearts" have returned to the studio after locationing at Pine Crest, Calif.

Several stories are being prepared by the scenario department for future production. Charles Kenyon, the playwright, is making the screen adaptation of Hall Caine's "The Christian." Arthur F. Statter has just finished the continuity for an original screen story by Leroy Scott, tentatively called "The Mother." Rupert Hughes is writing the continuity for his own story, "From the Ground Up," which will be a starring vehicle for Tom Moore. Gouverneur Morris is writing another original Chinese fantasy, as yet unnamed, and Lambert Hillyer, former director for William S. Hart, has about finished the continuity for "The Man from Lost River," an original story by Katherine Newlin Burt.

Jack H. Richardson has returned to Mack Sennett to play character heavies.

OLD CLASSIC UNDER PRODUCTION

The production of "Rip Van Winkle" is well under way under the direction of Ward Lascelle with Thomas Jefferson in the title role. The camera work is in the hands of David Abel and George Larsen, and Edward Luddy is handling the technical end and co-directing with Mr. Lascelle.

AT METRO

Organization of the new Bayard Veiller producing unit is being rushed. As soon as the necessary preparations are completed, the title of Mr. Veiller's first picture under the new programme will be announced. It is probable that one of his stage productions will be prepared for the screen.

"The Last Card" is the title selected by Metro for May Allison's latest starring picture, which is a screen version of Maxwell Smith's Saturday Evening Post story, "Dated."

Dallas Fitzgerald will head the new producing unit that will film Viola Dana's forthcoming features. He will begin preparations for the first of her new pictures immediately.

June Mathis has undertaken the task of supplying two complete producing units with screen stories for special productions. She will serve as scenarist for the Maxwell Karger productions as well as those of Rex Ingram.

Madame Nazimova has completed her work in the production of "Camille." The Russian star will take a short vacation and then will personally supervise the cutting of the picture.

AT THE INCE STUDIO

Bradley King, of the scenario staff, who wrote the continuity for "Lying Lips," started working this week upon the continuity for another special, the filming of which will probably be undertaken within the next month.

Edward Martindel and Vernon Dent have been added to the cast of Thomas H. Ince's latest special for the Associated Producers, tentatively titled "Hail the Woman," which entered production this week under the direction of John Griffith Wray. Both the original story and continuity are by C. Gardner Sullivan.

"Bellboy 13," which Douglas MacLean recently completed under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince, is scheduled for an early release.

"Mother o' Mine," which was filmed and previously announced under the title of "Mother," has been selected as the release title of the special production recently made. The forthcoming drama is from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan and will be presented by an all star cast.

AT UNIVERSAL

Eddie Polo will begin work immediately on a series of two-reel western photodramas in which he will revive his characterization of "Cyclone Smith." Jacques Jaccard will direct.

Norman Dawn is working on the concluding scenes for "My Lady of the Island," Edith Roberts' next starring vehicle.

Ward Hayes is filming "Taxi Tangles," a one-reel comedy, featuring Billy Bletcher.

Hoot Gibson is making another fast two-reeler. It is called "Too Tired Jones." Lee Kohlmar is directing.

Edward Laemmle and his company, producing "Rim of the Desert," a dramatic short reel western, are on location on the California desert.

Art Acord is working on the middle episodes for "The White Horseman," the serial which Albert Russell is directing.

Fred LeRoy Granville is preparing to begin work on "The Shark Master," an original story in which Frank Mayo will play the starring role. The scenario was written by Granville from his own experiences in the South Seas.

Current Reviews

"LESSONS IN LOVE"

Ambassador

Joseph Schenck presents Constance Talmadge in her newest farce entitled "Lessons in Love" this week. It is a typically breezy vehicle for the "younger Talmadge" and compares favorably with her recent attempts, in entertainment value. It is embellished with the luxurious sets, faddy clothes and clever subtitles that one is sure to find in this star's pictures, elements which, by the way, greatly increase their attraction.

Photographically the production more than satisfies.

Constance herself is customarily delightful as Leila Calthorpe, a short skirted, somewhat flirtatious flapper who, being properly poor, must either "marry or get a job." In some respects she accomplishes both, since she certainly finds herself occupied with the intrigue which she throws about herself and her prospective life partner, and the rest follows jauntily as her stories are wont to do.

Kenneth Harlan grows more and more enjoyable in this type of work. Certainly he is fascinating as the reluctant bridegroom from Santa Ana, and the confused mental condition of his role renders it at the same time highly amusing.

Flora Finch gives us a few of her incomparable comedy scenes as Aunt Agatha, a "bachelor girl with a secret romance." Her reappearance will undoubtedly provide the pioneer fans with a huge kick.

Jimmie Harrison as Liela's college cousin complicates things with a truly clever farce performance. His work with Harlan is particularly worthy of mention.

A Constance Talmadge or Dorothy Gish picture is never quite complete without George Faucett, whose expressive face and figure are seen herein as the Calthorpe family attorney. His personality is unexcelled.

Fred Webster plays a minor part well.

Chet Withey directed the picture for First National.

"DUCKS AND DRAKES"

Clune's Broadway

One of the most delightful Realart farces that we have witnessed is "Ducks and Drakes," Bebe Daniels' current release. Surely it is the most enjoyable little story in which this star has appeared. Goodness knows, it is risque enough, but at no time does it offend, and its spicier touches are delicately handled and ideally placed.

The picture's camera work is standard.

Miss Daniels has probably never been better placed than she is as Teddy Simpson, the precocious little fledgling who does things "because she shouldn't." The heedless manner in which she rushes into ridiculous situations and the way she "manages" her fussy aunt, are screamingly funny. Through all her modern sophistication and indiscreet flirtations she impresses one as merely adventuring youth in its blissful inexperience.

Jack Holt as Teddy's broad minded fiance could not be improved upon. He controls several of the sequences with the delicate shading of his work.

Mayme Kelso is also exceptionally well cast in the role of Aunty Weeks, the conventional, continually shocked, kinswoman of the upsetting Teddy.

Edward Martindel as the "gay old Gander," W. E. Lawrence as the "literary" anarchist, and Wade Boteler as the sea-faring ex-convict, could scarcely have been better chosen. They are all capital foils for the fair Miss Simpson who employs, to become acquainted with each, methods that are more unique than seemly.

Maurian Newell and Elsie Andrean each have a few scenes with the star as the chums of her character.

AL EDMUNDSON

Who is Enacting a Principal Role in Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives"

"THE FREEZE OUT"

Superba

The Universal-Harry Carey feature which may be seen here this week is much more entertaining than this star's last two or three offerings have been. It is an original (another Western) by George Hull, and while the regular old "hokum," blood, thunder and bluff of the much storied cowboy land are all contained in the scenario, they are rather thrillingly presented and Carey's followers will appreciate the picture. Several inconsistencies, such as a seemingly teacherless schoolhouse, and the distasteful horsewhipping of a man by a presumably refined young lady as punishment for a wrong (a slight wrong, by the way), for which the audience knows he has not been responsible, are overcome mostly by the star's conception and interpretation.

In the role of Ohio, the equal-to-anything hero, Carey is typically cast. His work is always alive and very human.

Helen Ferguson unfortunately plays a part which fails to gain for her any of the picture's sympathy. We know of very few actresses who could have done anything whatsoever with Zoe Whipple, the disagreeable, almost irrational, but "very good" little store-keeper and self-appointed missionary to the world in general.

Charles Le Moyne accomplishes convincingly Denver Red, another of his bold saloon owners, and J. Farrell MacDonald does some excellent drunk sequences as Bobtail McGuire.

Joe Harris and Lydia Yeamans Titus complete the cast.

"DON'T NEGLECT YOUR WIFE"

California

The Eminent Authors' production of Gertrude Atherton's "Don't Neglect Your Wife" is novel in that although it treats a modern matrimonial problem, it sets that problem in the period just after the Civil War, and saturates it with all the narrow prejudices of that day. In places the story affected us as being a little far fetched, but it may be that we lack the necessary temperament to appreciate a woman's becoming a drunkard that she may share the experience of her distant lover. Taken altogether the picture is probably more interesting than entertaining. Surely it is overly heavy.

Technically "Don't Neglect Your Wife" is perfectly satisfactory.

Mabel Julienne Scott appears in the leading feminine role, Madeline Talbot. She is very well cast as the neglected wife who turns, in spite of herself and her stringently conventional surroundings, to the man whom she loves. She makes the role as understandable as it could be, considering some of its action.

Lewis S. Stone plays Langdon Masters, the brilliant San Francisco editor who finds Madeline more companionable than does her husband. We have seen Mr. Stone in various types of plays and in many roles, and have usually delighted in his work. In this picture, however, several of his sequences seem insincere. Others are accomplished according to his customary form.

Charles Clary does the rather small but important part of Dr. Howard Talbot, Madeline's husband, a man typical of the day. As the domineering, not-even-to-be-questioned head of his household, he is more than convincing.

Kate Lester and R. D. MacLean are good types to do Mr. and Mrs. Hunt MacLane, while Josephine Crowell as Mrs. Abbott, the society gossip and snob, and Arthur Hoyt, as her nephew, an equally detestable mischief maker, are excellent.

Darrell Foss has a few satisfactory scenes as Holt, Master's friend and brother journalist.

Norma Gordon and Richard Tucker complete the cast.

The picture was directed and supervised by Wallace Worsley for Goldwyn.

"THE WITCHING HOUR"

Grauman's

Lasky's screen visualization of Augustus Thomas' stage play, "The Witching Hour," scenarized by Julia Crawford Ivers, is released locally this week. As will be remembered of the original, the theme has to do with mental suggestion and its power over those who believe. It makes a good cinema vehicle despite the fact that it ropes in an unusual number of plot complications and has to its credit three or four climaxes which detract from the interest value of each other.

The direction and photography leave little to be desired.

Elliott Dexter handles Jack Brookfield, a gambler who is rescued from his profession by an accident and its following higher train of thought, quite interestingly. His former fans will probably be pleased to witness his performance.

Winter Hall offers another of his beautifully human pieces of work in the role of Judge Prentice of the Supreme Court. He provides his character with a well balanced combination of unswerving honor and

Where to Find People You Know

MACK SWAIN SIGNS WITH CHARLIE CHAPLIN

Charlie Chaplin has just made an important addition to his company by securing the services for a long period of Mack Swain. A contract has been signed between the comedian and Swain whereby the latter becomes permanently identified with Chaplin and in the future he will be an important foil for Charlie. Swain will make his initial appearance on the screen as a member of the Chaplin company in the production of "Vanity Fair," which is now being filmed.

YOST GIVEN SPECIAL FOR EXPLOITATION

Robert M. Yost, chief of publicity of the Fox West Coast Studios, who recently returned from the East where he directed the eastern premiere of "A Connecticut Yankee" at the Selwyn Theater, New York City, has been transferred to the management and exploitation of "Over the Hill" and "The Queen of Sheba" for the western states. Mr. Yost will supervise and control all showings and road tours of the two Fox specials in the coast territory. He will be succeeded at the studios by John D. Hill, who was for many years identified with eastern circuses in a publicity capacity.

EQUITY HEAD HERE

Fred Gilmore, President of the Actors' Equity of New York, is in Los Angeles and will address the profession Saturday evening at the Ambassador Hotel upon the meaning of Equity, after which a reception will be held for the organization's chief.

Geraldine Karma is with the Gerson Productions of San Francisco.

Mary Forbes plays an important part in John Stahl's "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

Frank Norcross last week played a part for Cecil de Mille at Lasky's.

William A. Howell, who is starring in the "Howell Comedies," has started work on "Brok'n Idle," the second of these comedies.

Arthur H. Stuart is at present with Nate Gatzer in his initial comedy drama production at the Arthur H. Gooden studios.

Al. E .Davis has been engaged by Webster Cullison to serve as studio manager for Clever Comedies, whose production quarters are at the Francis Ford studios.

Alice Terry, who enacted the leading feminine role in Metro's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," will also appear in the next production to be screened under the direction of Rex Ingram.

Irving Martin, formerly in charge of the art and title department at the Ince studios, will act as technical, title and art director for a series of two-reel comedies being made by Clever Comedies.

Isabel Wilford, who recently played several leads for the Apache Trail Productions, recently returned to the stage for a week in the Vagabond Players' production of "Mrs. Dane's Defense" at Egan's Theater.

Writing screen continuity for Ellis Parker Butler's series of thirty-five magazine stories is the task that has been assigned to Everett C. Maxwell, who was reecntly signed by Webster Cullison, general manager of Clever Comedies.

AUTHORESS JOINS FILM COLONY

Alice Duer Miller has joined the group of authors now at work at the Goldwyn Studios, among whom are Gertrude Atherton, Rupert Hughes, Leroy Scott, Gouverneur Morris, Rita Weiman and Anzia Yezierska. Her first photoplay will be an adaptation of her story, "The Woman Who Hated Politics."

SCENARIST SUPERVISING "RIP VAN WINKLE"

H. Thompson Rich, who supervised the screening of the two Irving Bacheller novels, "The Light in the Clearing" and "Keeping Up With Lizzie," is now acting in a similar capacity with Ward Lascelle, who is producing for release through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation the Joseph Jefferson version of "Rip Van Winkle." Thomas Jefferson, son of "Joe," will play the part of Rip.

REW SALES MANAGER FOR R-C.

Frank B. Rogers, until recently sales manager for J. Stuart Blackton Productions, has been appointed traveling sales manager for Robertson-Cole, and has assumed his new duties. He will be constantly in the field for Robertson-Cole, representing its sales organization in various parts of the country.

GODSOL IN LOS ANGELES

F. J. Godsol, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, has arrived in Los Angeles, to confer with Abraham Lehr, Vice-President, in charge of production for Goldwyn.

Lewis Willoughby has sailed for England.

Ruth Handforth will play with Victor Potel in the Philo Gubb comedies.

William Fox has engaged Thomas S. Nash as new general manager for his New York studios.

Freddie Dragmund has been working with Anita Stewart in "The Price of Happiness" at the Louis B. Mayer studio.

Victor Potel, playing the name part in the Philo Gubb comedies, will be aided by Dorothea Wolbert and Otis Harlan.

Ruth Toyce is cast in the new series of Mounted Police stories being produced at Universal under the direction of Edward Kull.

Seena Owen has been cast to play opposite Matt Moore in Fannie Hurst's new story, "Back Pay," which is being directed by Frank Borzage in New York.

Harold Miller has been engaged to support Gladys Walton in her next story, "What Can You Expect?" under the direction of Harry B. Harris.

Jack Guerin, photographic chemist, has been placed in charge of the Universal City laboratory. Guerin has appointed C. H. Hunter as his assistant.

Barbara Bedford has started work in the leading feminine role in "The Face of the World" under the personal direction of Irvin V. Willat. Edward Hearn is playing the leading male role opposite Miss Bedford.

Leslie Goodwins has signed to play an important part in "The Adventures of Tarzan," the latest Tarzan story, which is being filmed under the direction of Robert F. Hill for the Century Film Corporation.

Assisting Director R. A. Walsh with his first independent production for release by Associated First National are: James T. Marcus and J. T. O'Donohoe, assistant directors; George Peters, chief cameraman; Billy Shea, film editor, and W. J. Menzies, technical director.

Pickups By the Staff

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS' NOTES

The Assistant Directors' Association, owing to persistent rumors, wishes to announce that it has not, and has no intention of affiliating with any other organization whatever.

J. P. McGowan and his assistant, Joe McDonough, will finish the production of "Nolan's Nerve," a five reel railroad story, for Herald Productions on the 21st.

Harry Burns' first Joe Martin picture will be released in New York this week. "The Monkey Hero" is the first of any of Joe's pictures to be released on the Jewel Program.

Pete Gerald has been given the deed to a 100x165 lot at Elsinore, wherehe will build a summer home after "The Unfoldment" is finished.

Director Elliott Howe is on the fourth week of Zane Grey's story, "The Mysterious Rider."

Henry Tenbrooke started with Director Reggie Morris on April 4th, making two reel comedies at the Warner Brothers' studio.

William Fox has returned to the Mark Sennett Studio.

James Whipple reports that Director Young will complete "Without Benefit of Clergy," a Brunton production, on the 20th.

Director Howard Mitchell and Assistant Hollingshead have just returned from Craig's Country Club, Calabasas, where they have been shooting some of the scenes in "The Pearl of Savoy."

FIRST NATIONAL ACQUIRES "CAMERON OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED"

Associated First National announces that the distribution rights for Ralph Connor's "Cameron of the Royal Mounted" have been purchased from Ernest Shipman. This production was directed by Henry McRae and was produced by the Winnipeg Productions, Inc., on the actual locale of the story, in the Canadian Rockies.

McRae was not only assisted by the author in filming the Northwest story, but had the co-operation of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police in securing accurate detail. A number of the R. N. W. M. P. appear in the production. The title role was played by Gaston Glass.

"Cameron of the Royal Mounted" will follow the previous Ralph Connor story, "The Foreigner," on the releasing schedule.

NEW WILLAT STUDIO READY FOR OCCUPANCY

The new Willat studio at Culver City, which was designed and constructed by Harold G. Oliver, has been completed and will be ready for occupancy in a few days. The administration building proper is fronted with a lake and faces on Washington Blvd. Work is expected to start within the next week on the construction of the first glass unit and stages.

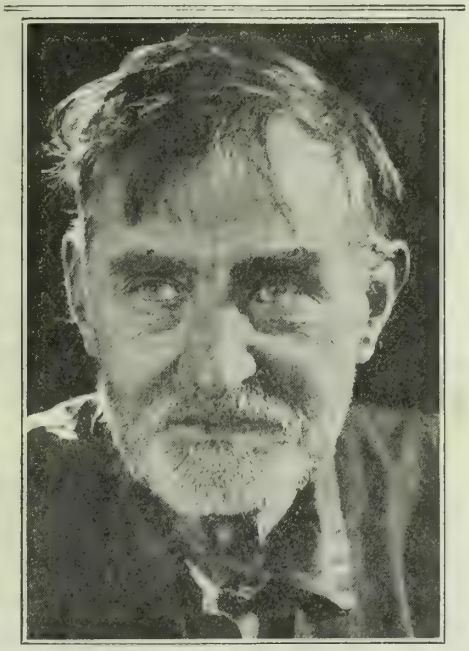
HARMONY PRODUCTION PRE-VIEWED

The Harmony Film Company recently had the first showing of its picture, "Judge Her Not," at the California Theatre, Venice. A large crowd of film notables turned out to give the picture a send off. Jack Livingston plays the feature role, and Pauline Curley the leading feminine role in the picture. General consensus of opinion is that the picture will meet with success in New York where it is being taken by Mr. P. F. Magenheier and George E. Hall. Immediately upon the return of these two producers work will start at once on a series of contract pictures.

ROUMANIAN QUEEN TO PRODUCE PICTURES AT WEBER STUDIO

The Lois Weber Studios announce that Queen Marie of Roumania is coming to Los Angeles next fall, and that negotiations are in progress regarding the filming of the Queen's books and plays.

The Queen will probably take part in the prologue which Lois Weber is writing for the first picture she will produce.



FRED TURNER

Who Has Just Returned from Porto Rico Where He Filled an Engagement With an Island Company

DON HIX STARTS NEW PUBLICITY SERVICE

Don Hix, who for the past year has been personal publicity director for the Willat Productions, Inc., has organized a personal publicity service with offices in the Baker-Detwiler Bldg. Associated with him in this venture is Miss Veda Dunn, who was formerly connected with the West Coast office of the Exhibitors Trade Review. Mr. Hix is at present director of publicity campaigns for the Willat Productions, Inc.; Ward Lascelle Productions, and the George Bunny comedies. "Press Copy," his weekly news bulletin, is in its seventh issue, and a department for the planning and illustrating of press books for independent producing organizations has been provided.

LAWLOR BUSY ON TITLES

Hoey Lawlor has just completed an illustrated set of titles for "Vic" Fleming's "Red Hot Romance," originally called "Wife Insurance," an Emerson-Loos production, and has also made the double-animated main title, showing a bust of Von Stroheim, for Stroheim's "Foolish Wives." He is now engaged in writing a four-series article on technical motion picture directing for the Moving Picture World.

Mary MacLaren has recently returned from New York, where she has been working in Cosmopolitan Productions.

When "Without Benefit of Clergy" is completed the first print will be shipped to England so that Mr. Kipling may be present for the initial preview.

PROBABLE APPEARANCE OF EDMUND LOWE IN PROLOGUE OF "MADONNAS AND MEN"

Edmund Lowe, for many months leading man at the Morosco Theatre, may once again make a stage appearance in Los Angeles, for efforts are being made by T. W. Chatburn to have the juvenile come West from New York to appear in the prologue of "Madonnas and Men" when it is given its premiere at the Garrick Theatre early in May.

Lowe plays the principal masculine role in this feature and a special prologue is being arranged for its L. A. presentation.

NOVELIST TO WRITE ORIGINALS FOR SCREEN

Mark Lee Luther, the novelist, who has just arrived in Los Angeles, intends to devote his time to original stories for picture requirements. Mr. Luther was staff correspondent for a number of years on the Saturday Evening Post, Editor of Who's Who in America, Editor of the Smart Set, and the author of many successful novels.

Two of his books have already been filmed, i. e., "The Hope Chest," a Griffith production with Dorothy Gish, and "The Crucible," with Marguerite Clark.

F. N. ATHLETIC CLUB IN NEW YORK HOLDS ANNUAL DANCE

One hundred and fifty executives and members of the home office staff of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., attended the second annual dinner dance of the Associated First National Athletic Club at the McAlpin Hotel in New York on the evening of April 6th.

The affair was attended by Norma and Constance Talmadge, Lionel Barrymore, Hope Hampton, Marguerite Clark and many other screen luminaries whose pictures are released by Associated First National.

LINDER TO ENTERTAIN PRINCE ALBERT

Prince Albert of Monaco, who sails for the States soon, is expected to visit Max Linder at his Los Angeles studio. The Prince is coming here to receive the Alexander Agassiz gold medal in recognition of his scientific marine researches. This will be his fourth visit, the last having been in 1913.

KENYON WRITES ANOTHER FOR IRENE RICH

Charles Kenyon, who write "Kindling," and whose photodrama, "The Invisible Power," has just been completed at the Goldwyn studios with Irene Rich in the leading role, is now writing another play for Miss Rich.

NEW BUILDING FOR CHRISTIE STUDIO

Work is going ahead on the cement bases of a new roofed stage which will be an addition to Christie's comedy-making establishment. The plant already includes one large completely enclosed stage in addition to the open stages which accommodate sets enough for four companies.

Robertson-Cole announces for early release a Mae Marsh production, "Nobody's Kid," based on the novel, "Mary Cary," which was originally published by Harper's.

Harry Carey has finished his last special attraction and will shortly begin work on his first Universal-Jewel feature, which will probably be an original by Peter B. Kyne.

Within a few days Priscilla Dean and a large company under the guidance of Stuart Paton, will leave for the lumber camps of Oregon, to remain about six weeks. The object of the trip is to secure some scenes for "Conflict," the story of the North Woods by Clarence Budding Kelland, now running serially in the Red Book Magazine, which will be Miss Dean's next feature.

Gladys Walton has started work on her sixth stellar role. Her latest feature is "What Can You Expect?" an interesting study of the growing generation from a recent Saturday Evening Post story by Alice L. Tildesley. Harry B. Harris will wield the megaphone.

Work is well under way on "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story which Tod Browning is filming as a feature.

AT LASKY'S

William D. Taylor has completed the Henry Arthur Jones picture adapted by Julia Crawford Ivers from the English dramatist's play, "The Lifted Veil," starring Ethel Clayton. Miss Clayton is expected to start a new production in a few weeks.

Cecil B. DeMille is well under way in his new production which was adapted from a story by Leonard Merrick.

According to present plans, Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle will start a new picture under James Cruze' direction, about the middle of next month, but the nature or title have not yet been divulged.

William DeMille is scheduled to start a new production around the first of May. It will be a story by Rita Weiman.

Wallace Reid is still in the Northern California districts, with Frank Urson, his director, doing scenes for Byron Morgan's Story, "The Hell Diggers."

Gloria Swanson's next starring vehicle will be an original photoplay by Edward Sheldon, and Sam Wood will again direct.

Betty Compson is still ill with the measles, but she is expected to resume work on "The End of the World" shortly.

AT THE INCE STUDIO

"The Cup of Life" has been announced by Thomas H. Ince as the release title of his Associated Producers special production which was recently completed under the working title of "Pearls and Pain." It will probably be released in June.

As a reward for having written the best criticism of Thomas H. Ince's drama, "Lying Lips," in a competition held by the Majestic Theatre of Reno, Nevada, as an exploitation feature of the presentation of the picture, Mrs. Bessie Williams was this week the guest of the Ince Studios, in Culver City, where she was afforded the opportunity of seeing the various companies at work and of meeting Mr. Ince and many of the players and executives of his staff.

Thomas H. Ince this week completed the editing of the Louis Joseph Vance drama, "The Bronze Bell," and announced that the production would soon be completed for its release by Paramount as an Ince-Vance special.

The Selig-Rork company is now at work on the interiors of "The Northern Trail," having just returned to the studio from Truckee and Summit where scenes of the Curwood story were filmed.

AT THE REALART STUDIOS

Bebe Daniels is expected to commence immediately on "One Wild Week," an original photoplay by Frances Harmer.

Ocean Park and Mt. Lowe have been the localities used during the last week for the exteriors of "The Clinging Vine," by Elmer Harris, which is the latest Wanda Hawley production.

Hector Turnbull and Chester Franklin are in the final stages of cutting and titling "The Lady of the House."

AT THE ROACH STUDIO

"Trolley Troubles" is the title of the first Gaylord Lloyd comedy which will be released by Pathe. The Lloyd company has returned from location where exteriors were taken for the fourth comedy in the "Lonesome Luke" series.

Bob Eddy has just finished directing his first picture for Eddie Boland.

The Harry "Snub" Pollard company will combine work and play the first week in June when shots will be taken at Catalina for a Pollard comedy. This is the first picture Mr. Pollard has ever done at the popular resort.

TO PROCURE PICTURES

Mr. Charles H. Rosenfeld, president of the Allied Distributing Corporation, will be in Los Angeles on April 27th for the purpose of securing productions to be released through his company. While here he will arrange for the purchase of sufficient subjects for the next year. It is understood that this will not only include features, but one and two reel comedies.

By the Allied plan, according to recent announcements, this organization will distribute its productions on the franchise basis to the various state right buyers throughout the United States. Considerable of the territory has already been arranged for and on his return trip from Los Angeles Mr. Rosenfeld intends to close the other territory negotiations which have been going on through the mails.

WILLIAMS AGAIN SIGNS WITH PATHE

The results of Cyrus J. Williams' recent flying trip to New York are evidenced by four contracts—two of which dispose of the foreign distribution rights to the first two series of pictures which he produced for Pathe (eight Tom Santschi westerns and twelve "Adventures of Bill and Bob"), and the remaining two contracts call for the production of two additional series of the same number and class for Pathe distribution.

CHRISTIE COMPLETING FIRST SERIES FOR EDUCATIONAL

"Southern Exposure," which is in production at Christie's, will be number 24 in the first series of Christie Comedies distributed through Educational exchanges.

In these two-reel comedies there have been no stars advertised. "Southern Exposure" follows "Sneakers" and "Let Me Explain," recently completed under Al Christie's personal direction.

Director Mark Goldaine has just completed his eighth Capitol comedy starring George Bunny at the National Film Studios in Hollywood.

Florence Midgely has been engaged to play an important part with George Melford in his current production.

SOUTH HOLLYWOOD TO HAVE THEATRE

The acquisition of the De Luxe Theatre, on Alvarado street, opposite Westlake Park, marks the advent of the Turner, Dahnken and Langley Circuit of theatres in Los Angeles.

What is known as the Taft lot, located on Santa Monica boulevard west of Western avenue, has also been purchased by this company, and construction will start this week on a theatre to be known as "The Paramount," costing $80,000. It will be equipped with a Wurlitzer pipe organ and promises to be one of the prettiest theatres in Hollywood. W. E. Burnham, late business manager for Geo. M. Cohan's "Yankee Prince Co.," will be the resident manager.

NEWSPAPER MAN JOINS TITLE COMPANY

Stewart B. Moss, of the National Motion Picture Title Company, of New York, announces that Stanley J. Worris, Boston newspaperman and author, has signed a contract with his organization, whereby the latter assumes full charge of the title writing department.

A force of title writers has been engaged to write titles for film productions of their clients. This is in addition to the art title service now offered by this concern.

TUCKER TO PRODUCE IN HAWAII

George Loane Tucker has arrived in Honolulu and will begin work on the filming of his next picture as soon as his latest photoplay, "Ladies Must Live," is released by Paramount. Mr. Tucker has obtained the picture rights of several books whose plots and settings are Hawaiian and from these he is evolving his own scenario.

ETHEL GRAY TERRY WITH SELIG

Ethel Gray Terry has joined the all-star cast to be used in the new Selig-Rork production.

Together with Lewis Stone and Wallace Beery, Miss Terry is featured in "The Northern Trail," adapted from James Oliver Curwood's story, "The Wilderness Mail." She will also play the leading feminine role in another Curwood story to follow this production.

Florence Lawrence, playing the leading feminine role in George H. Kern's production, "The Unfoldment," has returned from a short vacation in San Francisco.

Hal Mohr and Eddie Gheller are doing the camera work in reproducing the paintings of the old masters for George H. Kern's production, "The Unfoldment."

Pete Gerald, assistant director, and Phil de Esco and Jack Douglass, technical experts, who are at Catalina Island arranging the biblical episodes of Kern's "The Unfoldment," are making the daily trip to and from the island by aeroplane.

Next week the following list of players will appear in Frank Egan's playlet at the Ambassador Theatre: Charles Wildish, William Moran, Frank Braidwood, William Badger, William Harvey Scott and Lawrence Watson. The sketch is entitled "The Pool Room."

A. Rogell and M. T. Steward have combined forces to promote a novel project. They will operate eight studios at the various beaches to photograph the public. They have secured the exclusive rights for thir enterprise at Ocean Park, Santa Monica, Venice and Long Beach for a period of three years.

Did you get that call?

Were you out, and could not be located, had you moved, was your phone busy or out of order?

That is the vital question

Realizing the absolute necessity of a competent, direct telephone service between the Studios and Directors, Co-Directors, Players, Camera Operators, Electricians, in fact any or all who are employed by the Motion Picture Studios; we have installed, for your benefit, a thorough, efficient telephone exchange, whose purpose is to handle your calls, no matter how many, or how often, if registered with us.

We will guarantee that you get that call

All we ask is to keep us informed as to your movements when you go out, if at the beach, theater, restaurant, dance, so if a call comes in we can advise just where you are and when you will return. In this way you cannot lose a call. Then again, if you are working, and will shortly be at liberty, so inform us; we in turn inform the studio calling you.

It is a convenience to the Studio
A vital necessity to you

It is the purpose of the PLAYERS TELEPHONE EXCHANGE to have the most thorough, up-to-date service of its kind in operation, so perfected that at all times, day or night, should a call come in, we can without delay get in touch with the person wanted.
We take this opportunity of acquainting the motion picture profession of the engagement of MISS RUBY HILL, who needs no introduction, as MANAGER of this service.

Howard Crampton will have a part in Ellis Parker Butler's Philo Gubb camedies.

Harry Todd is cast in the series of Ellis Parker Butler's Philo Gubb comedies.

Tom Gubbins has just finished an engagement as technical assistant to Mr. Stanlaws at the Lasky studios.

"Black Sheep," featuring Neal Hart, will be released on the independent market May 15th.

Vernon Walker is in charge of the photographic work for the Norman Manning productions.

Charles Parrott, director for the Harry "Snub" Pollard Comedies, has just signed a long term contract with Hal E. Roach.

Rupert Hughes lately played the score of his recent dramatic song, "Cain," before the Gamut Club.

Charles Meakin has been cast to play the leading comedy role in Eileen Percy's next picture, which will be directed by Philo McCullough.

Harriet Laurel, who has been portraying vamp types for Metro, is now supporting William A. Howell at the new Gerson studios in San Francisco.

Lavena Buchanan is assisting Edouard Wesykal, art designer, who is making the sets for the Ruth Roland serial being produced at the Hal Roach studios.

Mary Garden, General Manager of the Chicago Opera, was a recent visitor at the Goldwyn Culver City studios as the guest of Rupert Hughes.

New York hereafter will be but a temporary visiting place for June Mathis, as the Metro scenario writer has purchased a home in the Hollywood foothills.

An authoritative book on the growth of the motion picture industry is in course of preparation by Joseph de Grasse and Ida May Park, who in private life is Mrs. de Grasse.

The entire zoological collection of the L-Ko studios, where Century comedies are produced, is being moved to Universal City. There it will be under the care of A. C. Stecker, chief of the studio arena.

Boris Karloff has been cast in the role of Ahmed Khan in Rudyard Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy," now in the course of production under the direction of James Young at the Robert Brunton Studios.

On the completion of her current production, Mildred Davis will take a motor trip through the High Sierras with her mother and small brother. This will be her first real vacation since she came to Los Angeles two years ago to play opposite Harold Lloyd.

SCENARIO DEPARTMENT

Edited by

WYCLIFFE A. HILL

President, The Photoplaywrights' League of America.

PLOT AND NARRATIVE

In last week's issue of Camera! I made the statement that the majority of amateur writers do not know the difference between a dramatic plot and a narrative. I have been requested to define the difference.

A dramatic plot is a series of dramatic situations affecting a number of people, and each situation having a definite relation to the others. A dramatic situation is a little plot in itself, or a unit which, added to others, forms a combination known as a dramatic plot. In order for a situation to be dramatic there absolutely must be a conflict of some kind. This conflict may be between two or more individuals, or it may be between an individual and a condition. In other words, the eternal triangle is always present in every dramatic situation. There is some one who desires something. This something may be possession, relief, or revenge. There must be an obstacle which stands in the way of the desired thing being realized.

The desirous person constitutes angle one of the triangle. The thing desired is the second angle, and the person or condition constituting the obstacle is the third corner of the triangle.

A dramatic plot must begin with an interesting complication, or a dramatic situation, as soon as the principal characters are introduced. By this, I mean that there must be a conflict established. This conflict must be sustained throughout the entire thread of the story and every single character that is introduced and every bit of action that is shown must have some relation to the conflict above described, and every scene in the story must build toward the climax, or final solution of the opening complication.

A narrative is simply the description of a series of incidents involving one or more characters. There is no thread of suspense. Some of the incidents may be dramatic, but they are extraneous as far as the plot is concerned, and have no bearing on one another. Therefore, the stories do not build and the interest does not increase in intensity as the end is approaching, for the reason that there is no climax to build to.

ABOUT TRUE LIFE STORIES

There is hardly a day that some one does not either tell me personally, or write me, that he has just finished a wonderful story which is based on something which "really happened," and they seem to think that because it did actually happen that the first scenario editor to whom the story is presented will grab it like a hungry wolf would a side of bacon.

I do not like to be brutal, but I tell these people that scenario editors and producers do not give three whoops in Halifax whether or not it "really happened." One of the most unmistakable earmarks of an amateur is the admission that his or her story is based on some actual event in their own lives' history, and the scenario editor or producer is immediately prejudiced against a story when this fatal admission is made. In fact, it is simply an admission that one is not capable of building, or creating an original dramatic plot, but that he has had to resort to merely describing one which accidentally happened.

THE MARKET

I am still looking for a five-reel story with a strong character ingenue lead—something on the order of the stories filmed by Mary Pickford, Mary Miles Minter, Bessie Love, Ella Hall or some of the other stars who do not depend upon melodramatic plot and sex interest in their stories, but whose characterizations put them over.

More calls are coming in for two-reel domestic comedies with a girl star.

A call comes from a company in Jacksonville, Florida, which is in the market for two-reel comedies with plenty of bathing girl stuff in them.

Two companies that I know of are looking for stories of the north woods.

A new company is looking for a story featuring a country boy of the Charles Ray type, who comes to town and makes a bunch of city chaps look like monkeys after they have "hazed" him properly.

During his recent visit to Washington Douglas MacLean was formally introduced to President Warren G. Harding at the White House.

Among the players cast in Mary Miles Minter's next starring vehicle, "Her Winning Way," are Helen Dunbar, George Periolat and Grace Morse.

Mary Miles Minter will have as her leading man in her next picture Gaston Glass.

Pauline Bush, former wife of Allan Dwan, is located in Shanghai, China, from whence she will travel to India and South Africa, and finally to France and England, in her quest for photoplay material.

Nick F. DeRuiz has returned from location in the Sierra foothills with Oliver Morosco's "The Half Breed."

marked, but not overdone, sentiment.

Ruth Renick plays the ingenue or Viola, Brookfield's niece, sufficiently.

Edward Sutherland does some of his best performing as Clay Whipple, the talented lad who loves Viola. The plot circles around his frenzied but unintentional murder of a man who has tantalized him with a cat's eye jewel for which he possesses an hereditary aversion.

Mary Alden excellently portrays Helen Whipple, the boy's mother, who, despite her marriage and throughout her widowhood, always loved Brookfield.

Robert Cain makes a perfect district attorney heavy. His villains are always competently cared for.

Fred Turner has to his credit the very clever part of Lew Ellinger, a born gambler. He relieves the somewhat depressing subject with some good comedy which might, nevertheless, have been better placed in the scenario.

Others included in the list of players are Charles West and Genevieve Blinn.

William D. Taylor is responsible for the direction of this Paramount production.

A novel preview of "The Invisible Power," Goldwyn's production of the Charles Kenyon photodrama featuring Irene Rich, was recently given at the Palace Grand Theatre, Glendale. It was put into the evening's program unannounced. About twenty film folk slipped into the theatre and were given seats here and there among the regular patrons.

After the preview they were guests of Mr. Kenyon at a dinner party which included Pauline Frederick, House Peters, Sydney Ainsworth, Will Rogers, Clayton Hamilton, Rex Beach, Gloria Swanson, Harry Carey, Milton Ross, Charles Clary, De Witt Jennings, Ruth Roland and others.

Otto Nelson has finished with Neal Hart in "Black Sheep."

Al Martin, director, has returned to New York for a brief visit, to arrange the releases for his forthcoming productions.

Leon Bracker has designed six posters for "The Oath," copies of which were received by Mr. Walsh yesterday at the Brunton studio.

Allen Holubar and Dorothy Phillips are expected here for the premiere of their special feature, "Man, Woman, Marriage," which is scheduled to take place soon at the Ambassador.

Fred A. Turner has returned from Porto Rico where he played the title role in "The Tropical Tramp," filmed by the Porto Rico Photoplay Corporation.

J. E. McCormack of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., has moved his office from 209 Knickerbocker Bldg. to 619 Pacific Finance Bldg., 6th and Olive streets.

Max Linder has moved from his Los Angeles bungalow and is now residing among the orange perfumed hills of Hollywood. The little comedian intends taking a cruise to South America in May.

Lee Garmes and Sam Little, who have served as cameramen for the last four years at studios in Hollywood, have opened their own laboratories at Bronson and Hollywood Blvd., where they are now operating as commercial photographers.

MYSTERY FILM COMPLETED

"The Tell-Tale Eye," a five-reel mystery film, has been completed by Allen Russell of Russell Productions. The picture is being state-righted through the offices of C. O'D. Blanchfield. Frank H. Marshall, sales manager, has left on a tour of the United States and Canada in the interests of this production.

Edwin Frazee is now directing Lee Moran at Universal.

James O'Neill is appearing this week in "The Smart Sex," at the Superba.

Tod Browning is working on a one-act play for vaudeville in his spare time.

Henry A. Barrows has been given an important part in the next Katherine MacDonald picture.

Little Nancy Fitzgerald has signed to play a child part with Katherine MacDonald.

"The Gilded Lily," a Bob Leonard-Mae Murray production, will follow "The Faith Healer" at the Rialto.

Eddie Burns has been cast opposite Katherine MacDonald in her eleventh Associated First National release.

Dwight Crittenden and Wade Boteler will have prominent parts in the next Katherine MacDonald picture.

Gareth Hughes is making use of his spare time to supervise the building of his new lodge in the Hollywood foothills.

Viola Dana departed for Mojave on completing work in her latest Metro picture, "Life's Darn Funny." She will spend two weeks there.

William Badger who has just finished a leading character part with Anita Stewart, is playing in this week's playlet, "The Pool Room," at the Ambassador.

Tex Parker has just finished his first two-reel comedy, "Midsummer Gladness," and will start work on his second two-reel western comedy Many 2nd, "Written, Directed and Produced."

The Italian-American Film Co. is preparing a series of two-reel comedies featuring Frank Hayes. Alexander v. Bodo (King) is directing. Mr. Bodo was formerly with the Metro East Coast Co. and before that he was with the French Pathe Freres.

Upon the occasion of a preview showing of his latest picture, "An Unwilling Hero," at the Strand Theatre in Pasadena, Will Rogers was presented with a silver loving cup by the management.

Mayme Krasne, selected by theater goers of Omaha, Nebraska, as the most popular business woman in that city, will arrive in Hollywood next month to be the guest of Viola Dana. The trip constitutes the contest prize.

Gertrude Atherton, one of the Goldwyn Eminent Authors, has found time between novels and photoplays to write a pageant called "California—The Land of Dreams," which will be presented in Yosemite Valley the last week in May at the State Convention of the California Federation of Women's Clubs.

Sen. Ralph Metcalf of Washington recently visited the Hal E. Roach Studios, where he was personally conducted by Harold Lloyd.

M. J. Cohen, exploitation chief of the T. W. Chatburn Enterprises, is in San Francisco, in conference with Harry Oviatt, Chatburn's Exchange manager there, regarding the San Francisco premiere of "Madonnas and Men."

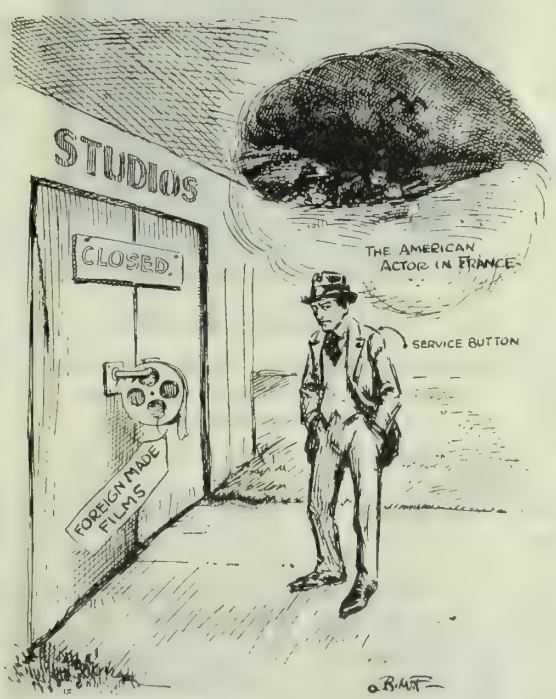
An American Production Crisis

Just after the outbreak of the Great War, Robert Goldstein, producer of "The Spirit of '76," was sentenced to serve a term of years in a Federal prison because his very elaborate motion picture was proven to contain anti-British and therefore pro-German propaganda. In other words, it quite inopportunely depicted the vices of the English court during the Colonial period at a time when England was our ally against a common enemy and when, as a result, we did not relish raking up past differences with the older country.

In that first mad rush of patriotism it was generally understood that anything which tended to weaken the position of one government was found to prove equally detrimental to its friends. The world was at arms, and Goldstein went to jail!

Today, after many months of political strife, we are still theoretically at war with Germany, and yet because, with the fading of the actual battle cries much of the old bitter prejudice has dissolved into nothingness, we have recently witnessed a countrywide sweep of enthusiasm as the result of the exhibition of "Passion," a German made cinema, the plot of which circles entirely around the worst side of French history in a very obvious manner. The fact that this picture was made in Germany before the war at a ridiculously small cost is now common knowledge, which has only gone to make the fact that from many standpoints it is an exceptionally artistic production all the more remarkable to the public. Never, for one moment, has a question as to its anti-French theme been raised. Without any desire to commend the retention of warped outlooks, we are forced to challenge the consistency of the two viewpoints which have been held so comparatively close to one another as months are reckoned.



All of the foregoing merely brings us to other and far more vital angles of patriotic ideals as they apply to a serious situation with which we are now faced. Probably anticipating a reception of the same nature as that which was accorded to Miss Negri's starring vehicle, Goldwyn has just purchased another Teutonic picture, "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," which will be given an early Los Angeles showing. Simultaneously with this announcement comes also the report that thirty-six other foreign made films, of which fifty per cent are German, have been procured by this and other foremost American companies that combine production and exhibition.

These European films, which are admitted to be greatly inferior to the American output, are being imported entirely free of duty at a comparative cost of ten cents on the dollar to the purchasers. Sort of clears the atmosphere and lets the cat out of the bag, doesn't it?

Is it to be wondered that these big corporations are finding it entirely profitable to cut down their American production when they can collect the regular rate on this scandalously cheap material? They are gambling upon the existence of enough "Passions" to pass off the other technical impossibilities which they will exploit to the detriment of their own industry.

Meanwhile, what of the independent producer and the professional man? Naturally, with the market thus flooded, the former will not be able to dispose of his pictures at a fair profit, and an exaggeration of the present quiet condition about the studios will keep hundreds of competent actors, cameramen, directors, scenarists, etc., unemployed.

This threatening condition is especially deplorable since it has been brought about by the utter greed of one small class of disloyal capitalists. It is not, however, passing unheeded, and we wish to congratulate the motion picture post of the American Legion and the Actors' Equity upon their fight to right matters by seeing that Congress impose a fair duty upon this invasion. Competition is not to be resented ever, but that which bids fair to conduct a wholesale slaughter of an American industry and force inferior entertainment upon an American public may not be termed competition. A much bigger traitor is the man who would cut his professional brother's throat than is he who produces an unsavory but historical story of his country's ally—F. R.

If ever the industry needed a representative in the City Hall, it is today, when we are threatened by blue laws and censorship. Vote for Edward Roberts for Councilman on May 3rd, primary day.

Film Capital Production Notes

DORALDINA TO FORM HER OWN COMPANY

Doraldina, exponent of the terpsichorean art, has organized her own company and within a few weeks will begin production on her own account, according to an announcement made by her manager, Frank Saunders, this week.

Mme. Doraldina is now in New York seeking a suitable vehicle for her first stellar production while the details of her new organization are being worked out.

According to the present plans Mme. Doraldina will make not more than three, and probably only two, productions annually.

Arrangements are being made for a studio, either there or in Los Angeles.

Ernest Shipman, well known in the independent field both as a producer and exploitation expert, will be identified in an executive capacity with Mme. Doraldina's production activities and also in exploiting and marketing her pictures.

GARDNER PREPARING FIRST STORY

Jack Gardner, who is to produce the Louise Dresser-Willard Louis comedies, has purchased a story by Rex Taylor, which will be filmed under the temporary title of "The Shoppers." Taylor is now at work on the continuity and the company will begin shooting this week.

George W. Stout, business manager for the David Butler Productions, has been loaned to act in the same capacity for the Gardner organization.

TO PRODUCE PORTER STORIES

International Higher Culture Films, Inc., has been organized to produce pictures from the books of the noted writer, Gene Stratton Porter, and other authors. Production will start in the near future, with "Michael O'Halloran." This will be followed by "The Harvester," and the other fiction works of Mrs. Porter.

Offices of the company have been opened at 815-817 Union League Building.

AT GOLDWYN

Tom Moore is in the midst of "Beating the Game" under the direction of Victor Scherzinger.

"Ace of Hearts," an original story by Gouverneur Morris, was completed last week under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Paul Bern has been made a director by Goldwyn following the completion of "The North Wind's Malice," which he co-directed with Carl Harbaugh.

Director Frank Lloyd is in New York taking the final scenes in Rita Weiman's original screen story, "The Grim Comedian."

Officials of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation will gather at the studio on May 9th for a week's conference, at which important steps will be taken in planning the sales campaign for the fifth Goldwyn year.

In addition to the officials of the company, the managers of twenty-two exchanges throughout the country will be present.

President Samuel Goldwyn, who is now in Europe, will be in Los Angeles for the meeting. F. J. Godsol, Chairman of the Board of Directors, is already here in consultation with Abraham Lehr, Vice-President in charge of production. A. S. Aronson, Vice-President and Manager of Sales Organization; Alfred Weiss, Vice-President and Distribution Manager; Eric Shay, Assistant Treasurer, and Howard Dietz, Director of Advertising and Publicity, will also make the trip.

ON LOCATION

Harry De Vere left Monday for King's Camp where he will make the exteriors for his new production, "Desert Ann." This is the first of a series of two-reel Westerns featuring the Nevada Kid and Bronco Bill.

Mr. Ernest Butterworth will co-direct with Mr. De Vere.

ROY STEWART WILL PRODUCE INDEPENDENTLY

Roy Stewart has formed his own company and will make a series of pictures in San Francisco. The enterprise is backed by San Francisco business men.

AT METRO

"Over the 'Phone" is the communicative title of Alice Lake's new starring vehicle, a screen version of a story written for her by Arthur Somers Roche and scenarized by Edward Lowe, Jr. Wesley Ruggles will handle the direction.

"The Match Breaker," a story from the pen of Meta White, soon will find its way to the screen with Viola Dana in the stellar role.

Arthur Zellner, of Metro's West Coast scenario department, is preparing the screen version of the forthcoming Dallas Fitzgerald production. Mr. Zellner, who recently arrived in Hollywood from New York, has taken charge of the story department for the Fitzgerald producing unit and will write all of the scripts for his pictures.

June Mathis has just lately completed the scripts for two special productions, and is well on the way with another.

Bayard Veiller, who has just completed editing, cutting and titling the first production made under his personal direction—"The Last Card"—is taking a week's vacation before starting his new picture, the title of which has not yet been announced.

"The Conquering Power" is the title selected by Rex Ingram for his production of one of Balzac's stories. June Mathis adapted it for the screen and John F. Seitz will photograph the production.

AT VITAGRAPH

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, has assigned William Duncan to a seven-reel special production, which is from a magazine story by Ralph Cummins, "The Princess of the Desert Dream." The title will be altered before release. The continuity was prepared by Thomas Dixon, Jr., son of the author of "The Clansman." The star will direct his own prodcction, and Edith Johnson, (Mrs. Duncan) will play opposite him.

Larry Semon is starting a new comedy entitled "The Fall Guy."

"The Silver Car," Earle Williams' latest feature, has been shipped east for final editing and the star has left for a motor trip before starting his next production.

Alice Joyce, Corinne Griffith and Alice Calhoun are starting new pictures at the Brooklyn studios. "The Blood Red Dawn," recently published in book form by Harpers, will be Miss Joyce's new feature. A stage play has been chosen for Miss Griffith, while Alice Calhoun will appear in "Closed Doors," written especially for her by Henry Dittmar.

Antonio Moreno has started on "The Secret of the Hills," a well known English novel, under the direction of Chester Bennett. The cast is still incomplete.

"The Son of Wallingford" company will spend next week at Balboa, where outdoor scenes will be filmed. The picture is being made as an extra length special production.

AT UNIVERSAL

Mabel Julienne Scott has started work on "Fannie Herself," under Tod Browning's direction.

Gladys Walton is busy on "What Can You Expect?" her forthcoming feature in which she is being directed by Harry B. Harris.

Eddie Polo is busy on the first of the series of "Cyclone Smith" stories in which the star is being directed by Jacques Jaccard. The initial short reeler is titled "Cyclone Smith's Vow."

Current Reviews

"THE GILDED LILY"

Grauman's Rialto

Adolph Zukor presents "The Gilded Lily," a Bob Leonard production, starring Mae Murray for an indefinite local run. The picture is an unusually artistic piece treating the Broadway life of a human lily. It is largely the story of an artificial little dancer who through love casts off her superficialities only to find her sacrifice of fame and fortune unappreciated by the man for whom it was made.

The entire production excels in unusual lighting effects, beautiful photoplay and lavish sets.

Miss Murray's interpretation of the title role is fascinatingly accomplished. Everything from her simplest of scenes to her dancing is perfectly timed. She has evidently made an intense study of her photographic angles, a fact which adds greatly to her attraction.

Lowell Sherman's deliberate, subtle rendition of Creighton Howard, a man about town who, until almost the close of the picture, remains an enigma, is one more cinema success to be added to this actor's fast growing list. His work always interests.

Jason Robards, a stage recruit, enacts the juvenile. This is his first screen performance and consequently the fact that his heavier action is exaggerated will not be too severely criticised. In a more experienced film performer it would be inexcusable. Mr. Robards gives a very convincing impression of youth, however, in several of his sequences.

Charles Gerard carefully handles the strictly minor part of John Stewart, general trouble-maker.

The small part of Howard's mother is delightfully done by a character actress whose name is omitted on the film.

The different trend of this picture will make it very entertaining to those whom it attracts at all.

"KAZAN"

California

The Selig screen production of James Oliver Curwood's "Kazan," contains many thrills for the ordinary audience and includes much impressive northwest scenery which assists those thrills materially. It is the story of a wolf dog who, hating men, reverts to the primitive only to emerge now and again to assist his one friend, a woman. It is also a drama of that woman's sojourn in a rugged land which is foreign to her nature.

Unfortunately some of the big punches are lost through the poor cutting which even renders the introduction a little illucid. Improved photography would also have shown up the interesting Frank Greene art titles to better advantage.

Jane Novak is seen in the leading role of Joan Radisson. She is quite well cast and convinces as the girl whose nerve carries her where her physical strength would avail nothing.

Ben Deeley also gives a good performance as Jim Thorpe, a man whose unrelenting senses of justice and revenge nearly bring tragedy to the girl. Very nearly Deeley gives a Bill Hart performance.

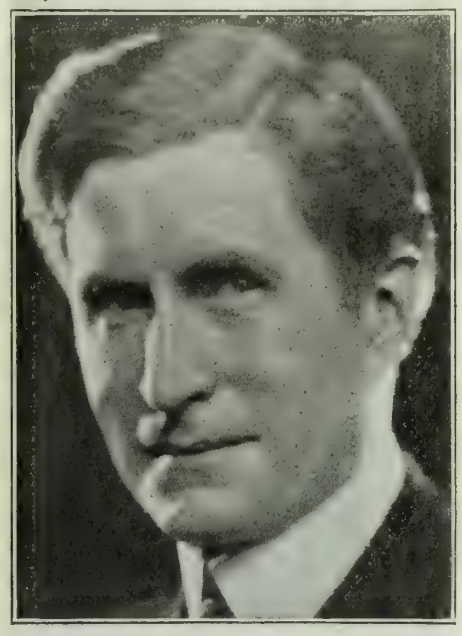
Edwin Wallock makes an excellent "brute" heavy. He enacts "Black" McCready, the man whose word is law, until Kazan evens up an old score.

William Ryno and Ben Haggerty do the Radisson brothers.

Although no mention is made in the press books of the lad who plays Humpy Joe, the fiddler, he is due particular commendation for his several well played scenes.

Kazan, who does himself, occurs to us as being remarkable mostly through clever manipulation. The result, however, is one and the same.

Bertram Bracken handled the picture's direction.



RUSSELL SIMPSON

"WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS"

Grauman's

William de Mille's film adaptation of Sir James Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows," is one of the year's most entertaining Paramount productions. It contains and subtly presents all of the important material of the original which silhouettes a universal problem against a simple Scottish background. It deals with a quietly brilliant, infinitely patient woman whose devotion to her younger, politically successful husband surmounts his egotism and brings him back to her. The author allows his heroine to go through no superficial heroics or sentimental spasms, but rather has her employ all of her cleverness in the manipulation of the man who overestimates his own greatness and merely tolerates his wife's plainness without realizing that she it is who holds his career in the hollow of her hand.

It is certainly refreshing to have a feminine character of the screen win by her own bigness. It will be remembered that in most Lasky specials the woman usually discovers about the third reel that to renew her husband's love she must adorn herself with bizarre lingerie and backless evening gowns. The public is weary of such unreal sex stuff; consequently, this worthwhile scenario, which we understand to be the combined effort of a great playwright and a foremost director, is assured country-wide success.

The atmosphere surrounding the story is consistently maintained in sets, costuming and characterizations. It is largely responsible for the rare humor which balances the heavier action so beautifully.

The subtitles are excellent, no matter what their tenor.

Lois Wilson has never given the public better work than she does in this picture's leading feminine role. As Maggie Wylie, the plain but romantic Scotch woman, whose brilliance makes and whose insight keeps an unappreciative man, her performance could not have been improved. The part is for the actress a great opportunity, well treated.

John Shand, Maggie's almost impossible better half, is excellently characterized by Conrad Nagle. He provides the audience with many mirthful chuckles although his part is played heavily. Shand's introduction shows him to be a scholarly British "hick" with an overdeveloped conceit and no sense of humor. His progress in that serious ego is quite amusingly imperceptible. We can imagine no one but Nagle undertaking such a complicated part with success.

Charles Ogle, as Maggie's adoring father, and Fred Huntly and Guy Oliver as her worshipping brothers, could not have been better cast. It is apparent that the extreme honor of the male Wileys is only overshadowed by their desire to please their beloved daughter and sister.

Lillian Tucker is the only misplaced performer in the picture. One can hardly imagine her in the role of Lady Sybil, an enchantress gently reared by the nobility.

Winter Hall and Claire McDowell are "there" as usual with carefully handled pieces of acting. They do Venables and Comtesse de la Briere.

We are positive that more pictures of this type would be appreciated by today's public.

"THE LITTLE CLOWN"

Clune's

Another, and if possible even less exciting, version of circus life than was "Polly of the Circus," is this week's Realart offering, "The Little Clown." Mary Miles Minter is starred in the picture which is by Avery Hopwood. The story is a stereotyped affair with no weight and certainly little point. The theme, if such it be, is based upon the foolish idea of the advent of a professional female clown into the home of her lover's aristocratic parents, and her resulting misery. As might be expected, their snobbery and her pranks fail to develop a very tense plot. Furthermore, much crude humor inopportunely located only increases the picture's uninteresting note. The only real laughs that we received came from the efforts of a sprightly monkey used in several of the scenes.

The photography is fair. The lighting might have been much better.

Even an exceptionally entrancing actress could have done little with the illiterate, capricious Pat, whose grammar has been made far from consistent by the title writer. As it is, the role means absolutely nothing. Miss Minter's work is not improving.

Jack Mulhall as Dick Beverly, the scion of southern blue blood aristocracy, who wanders into the circus and meets its clown, has also little opportunity to entertain. His forte is farce.

Winter Hall and Helen Dunbar are good types for Colonel and Mrs. Beverly.

Cameron Coffey has several appealing scenes as Roddy Beverly. He appears to possess a remarkable interest.

Neely Edwards is good in the role of Toto, while Wilton Taylor and Lucien Littlefield complete the cast.

Thomas Heffron directed the production.

Where to Find People You Know

TO FEATURE CONTEST WINNER

Universal claims to have made another discovery in the person of Mary Philbin, the seventeen-year-old winner of the recent brains and beauty contest held by a Chicago newspaper. She has been given a contract by Carl Laemmle, and will be featured in "The Harbor Road," the novel by Sara Ware Bassett, which will shortly be placed in production.

George Stewart is cast as one of the principals in "Over the 'Phone," which Wesley Ruggles is directing for Metro.

Edward Connelly has been engaged to enact one of the prominent roles in Rex Ingram's forthcoming production for Metro, "The Conquering Power."

Leo White has been engaged for a part in "The Clinging Vine," by Elmer Harris, Wanda Hawley's current production.

Alian Hale will play a prominent role in the Alice Lake Metro production, "Over the 'Phone."

Geo. H. Kern's five-year-old daughter, Katherine, is playing a part in his production, "The Unfoldment."

George B. French and Charles K. French, playing important parts in Kern's production, "The Unfoldment," have returned from a short vacation in Big Bear Valley.

Charles Meredith has been added to the all-star cast of Thomas H. Ince's latest drama for the Associated Producers, "Hail the Woman," which is now in its fourth week of production at the Ince Studios.

Bobby Mack is playing Eddie the Yegg in 'Three Sevens" at the Hip this week.

Little Bernice Radom is playing Fannie as a child in Tod Browning's Universal production of "Fanny Herself."

Ylon Kalo, consulting technical director on Chinese settings, costumes, plays and Chinese etiquette, has left Los Angeles after finishing a part in Emmett Flynn's Chinese production, "Shame," to become connected with pictures in San Francisco.

Joey McCreery, a Los Angeles girl and one of the winners of the recent Thos. H. Ince screen contest, has been engaged by Universal and is now appearing before the camera.

Kathleen Meyers will play opposite Eddie Polo in his forthcoming series of "Cyclone Smith" stories.

John Smith is now assistant director to Chester Bennett, who is directing Antonio Moreno at Vitagraph.

Frederic Vroom has a part in the Mary Roberts Rinehart story, "The Glorious Fool."

Lillian Langdon has been cast in "The Glorious Fool," under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

Edward Martindel has been engaged to play in support of Gladys Walton for Universal.

Albert Roscoe will play opposite Alice Lake in her latest starring vehicle, "Over the 'Phone."

NEILAN RETURNING

Marshall Neilan, accompanied by his staff, is expected in Los Angeles within the next few days.

Immediately on arriving here, Mr. Neilan will start work on a production to the filming of which he plans to devote six months.

DIRECTOR RENEWS CONTRACT

Robert North Bradbury has again signed with Cyrus J. Williams Productions to write and direct the new series of pictures just arranged through Arthur S. Kane to be produced for Pathe, similar to the first two series recently completed, which featured Tom Santschi in western pictures and Bill and Bob Bradbury in boy trapper stories.

It is expected that George Beban will arrive in Los Angeles the latter part of May.

Wheeler Oakman has signed with Oliver Morosco as star of Slippy McGee, the Morosco play which is another stage success to be picturized.

Eagle Eye is cast as "stunt" man in R. A. Walsh's production, "Serenade."

David Winter will play opposite Katherine MacDonald in "Stranger Than Fiction."

Gertrude Douglass is cast in Ruth Roland's new serial.

Nollie Thompson will have a part in the forthcoming Ruth Roland serial.

Chick Morrison will have a part in the new Ruth Roland serial.

Erle Kenton has just signed with Hal E. Roach to direct the Gaylord Lloyd Comedies.

"Bob" Kerr has been added to the force of directors at the Hal E. Roach Studios and will take up his duties presently.

Charlie Stevenson, who was assistant director for Nick Barrows, who made the Eddie "Bo" Boland Comedies, has returned to stock and will play character parts in the various companies on the Hal E. Roach lot.

Fred Newmeyer, director; "Red" Golden, assistant director; Walter Lundin, first cameraman; "Hank" Koehler, his assistant; and Freddy Gill, "Prop" man, all of the Harold Lloyd company, are taking their vacation in the mountains where they plan to bring down big game.

Irene Dalton, formerly of the Christie Studio, is supporting Lloyd Hamilton.

Harold Miller is playing the male lead opposite Gladys Walton at Universal.

Marie Prevost, former Sennett player, has been signed by Universal to star in light dramatic features.

F. G. Becker is playing a part with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers."

Grace De Garro is supervising the dancing and playing a part in Larry Semon's current production.

Jimmy Adams of the Mermaid Comedies and his director "Chuck" Reisner have returned to the studio after vacationing for several days following the completion of their latest comedy, "Grief."

Eva Gordon is cast in Bert Lytell's "A Trip to Paradise." This is Miss Gordon's third Metro picture since her arrival from New York recently.

Art Dennis is doing a comedy lead with Nate Gatzer at the Arthur Gooden Studios.

Pickups By the Staff

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS' ASSOCIATION NOTES

At the last bi-monthly meeting which was held in their club rooms, 5444 Hollywood Blvd., Friday, April 29th, Louis B. Mayer was the principal speaker of the evening.

William Rau has just finished assisting Lee Kohlmer in the production of Hoot Gibson two-reel features and will start with Director Jack Conway, who is to direct Carmel Myers at Universal.

Buck Connors arrived this week from Globe, Arizona, and is at the Horsley Studios cutting the last two pictures he made there.

Joe McCloskey is assistant with Director Edward Sedgwick, who is making "Live Wires" at the Fox Studios.

Mack V. Wright returned last week from Chicago.

Thomas P. Walsh, a member of the A. D. A., and President of the Walsh-Fielding Productions, New York, advises that their second five-reel picture is now being cut and will be released within the next thirty days.

Edward Sowders is Chief Assistant Director with Director Von Stroheim at Universal.

NAZIMOVA LEAVES METRO

Nazimova will sever connections with Metro, according to late reports, to return to the stage. Her version of "Camille" is her last picture. It is said that she was to have entered the field of independent producers but satisfactory arrangements for her personal supervision of her productions could not be made.

Tod Browning personally has purchased "Just Outside of Hell," by Rene de Saltes, a French writer.

Frederick Palmer recently addressed the Orange County Federation of Women's Clubs on the subject of censorship. Mr. Palmer is president of the Palmer photoplay corporation and a member of the board of directors of Affiliated Picture Interests, Inc.

Vincent Hamilton, who plays an important part in Katherine MacDonald's latest production, is considering an offer from an English producer to star in a series of feature pictures to be made in Europe.

Helen Jerome Eddy has just completed a role in the picture, "The March Hare."

Colleen Moore, who plays the leading feminine role in Marshall Neilan's "The Lotus Eater," is expected to return to Los Angeles in the near future.

Betty Francisco has just completed a part in "Daughters of Joy," Louise Glaum's latest picture.

Vic Allan will write a series of two-reel Northwest Mounted Police stories for Irving Cummings, one of which will be produced every two weeks.

Films are to be made in Hawaii by both Allan Dwan and George Loane Tucker.

Earle Williams has returned from a visit at Santa Barbara.

After a sojourn in the East, Douglas MacLean has returned to Los Angeles.

UNIVERSAL BUYS STORIES

Several stories have recently been purchased by Universal and will be produced as feature pictures as soon as they can be put into continuity form.

Among them are "Harbor Road," a novel by Sara Ware Bassett; "The Mascotte of the Three Stars," by J. Allen Dunn, and "The Gossamer Web," by John A. Morosco.

AUDREY CHAPMAN

Who is appearing opposite Neal Hart.

WILL MAKE PICTURE TO AID RELIEF WORK

Norma Talmadge and her husband-manager, Joseph M. Schenck, contributed $1,100 in the "Say-It-With-Flowers" campaign for the relief of starving children in the Near East.

They are also planning to make a picture to aid in this relief work.

Eleanor Freid, of the Universal scenario department, has written the lyric for one of the latest song hits and has an order to supply several others. "My Sunbeam" is the title of her most recent composition.

Edward Armstrong, Western Division Manager of Universal Exchanges, is visiting the "U."

Irving C. Thalberg, general manager of Universal City, is contemplating a trip to New York within the next few days. This will be his first visit east since he arrived here a year ago to take charge of the plant.

After finishing her work in Sidney Franklin's "Courage," Naomi Childers dashed off to New York for a little recreation, where the shops and the theaters will claim most of her attention.

Mrs. D. J. Grauman, widow of the late theatrical magnate, and her son Sid Grauman, wish to express through this publication their appreciation for the beautiful floral tributes, and the letters and telegrams which they received during their recent bereavement.

INCE AIDS CRIPPLED CHILDREN

To assist in a campaign for funds to aid the crippled children of Southern California, Thomas H. Ince has just donated a one-reel picture to the drive which started this week by the Los Angeles Orthopaedic Hospital-School.

The campaign has opened in five leading Los Angeles theatres, where the picture is to be presented for a week. Five other down-town theatres will present it the second week, and the fourth week it will commence its tour of the neighborhood houses. By this means of distribution, which is being furthered by the co-operation of the Los Angeles theatre owners, it is expected that fully three hundred thousand people will have seen the pictorial call for support for the unfortunate kiddies within ten weeks.

KINEMA BUREAU TO CAST PORTER PICTURE

The Kinema Bureau—a newly organized concern with a novel idea for casting pictures—has just vindicated its methods and scored a hit for its system of casting from screen-tests of actors rather than from the old style deceptive still pictures. It has closed a contract with The International Higher Culture Film Corporation to cast the series of Gene Stratton Porter productions.

Work on the first novel, "Michael O'Halloran," will begin June 1st and the Bureau is busy getting its material together to cast this production.

ANITA STEWART PURCHASES HOLLYWOOD RESIDENCE

That Anita Stewart has finally decided to become a permanent Los Angeles resident is evident from the fact that she has just purchased the Frederick Anthony Klamp place at Franklin and Vista streets in West Hollywood. She will not take possession until early in May.

Reginald Barker's next production will not be "Who Shall Judge," as first reported.

Titling and cutting of "The Love Egg," first of a series of twenty-four comedies to be produced by Warner Brothers for Educational release, is completed and the film is on its way East.

—Harold Lloyd has changed his plans about going to New York and instead will motor with Roy Brooks, a member of his company, to San Francisco, where he will remain a week.

Harry "Snub" Pollard is making arrangements to accompany his mother, Mrs. Isabel Pollard, to San Francisco the last of May, when she will sail for Melbourne, Australia.

The Harry "Snub" Pollard Comedies have acquired a permanent string orchestra.

Tom Santschi is putting into scenario form some of the experiences of his 12-year screen career. They are being incorporated in the new series of out-of-doors pictures he has just signed to make for Pathe release.

The Cliff Smith Productions, with a releasing contract for eight five-reel Westerns, has entered the independent field. The company has just started its second picture with Pete Morrison as the lead.

Edward Kull is in Bear Valley making exteriors for his series of Northwest Mounted Police stories. Josephine Hill and George Larkin are in the featured roles.

Art Acord is working on the middle episodes of "The White Horseman," his forthcoming serial in which he is being directed by Albert Russell. Ford Beebe wrote the story in collaboration with the director.

Three Universal directors are assembling their casts and making preparations to begin work on as many stories. Stuart Paton is getting ready to film "Conflict," a superfeature for Priscilla Dean; King Baggott is making ready for "The Gossamer Web" in which Edith Roberts will be starred, while Fred LeRoy Granville is all set for "The Shark Master," a story of his own in which he will direct Frank Mayo.

Five productions are in the editorial rooms on their way to the screen. They are: "A Monkey Movie Star," a Joe Martin comedy: "The Scarlet Shawl," "My Lady of the Island," Edith Roberts' latest starring vehicle, "Christmas Eve at Pilot Butte," and "Whose Wife Is Kate?" Lee Moran's latest comedy.

One of H. C. Witwer's short stories, "Robinson's Trousseau," has been purchased for the use of Lee Moran and will be placed in production at once.

"Out of the Storm," a lighthouse story from the pen of John Hohenvest, in which Edith Roberts will be featured, has been purchased as her next starring vehicle.

Hoot Gibson has just finished his last two-reel picture, under the direction of Lee Kohlmar. Within the next ten days he will begin his first feature production, taking Harry Carey's place on the Universal program, while Carey will devote his time to the making of Universal-Jewel special features. Gibson's first picture will be an adaptation of J. Allan Dunn's story, "The Mascot of Three Stars," which will be followed by a Peter B. Kyne story, "The Sheriff of Cinnebar."

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

"How She Lied" is the title of the single reel comedy which Scott Sidney is making with Irene Dalton.

Sidney is also finishing a Gayety Comedy featuring Henry Murdock and Mary Wynn. It is called "Queens are Trumps."

William Beaudine is cutting a new Vanity Comedy entitled "90 Days or Life," in which Irene Dalton and Feeney again appear as the leads.

On completion of this picture, Beaudine will direct a two-reel Christie Comedy featuring Neal Burns and Vera Steadman.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Production started this week on a new Eddie "Bo" Boland Comedy, with Ethel Broadhurst playing opposite the star. Bob Eddy is directing. The script is by Marguerite Houghton.

The new dressing room building is now ready for occupancy. Below are three star and three cast dressing rooms for the men, with three offices, while above are the same number of rooms for the women of the various companies. The star dressing rooms are arranged in suites with bath and all toilet facilities. The second floor also contains a wardrobe room.

The Garry Productions, which comedy unit is co-starring Billie Rhodes and Harry Keaton, has completed its first production.

CLEVER COMEDIES

Newhall and Owensmouth furnished the opening scenes in Clever Comedies' initial two-reeler, "The Hound of the Tankervilles." Melville Brown is directing under the personal supervision of Webster Cellison.

Clever Comedies will produce one two-reel subject every three weeks until its series of 35 pictures have been completed. It is expected that eighteen stories will be made the first year. The Production quarters of the company are at the Francis Ford studios.

CELEBRATES COMPLETION OF STAGE

Celebrating the completion of the new 7,000 square feet open stage, authoriped by President Morris Kohn on his recent trip to this city, employees of the Realart Studio held a big dance thereon recently. Among the 200 guests were Wanda Hawley, Kathlyn Williams, Charles Eyton, Walter Hiers, Sylvia Ashton and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Heffron. Studio talent furnished the music. This new stage is No. 3 on the lot. The glassing-in of the No. 2 ten thousand square foot open stage will commence shortly.

AT REALART

Mary Miles Minter is now at work on "Hher Winning Way." Joseph Henabery is directing with Faxon Dean at the camera.

The present Wanda Hawley starring production is well under way.

Elmer Harris, supervising director, is working on a new story for Bebe Daniels.

It is announced that "The Virginia Courtship," from the old play by Eugene Presbery, has just been purchased and will shortly be produced as a vehicle for one of the stars.

AT LASKY'S

After a brief vacation following the completion of her recently made picture, "The Lifted Veil," Ethel Clayton will start work next month on the comedy "Her Own Money" by Mark Swan. It has not yet been decided who will direct Miss Clayton.

Cecil B. DeMille is busy on his new picture suggested by a story by Leonard Merrick called "The Lady and the Laurels."

William deMille is scheduled to start work presently on a picture based on a story by Rita Weiman.

Double exposure and split-screen work have been occupying the attention of Producer George Melford, who is at work upon E. Phillip Oppenheim's story "The Great Impersonation," featuring James Kirkwood.

The temporary title of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's next comedy, to be directed by James Cruze, will be "Should a Man Marry." This story is an original by Sarah Y. Mason. The scenario by Walter Woods. Work will start next month on this Paramount production.

Betty Compson is working on "At The End of the World," directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws and adapted by Edfrid Bingham from the European success by Ernst Klein.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Marcella Pershing

Marcella Pershing, the beautiful little lady who has been playing leads in Universal productions the past few months, has spent her entire life preparing for a screen career. Just fifteen years ago when she was but two summers old her father purchased two motion picture theaters in Woodward, Oklahoma. To that incident Miss Pershing's family lays the responsibility for her entrance into the films, since it was there that her interest was aroused, even though the houses were early disposed of, that the talented child might not dwell upon the idea of a theatrical career. It seems that this care had little effect, however, because her energetic study of dancing and dramatic art was never abandoned during her extreme youth and eventually her people realized that interference with such pronounced desires was not the course to pursue.

In the fall of last year, immediately after Marcella's arrival with her parents from Wichita, she won the San Diego Tribune Beauty Contest, an event which directly preceded her setting forth to Hollywood and resultantly joining the picture colony.

Miss Pershing who, by the way, is a cousin of General Pershing, made one comedy with Billy West before she was engaged to play the feminine leads in six Art Acord productions for Special Pictures. At present the young actress is working with Hoot Gibson in his Universal series. She has to date accomplished eight plays with this actor.

Besides constantly studying her profession Miss Pershing is engaged with such subjects as French, Spanish, voice and aesthetic dancing. She is both athletic and domestic, a novel combination of tendencies.

Her natural attractiveness, personality, youth and perseverance assure her a remarkable career in the line which she has chosen.

TO MAKE COMEDIES

A new company has been recently formed which will be known as the Samuel M. Sargent Productions. "Shooting" will start at the Arthur Gooden studios within a few days.

Rex Story, an English comedian, will be featured in one and two reel comedies.

Fred D. Moore will be host of the new Greenwich Inn which is presently being erected on Santa Monica Blvd. The Inn will cater to the theatrical people.

Rupert Hughes is writing a novel about the Los Angeles film colony, to appear in the Red Book in serial form, beginning next October. The novel will touch upon the psychological effect upon the players of the commercialization of their emotions.

Dr. Henry A. Conway, of the California Hospital, has been employed as technical advisor to Director E. Mason Hopper, who is producing "The Glorious Fool," a Mary Roberts Rinehart story.

Mr. and Mrs. Haule Knight have recently completed character engagements with the Victor Schertzinger Co. at the Goldwyn Studios.

PLOT BUILDING

People who are anxious to write for the screen are continually springing new ideas on me concerning some arbitrary rule or regulation in the manner of building dramatic plots.

A number of them have shown me their scripts in which they have "doped out" their stories in fifty incidents—evidently some new ruling established by a scenario school or text book publisher. Others have brought in their scripts and have hastened to assure me that they contain just exactly two hundred and fifty words and no more, while one institution, I am told, advises its students to write a detailed synopsis of fifteen or twenty pages and to accompany the same by a brief one of a couple of pages, double spaced.

I do not believe that any of these rules or regulations are observed by professional writers. In the first place I never heard of a professional writer laying out his story in so many incidents, as a child would handle a certain number of piles of sand. The way I build a plot is as follows:

(1) First I select a big dramatic situation of an inspiring nature which will furnish a smashing climax for my story.

(2) I next select my principal character, either man or woman, who is to be involved with others in the climax already selected.

(3) Having done this, I next select my other two principals, one to introduce the love interest with my hero or heroine and the other to play a heavy. I now have my dramatic triangle.

(4) I then endeavor to invent one or two more dramatic climaxes, or "punches," which will not only thrill my audience, but which will give the characters in my story an opportunity to do some wonderful acting and portray some unusual characterizations.

(5) Now I begin my process of deduction to determine what chain of circumstances might place my leading characters in the situations described and which will lead up to my final climax. Except as described in the next paragraph, I do not introduce any additional characters other than those which are necessary to place my principals in the situations in which they cannot place one another. I give all of my hero "business" to one man or woman and all the dirty work to one villain, if possible.

(6) Now I consider the proposition of introducing some comedy into the plot in order to contrast the heavy drama. This naturally calls for a comedy character and I use my reasoning powers to decide what type of character he or she shall be.

(7) I now go over my story forward and backward, in search of "loose ends." I look for superfluous action and situations with a view of eliminating everything that does not advance the story and have a direct bearing on my plot. I study every act of my principals and every incident in the story, to determine whether or not it is logical and true to life. The question of whether or not I have a sustained thread of suspense is very carefully considered also.

(8) Now I get busy with a typewriter and write my story. I do not "dope it out" in incidents or count the number of words as I write them, but I simply tell the story in the most interesting fashion I know, eliminating unnecessary descriptive matter and practically all dialogue. In fact I never suggest dialogue except as an effective way of establishing the attitude of my characters, or when I wish to preserve what I consider an unusually clever title.

I believe all successful story writers subconsciously follow the same rules I have laid down here. They have no written rules and regulations—that is why I say "subconsciously." Just as soon as the writer realizes that he is following a certain form his plots will become mechanical.

I do not believe that any writer can do justice to his story in a two-page synopsis. There is also such a thing as saying too much and yet not saying enough. I prefer giving the scenario editor a twenty page synopsis accompanied by a fifteen line description of what it is all about and where the big "punch" is, to such a condition.

THE MARKET

The best leads for a sale of stories that have come to my attention during the past week have been as follows:

A small company, which is making five-reel westerns, want a strong cowpuncher story, written around a star with a somewhat unsympathetic character. In other words they want a "good"-bad man story. They will not pay over seven hundred and fifty dollars for a synopsis.

One of the big companies is very anxious for a story for an emotional leading woman of the type of Norma Talmadge.

We are still looking for that five-reel comedy drama featuring a little character ingenue.

TO MAKE SOCIAL PICTURES

The Home Life Motion Picture Company has recently been organized by Nate Solomon, former business manager for the William Farnum unit at the Fox Studio; A. E. Rosenberg, who for many years acted in the capacity of foreign representative for Universal, and Lester Reider, well known capitalist.

The new company is specializing in the production of films of private families, social affairs, such as balls, weddings, etc. Professional screen tests will also be made.

The organization has taken a suite of offices in the New Pantages building.

Tom Gubbins, who has been serving as Chinese technical adviser to Penhryn Stanlaws at Lasky's, has been recently engaged by Chester Bennett of Vitagraph as technical assistant on things Chinese.

Timely Films, Inc., producing the Literary Digest's "Topics of the Day," has renewed its distributing contract with Pathe Exchange, Inc.

"SOWING THE WIND"

Ambassador

Anita Stewart plays here this week in an adaptation of the old novel, "Sowing the Wind." It is a depressing, complicated story, based on the conventionalized morals of a quarter century past. The scenario, which follows itself in circles, proves more or less tedious and the conversational lecturing with which it is marked becomes physically tiring after it has been carried on, discontinued and started out afresh in all possible corners of the production's various sets. Although the picture opens long before the beginning of the star's romance, it is unfortunately never shown. Instead, an unexpected spoken title calmly announces that it is under way and ready for the opposition of which, by the way, it is to receive plenty. Something vital is lost for the story as a result. As in the case of "Harriet and the Piper," the big punch is sacrificed in order that the heroine may remain virtuous.

The camera work is unusually uneven.

Miss Stewart does not at any time entirely convince as Rosamond the unsophisticated little convent girl who acquires a startling amount of philosophy in one short "inexperienced" year. The fire that marked her performances in the old days is also lacking.

James Morrison is very good in the role of Ned, a part which will, however, prove scarcely sympathetic to the modern audience on account of its indecision and extreme impulsiveness. Nevertheless it is a well handled juvenile.

Myrtle Stedman very nearly steals the picture with her interpretation of Baby Brabant, Rosamond's unknown mother. Her work in this production, which is never lightened, is representative of the best of her art which we have long appreciated and admired.

Ralph Lewis and William V. Mong do some excellent team work as the millionaire Barbazon and his beloved friend, "the grouch." Their characters are sharply contrasted, since the action of the former is at all times serious while Mr. Mong depends entirely upon his always amusing comedy to carry his part. Its timely placing goes a long way toward counteracting the morbidity of the theme.

Josef Swickard's role of Petworth, the gambler, is a valuable touch to the whole.

Harry Northrup and Ben Deeley each offer well executed minor parts.

John M. Stahl directed this Louis B. Mayer-First National production.

"THE POOL ROOM"

One of the most interesting sketches yet presented at he Ambassador Theater by Frank Egan is "The Pool Room," Charles Wildish's personally written and directed vaudeville act. Mr. Wildish, who also plays the featured role, accomplishes some of the best melodrama that we have recently witnessed in it.

He is well supported by a company which includes: W. Harvey Scott, William Moran, William Badger, Frank Braidwood and Fred Watson. The boys all give consistntly good performances.

The Ambassador might present more such playlets to everyone's increased satisfaction.

Eugenie Besserer, who recently finished an engagement with T. Hays Hunter in "The Light in the Clearing" has been signed to play a special part in "Molly O," Mabel Normand's next feature.

FORM SCENARIO STUDY CLUB

The Palmer Scenario Club has been formed in New York. It is composed of Palmer students who plan to study the greatest photoplays of the day. Each member has a copy of the standards for production issued by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, so that their scenarios will be censorproof. David Bader is president.

Landers Stevens, who has just finished an important part in "Keeping Up With Lizzie," soon to be released, will assume one of the principal roles in the third Rockett feature, a story by Charles Belmont Davis.

Peter B. Kyne has been signed by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to write a series of original stories for Harry Carey.

Metro is planning to send a company to the Orient to make a film play with native players under the direction of Daniel Frawley.

Frank F. Greene art titles are being designed for the Selig comedy, tentatively called "The Policeman and the Baby."

Jan Kubelik, violinist, visited Universal while in Los Angeles. He met most of the Universal stars and watched Frank Mayo at work on the opening scenes of "The Shark Master."

Lieutenant Commander Leo Compo, who was missing six days with the NC-6 seaplane during the recent California-Panama flight of the Pacific Air Fleet, U. S. N., recently visited the Fairfax studio.

June Mathis, head of the Metro scenario department, has purchased a home in the Hollywood foothills.

Mary Miles Minter will presently build a permanent home in Laughlin Park.

W. E. Aatkinson, general manager of Metro Pictures Corporation, is spending a few days at the Hollywood studios. Mr. Atkinson expects presently to continue on his tour of the Metro exchanges throughout the United States.

Thomas H. Ince was recently the guest of Admiral Hugh Rodman at luncheon aboard the flagship, "New Mexico."

Douglas MacLean is reading a number of scenarios with a view to selecting one to be placed in production within the coming month.

Charles Hutchinson, Pathe star, will make his next appearance on the Pathe serial schedule in a melodramatic stunt production "Hurricane Hutch." Lucy Fox has been given the female lead and Warner Oland is cast in the heavy role.

Ann Hastings will have a prominent part in "Hurricane Hutch"—the new Pathe serial featuring Charles Hutchison.

Under-production and the Investor

Never in the history of the motion picture industry has there been a time when things have looked so favorable for the investor as they do today. Strangely enough, this is directly due to the unusual quiet which the studios have been experiencing of late weeks, a condition which has brought the exhibitor face to face with a picture famine that promises to be far more fatal than the sweep of over-production about which he was heard to complain so loudly several years back. In that day he could at least discriminate in his booking. This he did with the result that dozens of mediocre pictures accompanied the really poor ones to the shelves in a short space.

Significant isn't it, that the spring of 1921 has seen many of those same five-year-olds dragged forth from concealment, rehashed and sold at a premium? But it is no more significant than the fact that even more antiquated foreign films are being rushed into the country by the frantic distributors who are going to tremendous expense in their exploitation. Neither one of the two occurrences could possibly have taken place ever before.

Briefly, it all means just this: the law of supply and demand has been overlooked with the result that the demand has overtaken the supply. A few months ago with money tight the big corporations believed themselves forced to cut production and the majority of independent companies were unable to secure sufficient capital to start them off. Today the former are too busy chasing down all immediately available "prepared food"for the distributing organizations which they maintain, to bother about catching up in the only manner which will bring real satisfaction, and the latter class (which probably contains the majority of the brains and art of the profession) is still largely financially incapacitated.

It is easy to discern that this is the opportunity of a life time for the moneyed man to get behind the independents and "clean up." With them alone lies the possibilities for the accomplishment of the big picture progression upon which the public is insisting, for they will expend unstintingly the time, energy and money (provided they have it) required in the construction of film triumphs.

At this particular time the backer couldn't lose. We only wish that we had a million or so that wasn't working!

Gillmore Explains Equity

The following is a portion of the speech recently made by Frank Gillmore, secretary of the Actors' Equity, at a meeting of the Los Angeles members of that organization. Lack of space renders the printing of it in its entirety impossible:

"First of all, I want to congratulate you all on what I consider your great wisdom in throwing in your lot with the Actors' Equity Association. When I was here fifteen months ago I agitated that question, but the time was not yet ripe for it. I looked around when I came and I saw three organizations, the Screen Players, the Photo Players' Equity Association and the Actors' Association; three units, each possibly doing fine work in its way, but I thought to myself, "Supposing a crisis ever came which affected the actors here in Los Angeles, how could these individual units be of any effective power to resist, we will say, oppression should it come?" However, as I say, my advice at that time was not received, but it was working—it was working, and about four months ago there was a distinct and decided view on the part of the actors here in Los Angeles that they should unite. That was a wise step to take, but it was wiser still not only to unite in one body but to throw in this body with the larger body, the Actors' Equity Association of the United States. I want to tell you new members here that you are not joining any poor organization. Even as a financial step it was by no means ill chosen, although you didn't think of that when you came in. Let me tell you that the organization to which you belong today has assets of $110,000. I also want to say, in cold cash your association has today $72,000, so you see that if we were to break up tomorrow, you would all of you not only receive your initiation fee which you paid into the Association, but a bonus beside. Is it necessary for me to outline or tell you the need of organization? Every group of people in the country today has its organization. The authors have their organization, the painters have their organization, the butchers have their organization, the architects have their organization, the theatrical managers have their organization, and would you like to be alone, speaking individually for yourselves, without an organization today, in this day and age? Why, it is unthinkable. I am sure you would not. Let me tell you what the organization has done for the actor up to now, and I am going to put the most important thing first. It is a thing which I will say in your own organization has done for the actor of the United States this: It has given him back his self-respect. There are a great many in this hall I know who, like myself, remember the times when—well, we were treated unjustly, and all we could do was to get into corners and complain

Film Capital Production Notes

HOLUBAR TO MAKE PICTURES ABROAD

Associated First National, Inc., announces that Allen Holubar has signed an agreement whereby that organization will release, during the next six years, six productions from the Holubar studios.

According to the terms of the new contract, two productions will be made in California with Miss Phillips as the star, and four abroad. The foreign-made pictures will have all-star casts. Mr. Holubar states that he will be ready within a short time to announce the names of the stories that he will film.

"Man, Woman, Marriage," Mr. Holubar's latest film, will have its Los Angeles premiere at the Kinema Theatre on May 21st. Mr. Holubar will personally supervise the prologue presentation.

RUGGLES TO DIRECT MOROSCO PRODUCTION

Oliver Morosco's next adaptation, "Slippy McGee," is about to go into production at the Mayer studio under the direction of Wesley Ruggles. The negotiations by which Ruggles becomes a member of the Morosco directorial forces were completed this week.

STEWART TO MAKE ONE MORE PICTURE FOR MAYER

Anita Stewart has completed the filming of "The Price of Happiness." This is Miss Stewart's third picture of the year for Associated First National release, and it was directed by Edwin Carewe. After a short rest Miss Stewart will start on her fourth and final production for the 1921 season. Upon its completion she will take an extended vacation.

PREPARING "THE WANDERING JEW"

From the Louis B. Mayer studios comes the announcement that preliminary work has been launched preparatory to the picturization of "The Wandering Jew." The story is now being moulded into shape and production is expected to begin shortly. The direction has not yet been decided upon.

ARTHUR S. KANE CONFERRING WITH RAY

Arthur S. Kane, president of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, has arrived in Los Angeles to confer with his various stars concerning their future productions.

Mr. Kane will confer with Charles Ray and Richard Willis, general manager of the Charles Ray Productions, Inc., regarding future production and distribution plans.

Mr. Ray has released four productions through First National, and under the terms of his contract there remain eight more pictures to go through the distributing channels of the exhibitors' circuit, four of which have already been completed, namely "Scrap Iron," "A Midnight Bell," "R. S. V. P." and "The Barnstormer."

TO MAKE KYNE STORY

R. A. Walsh's Spanish production, "Serenade," is nearing completion at the Brunton Studios. Mr. Walsh announces that his scenario staff is now engaged in preparing the continuity for "Kindred of the Dust," Peter B. Kyne's novel, which will go into production immediately after "Serenade" is completed.

STAHL PICTURE CUTTING

John M. Stahl is about to finish the cutting of his latest film for Louis B. Mayer, "The Child Thou Gavest Me," which will be released in due time as a First National attraction.

Mr. Stahl is already making arrangements for his next production.

AT GOLDWYN

Tom Moore finished "Beating the Game" last week, under the direction of Victor Schertzinger. Charles Kenyon wrote both the story and continuity.

Frank Lloyd and company, who have been in New York filming scenes for "The Grim Comedian," Rita Weiman's original story, are expected to return shortly to the studio.

The next Reginald Barker production will be "The Poverty of Riches," formerly called "The Mother," an original screen story by Leroy Scott. Arthur F. Statter wrote the continuity in collaboration with the author. Leatrice Joy will play the leading role, and John Bowers will have an important part.

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan, Edith Johnson, and their company of fifty returned this week from location in the mountains above Saugus and departed again for Big Bear Lake, where a week or more will be spent. Duncan is filming "The Princess of the Desert Dream," a mining story, from the novel by Ralph Cummins. Don Clarke is assistant director and George Robinson is in charge of the camera staff.

After a week of lacation work on an inlet near Balboa, Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester and several hundred players have returned to the studio. The company will spend the next two weeks on indoor scenes.

Jimmy Aubrey, comedy star, recently signed a new contract with the company for a series of two-reel subjects. He will continue to produce one subject a month.

AT THE GERSON STUDIO

Work has been started by the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation of San Francisco on its second studio building, which is to be erected immediately, adjoining the first unit. The new studio will be completed during the next sixty days, when work on the first of the Gerson Features will begin.

It is planned to use the new studio exclusively for feature productions, while the adjoining unit will be utilized for the William A. Howell comedies, which are now being produced.

Director Tenny Wright is completing the final scenes of "Broke 'n Idle," the second of the Howell comedies in which Billy Evans and Geraldine Karma are being featured.

AT UNIVERSAL

Production has been started on "The Gossamer Web," the prize winning story of John A. Morosco, which will be filmed as a starring vehicle for Edith Roberts. King Baggot will direct.

Tod Browning is well under way in his production of "Fanny Herself," featuring Mabel Julienne Scott.

Ward Hayes is filming a mirth reel. Billy Bletcher, the abbreviated funster, is in the featured role, while Gertrude Olmsted and Joey McCreery play in his support.

Edward Kull is in Bear Valley with Josephine Hill and George Larkin, who are being featured in a series of two-reelers.

Albert Russell is progressing with "The White Horseman," the western serial in which Art Acord is being featured.

Four Universal directors are working with Frank Lawrence, film editor, cutting their recent productions.

Current Reviews

"THE PASSION FLOWER"

Ambassador

In reviewing a film we always make it a point to discover if possible what its director has attempted to accomplish, after which it is comparatively easy to determine whether or not he has met success. Never for one moment during its screening were the points which Mr. Herbert Brenon intended to suggest with his manipulation of "The Passion Flower," Norma Talmadge's latest First National release, conveyed to our understanding.

It is a colorful Spanish story, artistically started off only to be immediately overtaken by a mass of unnaturally ponderous action, eccentric characterizations and philosophy that would be terrifying were it not for its ridiculousness. The conglomeration of unreasonable tragedy which it becomes provided almost hysterical amusement for the audience which surrounded us. Burlesque is always fatal to a tragedy. Altogether this foolish thing is Miss Talmadge's worst recent vehicle. We would advise our directors to remain away from Europe if such productions as these are to result.

The sets and their photography are very attractive, and several of the performances are as enjoyable as their action will permit.

The star has not lately been more fascinating to look upon than she is as Acacia, "The Passion Flower," and her scenes are handled as Miss Talmadge alone can handle them, but her characterization of the Spanish youth is muddled by the scenario and direction until it loses its sympathy.

Courtenay Foote's interpretation of Esteban. Acacia's stepfather, is illucid, to say the least. He gives the impression of attacking his scenes independently, without any knowledge of their successive action. It is impossible to classify his role, which means, humanly speaking, nothing.

Eulalie Jenson plays Raimunda, Acacia's mother. She displays many possibilities, but her business merely assists the chaotic note of the whole.

Harrison Ford far excels his usual standard in the role of Norbert, a poet who loves Acacia. His work as the faithful lad who is unhappily more or less of a coward, is beautifully rendered.

Charles Stevenson, Alice May, H. D. McClellan, Austin Harrison, Herbert Vance, and Robert Agnew complete the too large cast.

We will expect a decided improvement in the next Talmadge picture. It is necessary.

"UNCHARTED SEAS"

Tally's

Metro-Screen Classics' film version of John Fleming Wilson's "Uncharted Seas," starring Alice Lake, is released this week. It is the story of a woman who, after suffering years of indignities at the hands of her husband, finally leaves him upon proof that he is an irretrievable coward and turns to "the man she hadn't married," with whom she endures months of cold and agony, while they fruitlessly explore the uncharted Arctic Seas.

Privately we don't care for fake icebergs and unreal miniatures in the scenic, and the terrors experienced by the hero and heroine make one wish that one of the tumbling glaciers would end it all. But then many souls are more dramatic than ours and for them such pictures are made.

Let it be said seriously that an excellent aurora borealis effect has been obtained. It is far more convincing than some of the foregrounds upon which it shines.

Miss Lake does Lucretia Eastman, the disgusted wife, with dignity. Mature roles suit her better than the flappers in which we have so often seen her cast.

Rudolph Valentino does little, well, as Ralph Underwood, the romantic explorer who loves the wife of another man.

Carl Girard is also good as Tom Eastman, "the other man," who fails to appreciate his legal possession.

EUGENIE BESSERER

Who has been engaged to play in "Mollie O."

Charles Hill Mailes and Fred Turner play respectively the fathers of Tom and Lucretia.

Wesley Ruggles directed the George Elwood Jenks scenario.

"THE LITTLE FOOL"

California

Edward Lowe's screen adaptation for C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., of Jack London's "The Little Lady of the Big House," retitled "The Little Fool," makes just average entertainment. The fact that the scenario strays quite a way from the original is rather fortunate than otherwise, since it is usually necessary for a film story of this type to have a happy ending. Mr. London's novel was even morbid. There are times when the overly careful direction does not make the most of the picture's punches, but at that it mostly moves along to fair satisfaction. Technically "The Little Fool" is standard.

Ora Carewe enacts Paula Forrest, the title role. As the wife of a millionaire "toiler" who experiences a fascination for her husband's friend, she is quite interesting. It may not be said, however, that there is anything about her performance to mark it as unusual.

Milton Sills offers a characteristic piece of work with Richard Forrest, the husband whose over-confidence reverts to absolute intolerance with amazing rapidity.

Nigel Barrie balances the triangle in the role of Evan Graham, Forrest's romantic literary friend. Mr. Barrie is quite competent to handle the almost sympathetic opposition that his part contains.

Philip E. Rosen directed the production.

"THE HOME STRETCH"

Grauman's

Douglas McLean appears in "The Home Stretch," another of his breezy Paramount comedies, this week. As may be guessed from the title, it is a horse-racing story. Moreover, it has more kicks than this actor's pictures usually possess and the plot is somewhat more probable. From a technical standpoint, everything is satisfactory.

McLean, himself, this time gives us a real characterization. He plays Hardiwick, a typical "raised on the track" pony player, who is a continual delight in his checked suit and tan derby. The "wise guy" manner in which he runs Madison Springs, a jerkwater summer resort, is in reality about all that there is to the story. It is enough!

Beatrice Burnham is suitable in the feminine lead ,or Margaret, the village post mistress.

Margaret Livingston enacts a sprightly member of the Frivolities with quite some abandon. Her grand-stand conduct is a bit terrifying but novel, and consequently it holds the attention.

Wade Boteler is good in the rather irrelevant part of Madison Springs' hotel owner, while Mary Jane Irving's juvenile charm is enjoyed as she enacts his daughter.

Joe Bennett and Jack Singleton contrast nicely as the rural and "city boy" heavies. Their parts are comparatively unimportant.

Jack Nelson directed this Ince production.

"THE DANGEROUS MOMENT"

Superba

Universal offers a much padded production of uncertain classification as Carmel Myers latest release, "The Dangerous Moment." The mysteriously titled picture is woven about a somewhat shopworn plot of which, as we inferred above, there is none too much. It is less than five reels in length. The material justifies but two. Several excellent performances have been wasted, if such is possible, upon it.

Miss Myers is to be complimented upon her interest and her evident desire to utilize all possible opportunities for action in her role of Sylvia Palprini, a Greenwich Village waitress who is unjustly charged with murder. Apparently as a result of this industry, she is inclined to overdo her work in a manner that plainly detracts now and again from the scenarist's intent. Doubtless greater care in the direction could have overcome this tendency.

Lule Warrenton's characterization of Mrs. Tarkides, the proprietress of the Black Beetle Cafe, could hardly have been improved. What it lacks in length it makes up in effectiveness.

George Rigas plays his several scenes as her son, Movras, admirably.

Herbert Heyes is seen in the male lead opposite Miss Myers. Let it be said to his credit that he makes the role of George Duray, a Greenwich artist, as interesting as possible.

Smoke Turner, as the long-haired Socialist whose "steak nevertheless is his own," provides a clever comedy touch to the story. Even after they drag him into the "tragical" climax, he works nobly.

W. T. Fellows, Billy Fay, Bonnie Hill, F. G. Becker and Marion Skinner play in the cast.

Marcel De Sano directed.

Hobart Bosworth is now at the head of his own organization and has commenced the first of a series of six pictures, "The Sea Lion."

Where to Find People You Know

OAKMAN GETS BRIEF REST

Wheeler Oakman, who has just finished the leading role in Oliver Morosco's "The Half Breed," for First National release, is having a week's vacation in the mountains before beginning on the second Morosco production, "Slippy McGee."

Mrs. Oakman (Priscilla Dean) will accompany him.

Vivian Ogden is cast in "Star Dust," the Fanny Hurst story.

Gertrude Douglas is a member of the Ruth Roland company.

"Braco," the golden tan Dane "movie" dog, is cast in Clever Comedies' Philo Gubb series.

Allen Quarrier Thompson has been engaged as second cameraman in the new Ruth Roland serial.

Edward Kull is in Bear Valley shooting scenes for his forthcoming Northwest Mounted Police stories.

Mark "Slim" Hamilton is doing one of the doomsters in the Philo Gubb series being produced by Clever Comedies.

Lillian Guenther is at present working in the children's feature picture being made by the Wondergraf Productions.

Ray Berger, co-directing for Eddie "Bo" Boland, is a recent addition to the directorial forces at the Hal E. Roach Studios.

Noel Tearl, who plays the leading part in "Over the Hill," is engaged for an important role in "Star Dust," featuring Hope Hampton.

Cesare Gravina was called by telegram to New York, where an important part awaits him in Sidney Olcott's forthcoming production.

Ramsey Wallace, William Welsh and Carleton King are cast as principals in the new Edith Roberts production, "The Gossamer Web."

Charles Musset, Tom McGuire and Mary Foy have important parts in the production of Fannie Hurst's "Star Dust," under the direction of Hobart Henley.

Arthur S. Kane of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation is in town on business. He is accompanied by John F. Fritts, prominent official of the Kane organization.

James Rennie will be leading man with Hope Hampton in the filming of "Star Dust," which is being produced at the Fort Lee Studios under the direction of Hobart Henley.

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, New York society woman, is to appear in motion pictures. Julia Hoyt, as she will be known, will support Norma Talmadge in "The Wonderful Thing."

Wallace McDonald has been added to the cast of "A Poor Relation," Will Rogers' latest starring vehicle, being made at the Goldwyn studios under the direction of Clarence Badger.

Captain S. J. Bingham has been selected as Assistant General Manager, and will have charge of productions of International Higher Culture Films, Inc., producing the works of Gene Stratton Porter.

LOCATIONING

Director Frank O'Connor and his Realart company are spending the week at Del Monte, where location scenes in "Everything for Sale," by Hector Turnbull, are being taken.

Harry Brown, electrical chief at Universal City and president of the Illuminating Engineers Association, has returned from San Francisco, where he arranged for extensive improvements on the Frolic, the Universal theatre in that city. While there he also placed an order with the General Electric Company for additional lighting equipment for Universal City.

Sylvia Ashton is playing in "The Clinging Vine," Wanda Hawley's new picture.

Willard Lee Hall has been cast for an important part by Rex Ingram in "The Conquering Power."

C. F. Widom, who costumed "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" for Metro, has severed connections with that organization.

Percy Pembroke has been engaged to direct Rex Story in his first picture, the title of which is "Lord Knowswhat." Casting is being done this week.

Jack Grew of Los Angeles has been secured by the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation to act as scenarist for the William A. Howell Comedies.

Lenore Lynard will support Viola Dana in her forthcoming picture, "The Match Breaker." This will be Miss Lynard's third picture for Metro.

Edna Schley, producer of the Scattergood Baines stories, which are shortly to be distributed by Irving M. Lesser, has returned from San Francisco.

A. M. Simpson, artist and painter, has been engaged by George H. Kern to supervise the ancient settings in the biblical episodes of his "Unfoldment."

Henry Knollmiller will play the part of Pontius Pilate in the "Unfoldment," which is an original screen play by George H. Kern, who is also directing the production.

Pete Gerald, assistant director to George H. Kern, Phil de Esco and Jack Douglass, technical experts, have gone to San Diego to arrange for a number of the biblical scenes to be taken in the San Diego fair grounds.

Following the completion of her latest Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction, "The Price of Happiness," Anita Stewart has departed for Coronado Beach for a short vacation.

In addition to his other activities, Charles A. Bird has assumed the duties of casting director for the Fox studios. Mr. Louis Seiler, former casting director, will, in the future devote his energies to the direction of Fox Sunshine Comedies.

William E. Wing, veteran motion picture scenario editor and writer, will be personally associated with Frederick Palmer in the educational department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, according to recent announcement. His work in the Palmer institution will be as critic of original photoplays.

Leonard J. Myberg, western representative of the National Exchanges, Inc., who has been in San Francisco for some time in conference with the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation in regard to the Howell Comedies, has returned bringing with him the negative of "Trouble Brewing," which is now ready for release by the National Exchanges.

Pickups By the Staff

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS ASSOCIATION

Harry Tenbrooke and Director Morris have just completed the second of a series of twenty-six two-reel comedies for California Productions at Hampton Studios.

Frank Gerreghty is scheduled to assist Director Wesley Ruggles in the direction of Wheeler Oakman as "Slippy McGee" for Morosco Productions.

William Crinley assisted Henry McRae at Winnipeg in the making of "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," one of the pictures recently purchased by First National.

Director Bert Bracken had Jack Laver with him when he made "Kazan," recently shown at the California Theatre.

Edward Laemmle, having just completed "In the Nick of Time" at Universal, has departed for New York.

Edward Luddy is slated to co-direct with Ward Lascelle in the making of "Rip Van Winkle," featuring Thomas Jefferson at Universal City.

Mack V. Wright, who played the principal part in "The Lyon Man," directed by Al. Russell for Universal Films, has just returned from the East, where he toured Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky with the picture.

Gordon Hollingshead is slated to start with Director Mitchell on another Shirley Mason feature at Fox.

George Webster returned last week from San Francisco, where he was with the Tom Mix company on location.

Dave Allen is figuring with First National for an early release of a five-reel picture.

J. D. Lloyd, father of Harold and Gaylord Lloyd, was a luncheon guest recently of his sons at the Hal E. Roach Studios.

Al Jolson was a luncheon guest recently of Hal E. Roach, who acted as guide around the lot for the comedian.

An Emerson-Loos satire on society is in preparation for Constance Talmadge's next First National Picture which Victor Fleming will direct.

H. Thompson Rich, prominent and successful scenarioist, has purchased a home in Hollywood and has concluded to make the Golden State his headquarters from now on.

A picture concerning the theory of reincarnation, "Buried Treasure," by F. Britten Austen, is coming soon to Grauman's Rialto with Marion Davies in the leading role.

Bebe Daniels was guest of honor and led the grand march at the recent benefit and ball of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators.

"Big Spring" and four other big chiefs of the Blackfoot tribe, who played in Marshall Neilan's picture, "Bob Hampton of Placer," are to visit Robert Fleming and the motion picture studios soon.

C. A. Christie, general manager of Christie Comedies, has recently arrived in Los Angeles from the East, where he was in conference with officials of the Educational Film Exchanges, through which the Christie Comedies are released.

Following the completion of her present picture, "Her Winning Way," Mary Miles Minter will leave for a two months' vacation in Europe. Accompanying Miss Minter will be her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, and her sister, Margaret.

POPULAR SISTERS MAKE FIRST STAGE APPEARANCE

Norma and Constance Talmage made their first stage appearance just recently, when they appeared at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, in a skit which had been prepared for them by John Emerson and Anita Loos. The occasion was a benefit for the Actor's Equity Association.

HELEN FERGUSON

MISS WALTON TO APPEAR IN HOME TOWN

David Brill, manager of the Universal exchange in Portland, has forwarded a petition, signed by over three thousand theatregoers of that city, asking for a personal appearance at one of their theatres of Gladys Walton. Miss Walton was formerly a Portland school girl and has a host of friends in the Oregon metropolis. Universal officials are planning to let Miss Walton take a trip to her home town as soon as she finishes "What Can You Expect," her current production.

Reversing the tables and making legitimate stage plays from motion pictures is the latest. Laurette Taylor's new vehicle is to be "Humoresque."

Throughout the summer months Claire Du Brey is planning to be hostess at a series of week-end parties given at her seaside home. Miss DuBrey is the wife of a prominent physician.

Harry Carey is spending a few weeks on his ranch in the San Francisquito Canyon perusing several Peter B. Kyne stories, one of which will be used as his first production as a Universal-Jewel star.

Several motion picture celebrities, including both Texas Guinan and Tom Santschi, have organized an informal entertainment committee and pledged themselves to furnish Sunday-afternoon diversion for convalescent soldiers in and near Los Angeles.

"In Hostile Hands" is the title of the third episode of "The Sky Ranger," the new Pathe serial starring June Caprice and George B. Seitz.

NEW GRAUMAN HOLLYWOOD THEATRE TO START BUILDING

The new Grauman Hollywood theatre, work on which will soon begin, will be modeled after the Egyptian style of architecture. Its classic beauty will be further enhanced through such modern accessories as a children's nursery, a woman's rest room, and a man's smoking room. The theatre will seat more than 2000 persons.

Meyer and Holler (Milwaukee Building Company) are the architects and are in full charge of all building and construction.

OPEN NEW LABORATORY

E. H. Hinds, well known laboratory man, has opened his own laboratory on Lillian Way, in Hollywood. He is cooperating in his work with the Farnsworth boys, still men and chemists, who are planning to execute new and progressive ideas in the manufacturing and printing of pictures.

Those who are interested are invited to inspect the new laboratories.

Frank Greene art titles decorate Selig's "The Northern Trail."

Andrew Robson, the well known character actor, died last week at his home.

"Peck's Bad Boy" with little Jackie Coogan will have its Western premiere at the Kinema Theatre, May 14th.

Rene Guissart has refused an offer of $500 a week to photograph Clara Smith Hamon. Congratulations, Mr. Guissart!

Harry Ellis Dean, business manager for the Geo. H. Kern Productions, has returned from a flying trip to San Francisco.

"Braco," the golden tan Dane, is playing in Mary Pickford's current release, "Through the Back Door," at the Mission Theatre.

Following Harold Lloyd's proposed trip to San Francisco, the star is expected to sojourn at Catalina for a period of resting.

Alice Lloyd, the popular English star, was a recent visitor at Universal City and enjoyed her first view of motion pictures in the making.

George Walsh who plays the leading role in "Serenade," the R. A. Walsh production, has completed his work and left Los Angeles for New York.

Charles Ray expects to complete "The Barnstormer" within a few days, after which he will take a short vacation before resuming production activities.

Executives of Associated First National Pictures have decided on an early release for the second Pola Negri picture, "Gypsy Blood," which is an adptation of Prosper Merimee's celebrated "Carmen."

Marie Prevost, recently signed Universal star, has left for New York, where she will confer with Carl Laemmle in regard to her forthcoming vehicles. It is expected that her first picture will soon be in production.

Betty Ross Clark, who recently supported Katherine MacDonald in "Her Social Value," has joined the exodus of screen luminaries who seek footlight fame. Miss Clark recently appeared at Egan's Little Theatre in "True to Form," by Augustin MacHugh.

"Christine of the Young Heart," another flapper story, has been secured as the next starring vehicle for Gladys Walton. The star is now engaged on "What Can You Expect," from a recent Saturday Evening Post story, under the direction of Harry B. Harris.

Harry Berman, general manager of Universal exchanges, has wired requesting that starting of productions on Priscilla Dean's next feature, "Conflict," be delayed for two weeks in order to give the star an opportunity to rush to New York to be present at the first release of her picture, "Reputation," which will have its premiere on Broadway in the near future.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Gaylord Lloyd will presently do a golf comedy in which he will appear in a dual role. Erle Kenton will handle the direction.

"You're Next," a Harry "Snub" Pollard Comedy, directed by Charles Parrott, is ready for the screen.

Eddie "Bo" Boland's latest comedy is called "A. D. 1943." The picture is now under production.

Harold Lloyd's last picture, "Imagination," just completed, will be another three-reeler, according to T. J. Crizer, who is now cutting the film. H. M. Walker is titling the production.

The personnel of the newly acquired studio quartet consists of William Gillespie, Charlie Stevenson, Leo Booth, and Sam Brooks.

AT THE WARNER STUDIOS

The Warner Brothers at their studio have just finished the second of the two-reel comedies starring Louise Fazenda, Chester Conklin, Little John Henry, and Teddy, the dog. The comedy is from the pen of Jean Havez, and was made under the working title of "Chicken," but the title will be changed before it is released by Educational. A one-reel comedy with Neely Edwards and Charlotte Merriam in the leading role is also nearing completion.

CULLISON TO ESTABLISH FOUR UNIT ORGANIZATION

Webster Cullison, who has a series of Philo Gubb comedies now in production, announced this week that he is making arrangements to add three new units to his ranks. These units will produce western dramas, comedy dramas and educational pictures. A director and part of the cast for the western outfit has already been engaged, since it is the first of the three new companies that will start production. Cullison is making arrangements for quarters at the Francis Ford studios, but he will later build his own plant or take over one of the larger studios in Hollywood.

TO PRODUCE ATHLETIC FEATURES

The Donald Mack company is in the process of cutting its first production, "In the Water," an educational series consisting of swimming, life saving, resuscitation, etc. It features Miss Elsie Hanneman, champion diver.

The treasurer of the company, M. A. Dupper of Brooklyn, N. Y., has just arrived in Los Angeles to make arrangements for studio space in order to continue the production of a series of athletic features starring Miss Hanneman and Mr. Mack.

AT METRO

The Coronado Hotel has been selected as the location for the exterior scenes of Viola Dana's new picture, "The Match Breaker."

W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro's New York plant, is visiting in Los Angeles where he will remain a month.

Arthur J. Zellner, of Metro's West Coast scenario department, has completed the screen adaptation for Viola Dana's newest picture, "The Match Breaker," and will start work in a few days on the 'script for Alice Lake's next starring picture.

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

Frederic Sullivan, Christie director, is putting on a new Gayety Comedy called "Hot Stuff," featuring Henry Murdock and Mary Wynn. Murdock celebrates the opening of the local swimming and palm-leaf-fan season by impersonating the devil.

Bill Beaudine has assembled a cast and commenced production on a new comedy.

TO REPRESENT ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS IN JAPAN

To represent the Associated Producers, Inc., in the Orient, and to establish American methods of film distribution in Japan, China, the Philippine Islands, and India, Harry M. Owens, a special sales representative, will sail for Japan on June 2, according to a recent announcement from the Thomas H. Ince Studios.

Owens will make his headquarters with the Oriental Film Co., in Tokio, and will remain in the Orient as long as is necessary for the completion of his work.

The decision of the Associated Producers to dispatch a representative to Japan was reached as the result of negotiations just closed between them and the A. H. Woolacott Co., importing and exporting firm. A deal was consummated whereby the Woolacott company is to have the exclusive Oriental rights to all of the Associated Producers pictures released during the first year.

Owens will represent the Associated Producers, and will devote his time to modernizing the distribution system and in furthering an extensive sales and exploitation campaign throughout the Orient.

We've been wondering a bit at the strange silence of one Mr. Don Hix upon a rather vital story about which he was most vociferous last week. Could he have been silenced?

Mathilde Bundage is the latest addition to the all-star cast of "Hail the Woman," Thomas H. Ince's drama of American domestic life for the Associated Producers, which is now in its fifth week of production.

Clarence L. Brown, co-director with Maurice Tourneur, expects to return in a few days from New York, where he is filming the final scenes of the new Tourneur production, "The Foolish Matrons." The studio work of the production has already been finished and the production is now receiving its first cutting. It will be presented through the Associated Producers in the early summer.

Clif Maupin returned last week from Bear Valley, where he photographed scenes of Big Bear Lake for a special scenic film, "The Call of the Open Road," under the direction of L. G. Thompson.

WORK RUSHED ON GRAUMAN HOUSE

Grauman's Metropolitan theatre, being erected at Sixth and Hill Streets, at a cost of $3,000,000, with a seating capacity of 4,000 people, will be open to the public on or about January 1, 1922, or nine months from now.

This announcement was made recently by Sid Grauman, when more than 500 men went to work on the structure.

The building, when completed, will be twelve stories high and will have more than 400 offices. Facing Sixth Street and Hill Street, adjoining the lobby of the theatre, will be ten store rooms.

A NEW MINIATURE THEATRE FOR PRIVATE SHOWINGS OF THE DE HAVENS

A select few were invited last Tuesday evening to the opening of the Thimble, which is the miniature theatre that Carter De Haven has added to his Hollywood home. It is completely equipped throughout, and includes a pipe organ, an elaborate system of stage lighting and also indirect lighting for the theatre proper.

The opening attraction at the Thimble was Mr. and Mrs. De Haven's second big comedy production for Associated First National release, "The Girl in the Taxi." The print had just arrived from New York and the showing was a compliment to the First National western executives and officers of the West Coast Theatres, Inc. Among those who made up the "capacity audience" were: Michael Gore, Adolph Ranish, A. L. Gore, Harry Arthur and W. J. Quinn of the West Coast Theatres, inc.; John McCormick, Dave Bershon and W. E. Knotts of Associated First National; Director Lloyd Ingraham and a number of the players who assisted in the making of the rollicking farce, including King Baggot, Grace Cunard, Otis Harlan, Lincoln Plumer, Leo White, Margaret Campbell, Tom McGuire and Freya Sterling.

NAMES OF QUEEN OF ROUMANIA STORIES GIVEN OUT

Lois Weber has acquired the rights for photoplay production of the following books written by Carmen Sylva, the late Queen of Roumania, who died in 1916, and Marie, the reigning Queen: "Pilgrim Sorrow," "Real Queens' Fairy Tales," "Golden Thoughts," "From Memory's Shrine."

Miss Weber has also secured the libretto of Queen Marie's story, "The Lily of Life," which was staged at the Paris opera last winter.

BARBARA BEDFORD IN NEXT TOURNEUR PRODUCTION

Maurice Tourneur has started the filming of "Lorna Doone." For several months Mr. Tourneur has been making plans for visualizing the Blackmore story, and he is expecting to have it ready to release through The Associated Producers, Inc., early in the fall. Barbara Bedford will interpret the title role.

After finishing work in Maurice Tourneur's production, "The Foolish Matrons," Mildred Manning will go to her home at Milford, Penn., where she will spend the summer vacationing at her farm. She expects to return in the early fall.

Doris May has returned to Los Angeles after her first trip to New York City, where she went with Clarence L. Brown and members of Maurice Tourneur's company to film scenes for his forthcoming production, "The Foolish Matrons."

Bayard Veiller has returned to the Metro studios after a ten-day vacation spent in Northern California.

SCENARIO DEPARTMENT

Edited by
WYCLIFFE A. HILL
President, The Photoplaywrights' League of America.

THE PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

The dramatist or the photodramatist must use exactly the same constructive process in the building of a dramatic plot that a detective adopts in ferreting out the details of a murder mystery. He must use the processes of deduction and elimination. For instance:

Bang! Bang! There are two shots of a gun in rapid succession! Then the sound of a falling body! We rush into a room and find a man who has just breathed his last. By his side lies the gun. There is nothing about him to identify him. We examine him and can find the trace of only one bullet. Here we have a climax. What was the beginning?

The first question that a good detective asks himself is "Who is the man?" Then, "Who shot him? Why? Who are his friends or acquaintances? Did he have any enemies? If so, who were they? Who was he last seen with? Who were his business associates? Did he shoot himself? If so, what was his motive? Was he despondent or happy recently? Has he had any reverses in business affairs? Has he had any unfortunate love affairs? Was he in good health?"

As he asks himself each of the above questions, he sets about to obtain an answer to each of them. Perhaps several possible answers present themselves. He weighs each of them carefully and eliminates all but the most plausible. Many times he finds something that is very apparent but which absolutely does not fit in with the rest of the structure that he has built. Then, he either makes it fit, eliminates it, or does away with the rest of the case which he has built and starts all over again.

When the detective has finished his case, made his arrests, and when the Court and the jury are through with the prisoner we have a very interesting dramatic plot, and one which may involve many characters, and a multiplicity of dramatic situations. It will probably be found that love, money, greed, and many other of the necessary ingredients of a good dramatic plot are present.

As was before stated the plot builder must do exactly the same thing that the detective does. He must start with a big idea in which he expects to involve certain characters, and then by a process of deduction and elimination, he must set about to build to this, just as the detective has done in the solving of the murder mystery.

I think it would be very interesting for this department to illustrate the process of plot building by actually constructing a dramatic plot, in a number of installments of the magazine. We will start with a single big situation and then we will proceed to use our process of deduction in stimulating the imagination to forge a complete chain of ideas which will result in a finished plot. I believe that this process is the only one successfully adopted by any writer in the construction of plots. It is a process which I have not seen described and illustrated in any of the text-books or instruction courses on scenario writing that have been published in the past.

Here is an interesting situation which promises plenty of complications and is a good one to build to:

"A masque ball is in progress. Both a husband and wife are there in disguise. The husband knows of the wife's presence, but she is ignorant of his. Believing her to be in peril in a room, the husband breaks in the door. Thinking that the husband is another man who is pursuing her, the wife shoots him. He is not killed, but seriously wounded. (This is basic situation number 36. 'To Slay A Kinsman Before Recognition.')"

Next week we will start our line of reasoning to determine how such a situation as we have described here, could have occurred.

THE MARKET

I know of two compaigns now who are looking for five-reel westerns with plenty of fast red-blooded action, but which will not cost over $15,000 to produce.

No one has rung the bell yet, on the five-reel character ingenue story. Bear in mind that what is wanted is a drama of the ideal type, in which the characterization is very strong, plenty of pathos, and heart interest injected, but in which the love interest and physical conflict may be secondary.

One of the large producting companies is looking for a five-reel farce comedy, for a juvenile, on the order of Douglas MacLean and Doris May stories.

Another call just in is for a very strong dramatic and emotional story for an actress around the age of twenty-four. This may be the "neglected wife" type of a story or something of that kind.

A certain motion picture star, feminine gender, who desires to make a smashing big comeback, is anxious for a super-drama. She must have a story which has a big wallop and one which will line them up at the box office. The story should be for a woman around the age of twenty-one to twenty-five. Her financial backers will not quibble about the price that must be paid for such a story as they want.

I suggest that every one of my readers subscribe for Camera! so as to insure their getting the magazine regularly. We are going to have some interesting features in our Scenario Department.

WITH THE MUMMERS

The regular meeting of the Mummers, which was postponed from the first Tuesday in May to the second, will be held at the Workshop, May 10.

Charles Meredith will entertain with a talk on the Washington Square Players and Madame Baronovski will speak on the Moscow Theatre.

All members are invited.

PALMER PUBLISHES MAGAZINE

A new publication on scenario writing entitled The Photoplaywright is being gotten out by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation. It will contain feature articles by Rupert Hughes and will be sold on all newstands for twenty-five cents.

SPECIAL SHOWING OF HOLMAN DAY PICTURE IN NEW YORK

At the request of The Maine Society of New York City, a special showing of the Holman Day Special production, "The Rider of the King Log" will be held in New York City on May 14th at Aeolian Hall. All the members of the society have been invited to attend the performance. The picture was made in Maine and more than a year was spent in the filming of it.

CRAWFORD ELECTED TREASURER OF ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Announcement is made of the election of Roy Crawford of Topeka, Kansas, as Treasurer of the Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Crawford arrived in New York recently and has already assumed active work at the home office. In coming to the Associated Exhibitors, Mr. Crawford again becomes a business associate of Arthur S. Kane, Chairman of the Board of Directors of that organization. Mr. Kane and Mr. Crawford were partners at one time in the operation of the Crawford and the Grand Theatres at Topeka, Kansas.

George Stewart will have a prominent part in Alice Lake's forthcoming picture, "Over the 'Phone."

Ralph Lewis will enact a leading character role in "The Conquering Power," Rex Ingram's next Metro production.

The Hollywood station champions of the City Firemen's baseball league will play an open date today with Larry Semon's Vitagraph nine, one of the studio teams. The game will be played at 3 p. m. on the firemen's lot at Cahuenga and Selma avenues.

INCE CASTING DIRECTOR VISITS DALLAS

Rushing to Dallas, Texas, to the bedside of his mother, who is seriously ill, Horace Williams, Thomas H. Ince casting director, is on a special leave of absence from the Ince Studios, in Culver City. During his absence his duties are being assumed by the various Ince directors, who are selecting the players for their productions.

Ray Reis has been chosen as head cameraman for Clever Comedies, Inc.

Webster Cullison has recently announced the appointment of F. D. Olney as cashier and bookkeeper for his company.

Diana Deer, recent graduate from Mount St. Vincent Academy, will make her screen debut in "Hurricane Hutch," Charles Hutchinson's latest Pathe serial.

The continuity for Clever Comedies' second Philo Gubb story is now being prepared by Everett C. Maxwell, scenario editor, in collaboration with Webster Cullison, supervising director.

Sheriff David H. Knott of New York and Miss Dorothy Phillips were guests of the Alimony Club at the showing recently of "Man, Woman, Marriage," in which Miss Phillips is the star.

about it. Oh, the indignity of it all! To think that we were compelled, through the nature of our calling, to accept things which no citizen who has red blood in his veins would submit to, but we were helpless. I can remember the time, as all of you can, when rehearsals were free. We had six, eight, ten, even twelve weeks' free rehearsals, and then when we started up and the thing was a failure, we would get two or three days' money for it. I can remember only two years ago a company with one of the biggest managers in the country had two weeks' lay-off around Christmas time, with the exception of one day—a company of sixty people. They went to Waterbury and gave a play, two performances in the one day; they received no money for the week before, and they only played two performances on the Thursday and Saturday of the second week, and when they received their salary they received one-eighth. I called up the manager from the Equity rooms, and I said, 'Mr. Blank, how do you explain this company receiving one-eighth? They at least gave two performances in two weeks, don't you think they should receive two-eighths at least?' He said, 'No, one-eighth is all they are going to get, and what are you going to do about it?' And I am bound to admit that is all that they did get. That was before they day when we rose up in our might and said, 'This thing has got to stop,' and it has stopped, and the very fact that we made that sort of thing stop has brought us back the respect of the very men against whom we fought. There is no rancor in their hearts. William A. Brady said three years ago, when we asked him, 'When are you going to give us the equity contract?' said, 'When you make me.' He is perfectly satisfied because we have made him. . . . That is what the actor won through taking the issue in his own hands and enduring everything for the right.

"Now, there are a few other things that organization can do for the actors. It is absolutely necessary that you should have your representatives and your spokesmen, so that they can appear before the legislature of the country and before Congress, if need be, and speak for you. Without an organization that cannot be done. Now let me just tell you what has occurred within the last few weeks. Two weeks ago, or three weeks ago, there was an organization formed which was termed the Triangular Conference Committee. On it were four authors, four managers and four members of the Actors' Equity Council. At the first meeting of this Triangular Conference Committee somebody said, 'Why, the censorship bill comes up tomorrow in Albany; what are we going to do about it?' We said we believed the managers had the whole thing in hand. Mr. William A. Brady, who is the president of the National Picture Association, has been handling this thing; what is he going to do?' Well,' they said, 'he is going to Albany to protest against it. Why not the authors?' So the authors decided to go down with Mr. Brady, and they turned to us and said, 'What about the actors? What can the actors do?' I said, 'I will tell you one thing the actors can do. The actors can go to the Central Trade and Labor organization of New York and get a representation from them and send it up to the New York legislature, and as they represent 200,000 men and women that probably will have some effect. Another thing the actors can do ,they can go to the State Federation of Labor and get from them a similar representation, and as they represent about 800,000 in the State of New York that may have some effect'; and I said, 'If this organization desires it, we will wire to Mr. Gompers, who represents over 5,000,000, and I have no doubt what he has to say will have some weight, too.' Well, the managers didn't like this. They said, 'Oh, we are afraid we can't ask labor to do anything for us, because if we did, labor might ask us in return to do something for them. So this organization can't ask the Actors' Equity Association to do that.' I said, 'That is all right, gentlemen, the Actors' Equity Association will do it on its own account.' And the Actors' Equity Association did; and it had the greatest effect in the world, although not sufficient effect. Why? I think Mr. Brady pulled a boneheaded play. We sent our president, John Emerson, with him, but unfortunately John Emerson was not asked to speak. If he had been, I know what he was going to say and I know it was going to be most effective. Instead of which Mr. Brady spoke, and one or two others, and the report to me was that the whole thing, from the managers' point of view, was a fizzle; while the other people, those who were trying to get the censorship bill passed, were a unit, and the consequence is that New York State has, I regret to say, passed a censorship bill. That is a very serious thing, you understand, and if the managers had invited the actors to co-operate with them, believe me, there would have been a different result; or at least it would not have been so overwhelming as it turned out to be. A censorship bill is a very serious thing for you, ladies and gentlemen. I am not going to say that perhaps some of the producers have not exceeded and gone beyond the bounds of good taste. That is to be regretted, because the public has resented many of the things, but censorship is a vicious thing. It would not be vicious if the censorship was put in the hands of some great scholar, some man who knew art and literature and knew when a thing was vulgar, but this committee which is going to be formed in New York State will be composed of what? A welfare worker, a clergyman, two or three politicians, and so on. Now, I have nothing to say at all individually against these people. I dare say a great many of them are sincere, but I do say that a big art like yours and like ours should not be in the hands of a group of people like that. Let them ask one or two of you ladies and gentlemen who have given your lives to the motion picture industry, let them ask one or two of the directors and one or two of the managers, and if they were called into the legislative chamber and told that things must be improved, you could trust these gentlemen on their honor to do that. They would do it for the good of the industry, and the result would be eminently more satisfactory than placing it in the hands of people who may have any number of axes to grind. . . .

"If we get together, actors, managers, directors, and unite our efforts, why, we will get somewhere and we will prevent these hypocritical, villainous laws which are passed in some of the states. I want to touch on another thing which some of you may think perhaps is even more serious. It may affect your very livelihood. A few months ago a picture from abroad, a German picture, was shown in New York City. It was an enormous success. That picture was bought for from $40,000 to $50,000 at the most. I was informed ten days ago—two weeks ago, rather—that there were forty or fifty films from the same country waiting in New York City for buyers. Six of those pictures had already been bought. Now, you want to think this matter over very seriously. If fifty pictures come from a country where labor is cheap, where production is cheap, and where the difference in the value of money is so pronounced, if those pictures should be admitted in this country, how is it going to affect your employment? If you have fifty pictures, and there may be five prints of each one showing in the different theatres of the country, that means to say that there are fifty less productions necessary. Now, in theory I am a free trader, but we have got to look, as an economic organization, to the employment of our people. Who is it particularly benefits from this? It is the man who goes and buys the film for only one-tenth or one-twentieth of what it would cost him to make it in our own country. Now, good luck to him, as far as that goes, let him make all the money he wants, so long as it doesn't keep our people out of work; and it will keep our people out of work if it becomes general. Besides, what is the logical conclusion? If they can produce pictures in a foreign country for so much less than they can produce them here, what is to prevent certain capitalists from going to that foreign country, producing that play, translating the sub-titles and sending them here? Now, your council is going to seriously consider this question and, if necessary—we are not going to act hastily, because that is not the practice of your association — but if necessary, we will send a delegation down to Congress and point out the possible and probable injustice to not only moving picture actors of this country, but to motion picture directors, to motion picture scenario writers, to those who make your scenes, to those who make your costumes, to those who work your lights and manipulate your cameras, to all these people for the benefit, we will say, of a few financiers in Wall Street and a few exhibitors who probably get the film a little cheaper than they would otherwise do. Now, your chairman stated, and very truly, that we, the Actors' Equity Association, is not a radical organization. We are not. I defy anyone to state one single radical step which this organization has taken without being driven. When we went on strike I want to remind you that we went to the managers again and again and we begged them to confer. We even—and you will all remember this—Mr. Taft and Mr. Hughes kindly consented, after our asking them to arbitrate the points of difference between us. We informed the managers that we would be glad if they would accept Messrs. Taft and Hughes for this purpose, and what did they say? They said, 'Messrs. Taft and Hughes are very charming gentlemen, but we don't think they know very much about our business,' and they refused. It was when they started the progressive lockout, and we knew if it continued that it would be the end of any actors' organization which had any possible chance of success, that we ordered the strike. After the strike an agreement was entered into. They agreed to temporize on the basis of the requests which we made by your council. What has happened in this past year? In spite of the fact that we have an agreement which clearly states the basis of employment between actors and managers, we have lowered the bars again and again and again, so as to help the managers in what we believed was a bad season, and we will continue to do that.

"Many have insisted that we were a closed shop. The closed shop means that an organization can close its membership and will allow no others to come in. We are not going to stop any actor or actress from making his living on the stage. All we say is that if you want to play with us members of the Actors' Equity Association — and this only affects the dramatic end—if you want to play with us, you must support the organization which has done so much and brought you so many concessions, and by which you, month after month and year after year, are being benefitted. However, as your chairman said, the conditions in the motion picture industry are very different to what they are on the speaking stage; and as far as I can understand—and believe me, I try to understand, and I think I do, I hope I do—there are very few abuses. Most of the actors and most of the producers are white men and treat their employees fairly and squarely.

"But, and here is the point, they want to continue treating you fairly and squarely, but if some of the new directors or motion picture producers come in and start underselling them, we might say, and underselling them and underselling them, we want to see that the standard which the present producers have made shall be upheld. And so in that way all we are doing is what? It is an insurance. It is an insurance to see the continuance of the conditions which now exist in the motion picture industry, and it is an insurance to prevent—to weed out whenever they may appear—any abuses which may occur. Of course, when I say any abuses, that is very sweeping. I don't mean to say that now and then, maybe more than now and then, abuses may not creep in, but we trust we will be able to remedy those. . . .

"Now, what is the Actors' Equity Association going to do for you all right here in Los Angeles? I want to say that you have a big office, that you have a big agency, and understand that is a great big thing, much more than you perhaps think. At the present moment we know, and you know, what has been happening in New York with agents —agents charging 10, 15 and 20 per cent. Now, your agency here is more or less a check on all that kind of thing. Your agency here is going to charge just enough to cover expenses—5 per cent for up to five weeks, which will cover expenses; and while that agency exists it will always be a check on other agents coming in. If other agents do come in and try to charge more than that, then we have got to take it up with that agency, and believe me, when we start taking a thing up—well, it is very often remedied. . . .

"Any organization with a name like Equity has a serious work to do. It has got to live up to its name. It has got to see that it not only secures Equity, but that it gives Equity. Now, I think even those who are opposed to us will say that we have endeavored to live up to this. . . .

"I am going to tell you one other thing, and don't imagine I am doing it to throw bouquets at the Equity. I am not. I am throwing bouquets at you. We have an arbitration committee composed of three managers of the Managers' Association and three of the Actors' Equity Association and these try the different cases and complaints which come up, but one case which came up the committee voted unanimously that the actor was right and should receive a certain amount of money. The next day evidence reached us which proved that what had been told at that particular committee meeting was not true; that there had been a miscarriage of justice, and that our member was not entitled in all honor to the money which he had been awarded. We went to the next meeting and we said, 'Gentlemen of the Arbitration Committee, the Equity Association desires to take nothing for its members which does not rightfully belong to them. We have discovered since the last meeting that there was an error, and certain things have come to us which show that the manager was right in his contention and not the actor. We, therefore, as members of the Arbitration Committee, beg you to reverse your former verdict and give the decision to the manager.' I think that was only equity. I am telling you these things because you who come into Equity must realize that you have your obligations and that the council of your association will insist always that its members live up to the spirit of their agreements and to the spirit of their association. . . . I am reminded of our motto, which is at the head of all our literature. Probably many of you have seen it. For those of you who have not I am going to repeat it, because it has been our motto ever since we started. It is a quotation from Marcus Aurelius: 'Love the right, poor as it may be, which thou hast learned, and be content with it, making thyself neither the tyrant nor the slave of any man.'

"Now, I have talked so much that I am just going to conclude with just a little about our future. The Equity is not solely an economic institution. It thinks of the theatre, and when I say the theatre, understand, I include naturally the motion pictures. It thinks of the future of them. The motivation of the Equity, amongst other things, is to found community theatres. You may ask how will that assist us in the motion picture world. I will tell you how it will assist you. . . . There may be times when you are beginning to feel a little rusty. We feel that with these community theatres, after you have worked two or three years on the screen, will oil up the machinery should you consider a change to the speaking stage. . . .

"Now, in conclusion I am just going to say this: My suggestion to the producers and to the managers is that we form a joint committee to talk things over; to meet, we will say, at least once a month to get an understanding entirely of what is in the other fellow's mind. Nothing is ever lost by talking a thing over. Lots and lots of trouble has been averted by sitting around a table and saying, 'Now, have you got anything to complain of, old man?' and we think it over and say, 'Yes, we think so and so and so and so,' and the other party rubs his chin and says, 'Well, perhaps you are right.' Wouldn't that be something? If we could get some committee here in Los Angeles, just the same as we have in New York, to meet periodically and discuss and prevent any possible trouble in the future. Not that I anticipate any, but doubtless by meeting and talking together we can prevent any possible discord in the future. Do you see that? (Exhibiting a check.) This is a check for $2,000. The Actors' Equity Association believes that its brothers and sisters of the Equity in Los Angeles need something to start its bank account. This is a little start."

OCCUPIES NEW STUDIO

Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton, and Director Jack White are well under way with their first comedy for the Hamilton-White Comedy Corporation, which is releasing its pictures through Educational Films of New York.

The organization has just moved into its own studio, at 4534 Sunset Boulevard, with W. W. Rarity as production manager, assisted by an expert technical staff.

The Border Feature Film Corporation has started producing a series of two reel westerns featuring Grant Merrill with Peggy Parkan in the leading feminine role. The first story was taken from the Saturday Evening Post and is being directed by Harry Moody with Doc Cook at the camera.

Constance Talmadge and her new husband are vacationing at Lakewood, N. J.

Final cutting and editing of "The Cup of Life," a Thomas H. Ince special, was commenced this week with Ince personally in charge of operations.

Edward Laemmle, who has been directing Jack Perrin in a series of snappy western dramas at Universal City, has been granted a four weeks' leave of absence from the studio and will start at once for New York, Chicago and Atlantic City. Laemmle has been at Universal City since his return from New Guinea, where he and William Alder secured the film since released as "Shipwrecked Among Cannibals."

An Anticipated Triumph

Probably the Los Angeles actors' greatest victory to date was accomplished last Saturday when a concentrated demonstration by them forced those in charge of Miller's Theatre to remove the German-made, Goldwyn release, "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," which had been booked, we understand, for an indefinite run at that house, and replace it with an American picture.

The film colony, well organized this time, turned out en masse to dignifiedly see justice done. We were present and great was our gratification to observe that the remonstrating crowd was made up not only of the hundreds of screen performers who are unemployed, and have been, in some cases, for months as the result of decreased American production and to whom, therefore, the menace of this foreign intrusion which threatens the very life of our industry, has been brought home; but that it was composed also of many of their more fortunate brothers and sisters who happen to be yet under contract. These last were there not alone for their personal gain but with the good of their profession foremost in mind.

Yes it was a good thing to witness, and as may be judged by the results, the entire demonstration was effectively manipulated. We have noticed that it is a bit difficult to successfully battle the American Legion, the Actors' Equity Association and several other young blooded organizations which are now unmistakably "in our midst." Particularly is a combination of their efforts an excellent thing not to fight. The tariffless foreign film is one of their mutual grievances and last week they spoke their opposition in unison.

Taken altogether, the occurrence indicated many things, all of which are promising for the opening up of the studios, a subject in which we are all vitally interested. Everything considered, another attempt, at least in the near future, to insult the jobless West Coast actor with the local running of continental, especially German screen entertainment, will scarcely be made. So far—so good! However, we believe that last week's prompt action will have a much farther reaching effect than merely that. As a follow-up the Equity and the Legion are instigating a nation-wide agitation which is bound to eventually reach Congress. The outcome can only be the levying of a fair import tax upon these photoplays, a duty that will thoroughly protect an industry which the United States alone has conscientiously developed. Let it be explained that by the phrase to protect, in this instance, we mean largely—to feed!

A consistent keeping after this situation is bound to bring studio activity again, which means more prosperity for all. If we don't engineer our own campaigns, who will?

Mutilated Classics

In answer to a published criticism of the manner in which our scenarists and producers mutilate the classics that they film, "Billboard" says the following editorially:

"We cannot present in detail the very just protest made in this article, but we admit that it applies to many screen adaptations made from famous novels dear to the hearts of the reading public. Likewise, we cannot blame authors who protest at the liberties taken with their brain children in the process of transferring their original story to the screen. This happens in so many cases where pictures are made unrecognizable when placed before the silver sheet.

"Much improvement is necessary in these adaptations and the scenarioist should bear in mind the impression held by the public in the original form presented by the novels. However, there are drawbacks in this line not easily calculated. The screen angle necessitates changes which an author can scarcely comprehend. As a rule, picturized novels do not succeed very well. It is difficult to screen dialog, which is usually an integral part of a picture. Condensation is another obstacle which robs the picture of much of the original quality in book form. The adapter is compelled to conform to the conventional standards of the screen and is handicapped in retaining the original ideals of the book. The screen has a language of its own. We have to show a scene, not talk about it, in order that the spectator will visualize its meaning. Often stories which read interestingly are not effective in the photodrama; hence a switching of conditions and an elimination of episodes are absolutely necessary to put the story over. The director is thus enabled to make clear for the vision what is merely spoken of in the book. We realize there have been some atrociously bad pictures from the works of prominent authors, and the admirers of these novels are frequently disappointed after viewing the picture. But the screen is inexorable; it has only one line to follow.

"Now if Shakespeare's works were to go over to the screen—and assuredly they will in time—we can imagine all sorts of cruel happenings to the Bard of Avon's works. We might even expect to see Shylock placed in an east-side shop with three brass balls over the door instead of the way Shakespeare conceived his surroundings. Also beautiful Juliet might be filmed on a fire escape in a Baxter street tenement, where the lines of vari-colored wash, red flannel shirts, babies' needfuls and voluminous kimonos could act as a background for her balcony scene.

"An audience will pay to see 'The Merchant of Venice' or 'Hamlet,' but not a perverted version of the great author's work. To take liberties with these classics is to venture on dangerous ground, but how can the story reach the public without interpolations from the director who knows his craft?"

Film Capital Production Notes

BOSWORTH STARTS SECOND INDEPENDENT PRODUCTION

Hobart Bosworth, now at the head of his own producing organization, this week completed his first special feature, a story of the Alaskan whale fisheries, for Associated Producers distribution, and is busy with the preliminary preparations for the second of the series of six pictures scheduled for release during the coming twelve months.

The second feature, which will enter production during the coming week, is temporarily titled "Renunciation," and has been adapted to the screen by Joseph Franklin Poland from the original script by Emily Johnson. Rowland V. Lee will direct, and J. O. Taylor has been engaged as head cameraman.

HILLYER TO DIRECT INCE SPECIAL

"Lucky Damage," a drama by Marc Edmond Jones, is the production with which Lambert Hillyer will make his return to the Ince banner after an absence of two years, during which time he was associated with William S. Hart productions. The continuity is now being written and other preliminary arrangements have been started so that actve production may commence inside of a month. An all-star cast will be featured and it is expected that Henry Sharp will be assigned to the photography.

THE ROCKETTS MOVE

The Rockett Film Company is leaving Universal City and will henceforth produce its pictures at the Louis B. Mayer Studio.

Production of the third Rockett special feature, "Handle With Care," has already started. The play has been reconstructed from a Charles Belmont Davis story.

The Rocketts are planning expansion to double their product, which for the remainder of 1921 is already fixed at five special features.

CUTTING "ONE A MINUTE"

Final cutting and editing was commenced this week on "One a Minute," Douglas MacLean's next Thomas H. Ince comedy scheduled for Paramount release at an early date. Ince is in charge of the work and is being assisted by Louis Milstone. The story was adapted to the screen by Joseph Franklin Poland from the stage play of the same name by Fred Jackson.

FILMING OF SANTSCHI STORY TO START

Arthur S. Kane and Cyrus J. Williams have practically concluded their conferences bearing on stories and casts for the new series of Tom Santschi pictures to be directed by Robert North Bradbury. As in the past, Mr. Williams will produce at the studio he acquired last year from the Brentwood Film Company.

MAKING STORY COMEDY

The first story for the Rex Story Comedies, entitled "Lord Knows What," has been started. It is a one reel comedy and will be completed within a week.

Mr. John C. Brownell, Universal scenario editor, announces the purchase of "Bransford of Rainbow Range," a Eugene Manlove Rhodes novel of several years ago. It will be used as a starring vehicle for Harry Carey.

STEWART PICTURE CHOSEN

"A Question of Honor," the Ruth Cross story, has been selected for Anita Stewart's next production.

Edwin Carewe, who has directed the star in her last three pictures, will handle the new one.

MARIE PREVOST

Who will be starred by Universal.

AT GOLDWYN

"From the Ground Up," an original screen story by Rupert Hughes, will be the next starring vehicle for Tom Moore. Mr. Hughes wrote his own continuity.

House Peters will have the leading part in Frank Lloyd's next production, "The Man from Lost River," an original screen story by Katherine Newlin Burt. Lambert Hillyer wrote the continuity.

Reginald Barker has started work on Leroy Scott's original screen story, "The Poverty of Riches," the continuity of which was written by Arthur F. Statter.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Eddie "Bo" Boland's comedy, the working title of which is "A. D. 1943," is nearing completion. Bob Kerr is directing.

Gaylord Lloyd has started production on his latest comedy which is as yet untitled. Erle Kenton is directing.

W. S. Van Dyke, directing the Ruth Roland serial now under production, is at work on the third episode.

Harold Lloyd's latest three-reeler, "Imagination," production of which was recently completed, is now assembled, cut and titled and will soon be run in preview. Mr. Lloyd's next comedy will be a college picture.

Production started today on Harry "Snub" Pollard's seventy-fifth comedy. Charles Parrott is directing.

"My Lady Friends," co-starring Carter De Haven and Flora De Haven, is rapidly nearing completion.

It is expected that Allen Holubar will begin shooting early in June on his new production which is based on an original story. Holubar will again be assisted by Harold Bucquet.

AT REALART

"A Virginia Courtship," from the old play by Eugene Presbery, will be the next production in which May McAvoy will be featured.

"The Girl Who Pays Dividends," by Earl Dehr Biggers, will be the next Wanda Hawley production, which will be produced under the working title, "Her Face Value." Percy Heath wrote the scenario.

AT THE MAYER STUDIO

Although well up to date on his schedule of releases through Associated First National, Louis B. Mayer now has three pictures in the cutting room and is making preparations for the filming of two more productions to get under way within the next two or three weeks.

Both the Anita Stewart and John M. Stahl companies expect to resume production work as soon as the negatives of the foregoing pictures are ready for shipment East.

NEILAN TO PRODUCE TWO FILMS DURING YEAR

Marshall Neilan has just finished a picture starring John Barrymore entitled, "The Lotus Eater." It is an adaptation from Albert Payson Terhune's story of that title. Mr. Neilan is now en route to Los Angeles to start work on his next production. He announces that he will confine his activities during the next twelve months, to the production of two big pictures.

The first of these productions will take six months to complete and will feature Colleen Moore.

As yet nothing has been decided concerning the second photoplay.

Current Reviews

"AN UNWILLING HERO"

California

O. Henry's "Whistling Dick's Christmas Stocking" has been made into a very pretty little celluloid epic by Arthur Statter for Will Rogers. In fact, the picture, which has been retitled "An Unwilling Hero," fills an hour as amusingly as one could possibly desire. It lacks the usual pathos of its star's vehicles, falling back entirely upon his comedy hobo characterization which, may the heavens be praised, remains consistent to the end. There is an unsatisfactory reaction to the cleaned-up tramp and reformed laggard.

The effectively photographed locations are beautiful.

Will Rogers is in his element as Whistling Dick, a lazy, easy-going tramp whom circumstance silhouettes for a space against aristocracy and a romance. Garbed in even more ridiculous clothes than ever, he strolls delightfully through his performance on the back of his heels. He will appeal to anyone with a sense of humor.

Molly Malone and John Bowers as Nadine, an heiress, and Hunter, her true lover and the overseer of her father's plantation, are happily cast and form a convincing reason for Dick's temporary heroism.

Darrel Foss has a few good scenes as Richmond, the gentleman crook, and Edward Kimball characteristically plays Mr. Lovejoy, Nadine's father, a gentleman of the old South.

Nick Cogley and Jack Curtis complete the cast.

Clarence Badger is again responsible for the direction of this Rogers-Goldwyn picture.

"BLACK BEAUTY"

Tally's

Quite naturally we were curious to see how George and Lillian Chester treated Anna Sewell's renowned novel, "Black Beauty," when they scenarized it for production by Vitagraph. We have, and let it be said that this admittedly difficult subject has been handled admirably and in a manner that is not liable to disappoint the original's enthusiasts. The period costuming and gracious characters of the book are captivating on the screen, while the horse himself is given the necessary amount of attention to make it really "Black Beauty."

There is nothing to adversely criticize from a technical standpoint.

Jean Paige heads the human cast in the role of Jessie Gordon, a gentle miss who would willingly sacrifice herself for the good name of her dead brother. Her Dresden china type could not have been better placed than it is here.

James Morrison utilizes all of his refined appeal as Harry Blomefield, Jessie's faithful suitor.

George Webb makes a perfect Sewell villain. With subtly deliberate heartlessness and enviable poise he accomplishes Beckett, the much-hated wretch whose servant at last betrays his crime.

Bobby Mack is an excellent type for the Derby Ghost, which he plays very well indeed.

John Steppling also makes the forceful Squire Gordon very realistic, while Antrim Short gets a tear all his own in his few short scenes as Joe Green, a stable boy.

Adele Farrington and Charles Morrison complete the cast.

The animals are well managed and their action is convincing.

David Smith personally directed this Vitagraph special.

"REPUTATION"

Superba

What is by far the most plausible and best handled picture in which we have seen Priscilla Dean is "Reputation," Universal's local release. It is the dramatic story of a famous but disreputable actress who, due to drugs and alcohol, forgets temporarily a New York engagement and remains in London's Limehouse, only to have her name and reputation stolen from her by her equally talented but unknown daughter.

The mother's further degradation and her revenge upon the woman who deceitfully took her place provide big moments of the story, while the final discovery by the woman that the wronged girl is her own, and the consequent suicide of the former immediately following the vindication, form a highly effective climax.

Miss Dean does the most unusual acting of her career as the selfish but glorious Laura Figlan, who, with only a passing thought for the little daughter whom she believes dead, treads her dissipating way until she brings about her own downfall. Never has she displayed such a keen sense of dramatic proportion. Her make-up is excellent.

The star also enacts Pauline Stevens, the great Figlan's forgotten daughter, who, to save an old man, accepts the identity of the missing artist without realizing their relationship. This part is striknglY contrasted wth the former.

Niles Welch is more than sufficient in the leading male role. He plays the press agent of the supposed Figlan.

Harry Van Meter and Harry Carter, both are good as Figlan's lovers, while a tender touch is given us by Spottiswood Aitken, who plays "Uncle" Karl.

May Giraci and William Welsh complete the list of players.

Stuart Paton directed this special Universal-Jewel offering.

"THROUGH THE BACK DOOR"

Mission

Mary Pickford comes back strong with her latest United Artists Production, "Through the Back Door," completely obliterating all dissatisfied memories of "The Love Light" and re-proving herself America's most remarkable actress and the world's representative ingenue. It would indeed be difficult to choose a more suitable vehicle for little Mary's interpretation than this Marion Fairfax scenario, which includes all of the delicately shaded comedy and pathos necessary in her successes. Charles Rosher's photography of the "just right" sets and locations is unusually beautiful. The sub-titles also add their bit of art to the picture, which anyone could profitably see.

The cast is exceptional for a Pickford production.

The star herself has never given us a more clever child characterization than she does as little Jeanne, the American kiddie whose negligent mother permits her to be raised on a Belgian farm by her old nurse. As the adorably incorrigable ten year old, we see again "Rebecca of Sunnybrook" and "The Little Princess." Miss Pickford has never been more convincing as a child. Moreover her work is just as great when Jeanne's ten summers stretch to fifteen. We have never admired her more.

Gertrude Astor is excellently cast as Mrs. Reeves, Jeanne's ultra modern mother, who despite her frivolity entertains a conscience. She gives one of her most interesting late performances.

Wilfrid Lucas is typical in the role of Jeanne's jealous stepfather, Mr. Reeves.

Helen Raymond departs from her customary "dressed" parts to play Marie, the nurse, who mothers her charge. As may be expected from her previous interpretations, she is very good, while C. Norman Hammond is more than picturesque as Marie's husband.

John Harron appears in the juvenile lead opposite the star. He displays a touch of Bobbie's appeal in his rendition of Bill, the seventeen year old "boy next door."

Adolphe Menjou and Elinor Fair accomplish together the story's heavy work as the Brewsters, a couple with blackmailing tendencies. Menjou has already shown himself to be competent to handle any opposition and Miss Fair is satisfactory.

Theo Alice Carpenter makes a consistently attractive double for the star at five years. It is not at all necessary to strain one's imagination to reconcile the two as one individual, as is so often the case under such circumstances.

Peaches Jackson and Doreen Turner also are well chosen to fill the roles of Conrad and Constant, two Belgian orphans whom Jeanne rescues.

Al Green and Jack Pickford are to be congratulated upon the direction of this entertaining screen play.

"THE CITY OF SILENT MEN"

Grauman's

A Frank Condon adaptation for Paramount of John Moroso's "The City of Silent Men" is released in Los Angeles this week. It stars Thomas Meighan. The story deals with a man who, having been unfairly railroaded to prison, escapes and rises high only to be haunted by visions of the law until he is finally discovered and later exonerated. A sensible little romance adds much of charm to the somewhat usual plot and two or three well handled comedy situations further support it. The scenario presents the play interestingly, and the House Peters has been chosen to play the lead in "The Invisible Power," the next Frank Lloyd-Goldwyn production.

Wallace MacDonald and Doris May were married last week.

"Braco," the great Dane, has completed a part with Clever Comedies.

W. M. Marshall is head cameraman for the Harter-Wall Productions.

Mona Lisa will play the leading feminine role in the new Lois Weber production.

Dorothy Woolley of Australia is on her way to Los Angeles to work for Al and Ray Rockett.

David Kesson, cinematographer, has been placed under long-term contract by Marshall Neilan.

Norma Talmadge has engaged Lydia Hoyt, New York society woman, for her new picture.

Leatrice Joy will have the leading role in "The Poverty of Riches," a Leroy Scott-Goldwyn Production.

King Evers, the five-year-old actor who plays in "The Half Breed," has been placed under contract by Oliver Morosco.

Lloyd Hughes, Ince star, has introduced his brother Earle to the screen. He is cast in the new Lois Weber production.

William D. Taylor is in a Los Angeles hospital undergoing a minor operation. Upon his hospital discharge he will go to Europe.

"Buried Treasure," by F. Britten Austen, will be shown at Grauman's Rialto Sunday, May 15th, with Marion Davies in the leading role.

Patricia Palmer and George Cooper have been added to the cast of "The Glorious Fool," the Mary Roberts Rinehart story which is being directed by E. Mason Hopper.

Marie Mosquini, playing leads in the Harry "Snub" Pollard Comedies, has purchased a new home on Victoria Drive and has already taken possession.

Wilbur Higby has been signed by Lois Weber to appear in her forthcoming productions. Mr. Higby will play a leading role in a photoplay upon which Miss Weber started work early in May.

L. E. Wall, formerly connected with the Kernco Film Corporation in the capacity of director at Bakersfield, is now associated with the Harter-Wall productions. This new company expects to complete its first two-reel comedy about June 1st.

"Red" Golden, assistant director; Walter Lundin, cameraman; Fred Gill, "prop" man, and Hank Kochler, all of the Harold Lloyd Company, have returned to the studio after a five days' fishing trip at Deep Creek and Summit.

Benjamin B. Hampton has just returned from a four day sojourn in Ventura County, where he retired to put the finishing touches on the photodramatization of his next production, "The Mysterious Rider," photoplay of the novel of Zane Grey, which recently finished production.

Pickups By the Staff

PAT O'MALLEY HURT

Pat O'Malley, working in a scene for Marion Fairfax's "The Lying Truth," was painfully hurt when he leaped from a twenty-foot bridge to the limb of a tree which broke under his weight.

A sprained ankle and a wrenched knee were the total casualties. Pat is still in bed, but expects to be at work again in a few days.

PALMER DISCUSSES CENSORSHIP

In order to gain a more friendly and understanding attitude towards motion pictures, a number of citizens of Santa Ana gathered at the home of Superior Judge Thomas recently to discuss motion picture censorship with Frederick Palmer, president of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation. Those present included members of the local board of censors, the board of education, and many clergymen.

ANNUAL EQUITY MEETING

The annual meeting of the Actors' Equity Association will be held at the Astor Hotel on Friday, June 3d, at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon, when the election of officers and members of the council and other business will be transacted. Members are informed that the semi-annual dues of $6.00 are payable on May 1st.

Realart Studio employes are to have an old-fashioned picnic and barbecue on Sunday, May 15th.

The Century Film Corporation will remove its lions to Universal City. They will still be handled by Charles Gay, their former trainer.

Mr. and Mrs. Hal Wilson will celebrate their silver wedding Friday, May 13th. They were married in 1896 in Melbourne, Australia.

Julius Stern, president of the Century Film Corporation, has left for a trip to Europe. He will make a week stop-over at New York.

Edward Peil has returned to Los Angeles from New York where he filled a twenty-three weeks' engagement in D. W. Griffith's "Dream Street."

Charles Ray has returned to the studio after a vacation trip to the Grand Canyon, following the completion of "The Barnstormer," his latest First National release.

Maurice Tourneur announces that Charles Von Enger photographed "The Last of the Mohicans." Other parties have been taking credit for the camera work on the picture.

Max Linder, the French comedy film star, will journey to New York to see his countryman, George Carpentier, meet the American heavyweight champion, Jack Dempsey.

May McAvoy is planning a ten days' rest before starting her new picture, "A Virginia Courtship." She has just completed "Everything for Sale" by Hector Turnbull, which was directed by Frank O'Conner.

Marjorie Daw, who has been with Marshall Neilan for the past two years, has been released from his organization by mutual arrangement. Miss Daw is now appearing in Marion Fairfax's initial production.

KATHLEEN NORRIS ADDED TO EMINENT AUTHORS

After a protracted holiday in Europe, Kathleen Norris and Major Norris will return to their literary work. Mrs. Norris is the latest author to be added to the Goldwyn roster and she will come to the Culver City studio after her arrival in New York.

ANN SCHAFFER

TUCKER RECOVERING

Dr. Robert V. Day, physician to George Loane Tucker, wishes to state that Mr. Tucker, while still confined to his home, is on the road to recovery.

Lee Moran will henceforth be introduced as an individual comedy star, having split professionally with Eddie Lyons, his earstwhile partner.

Theodore Roberts, who has been playing a prominent part in "Hail the Woman," at the Ince studio, is in a Los Angeles hospital having undergone a serious operation.

Metro has signed Director George D. Baker, whose first picture will be a Gareth Hughes starring vehicle. Mr. Baker has just arrived from New York and is preparing to make three productions. The first is "Hunch," by Percival Wilde.

Various changes are taking place in the personnel of the Goldwyn organization. Victor Schertzinger's contract expires at the end of his current production. Clarence Badger is reported as having completed his contract, and Will Rogers, it is thought, will leave Goldwyn to form his own company.

F. J. Godsol, Goldwyn executive, Charles Chaplin and Dorothy Dalton were the guests of Max Linder at a dinner party at the Ambassador in Los Angeles, together with Claire Windsor, Grace Kingsley, M. Gomier and Clarke Irvine. The dinner preceded the preview of Linder's new comedy, "Who Pays My Wife's Bills?" at the Rosemary Theatre in Ocean Park.

UNIVERSALITES STAGE MUSICAL COMEDY

Employes of the Universal Fort Lee laboratories will present to the public a three-act musical comedy entitled "Black and White" at the Hunt's Point Palace, 163rd St. and Southern Blvd., New York City, Saturday evening, May 14th.

The revue is the work of H. R. Parsons, author of several soldier talent musical comedies in the A. E. F. Parsons now is a member of the staff of Universal's laboratory department.

Marie Prevost, who is to be starred in Universal pictures, will make a personal appearance during the performance.

The proceeds will be devoted to the welfare work being conducted by the mutual welfare association of Universal employes.

ELECTRICIANS MEET

The regular meeting of the Electric Illuminating Engineers' Society was held this week at the Louis B. Mayer Studios where R. E. Naumann acted as host and chief guide in a tour of the studio stages.

AT THE FOX STUDIOS

Tom Mix is finishing his current production, "Big Town Round Up." After a brief rest, Mr. Mix will start on his next picture, the name of which has not been announced as yet.

Buck Jones will finish "The Mediator" presently, and will take a much needed vacation.

Johnnie Walker and Edna Murphy of "Over the Hill," are co-starring in "Live Wires" now being made under the direction of Edward Sedgwick.

Al St. John's current production, "Made to Order," will be finished this week. The director-comedian says his next picture will start immediately.

CENTURY COMEDIES

Fred Fishback has just finished a comedy entitled "The Thinker," and has already started a "Brownie" comedy, featuring Brownie, the wonder dog.

Billy Watson has recently completed a Peggy Jean and Charles Dorety comedy, a rural story entitled "Third Class Male," and is at work shooting his new comedy at the beach with a cast including Charles Dorety, Peggy Jean and Cupie Dolan.

Tom Buckingham has started a new Harry Sweet comedy. Dorothy Dee is Sweet's new leading lady.

"The Eagle Man" is the title of the two-reel Western thriller, the newest of the C. Edward Hatton pictures, which Hatton is producing for release by the State Right Market through C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

Catherine Loraine's last comedy, just completed under the direction of Fred Caldwell, will be titled, "The Four Drunkmen."

AT METRO

Metro's fourth producing unit has gone into action at the company's Hollywood studio with the arrival from New York of George D. Baker and his corps of assistants. Mr. Baker has selected "The Hunch," a story by Percival Wilde, as the first production. Gareth Hughes will be featured in this picture.

Viola Dana with her company will spend the next ten days at Coronado Beach where the exterior scenes for "The Match Breaker," the star's newest picture, will be filmed.

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan, Edith Johnson, and a troupe of fifty players, have completed their location work at Big Bear on "The Princess of the Desert Dream," and have returned to the studio.

Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester are expected to complete the film version of their latest story within another month. Most of the studio scenes have been finished.

NEW R-C EXCHANGE MANAGERS

Charles R. Rogers, General Manager of the Robertson-Cole Company, has just announced a number of changes in the personnel of the branch exchange managers.

Roy E. Flagler has been appointed manager of the Indianapolis branch.

Sherman S. Webster has been selected as the manager at Cleveland.

Carl J. Conin has been appointed the Washington branch manager, and William C. Cook, is the new manager at Omaha.

ENTER—NOVO FILMS

The Novo Syndicate will shortly enter the feature production field and "Novo Films" will make their first bow to the public. The new concern is backed by St. Louis capital and its vice-president and general manager, Mr. R. A. Glasgow, arrived in Los Angeles last week to make the necessary preliminary arrangements for its entry into the independent field.

Mr. Martin C. Anderson, theatrical and motion picture man, is secretary-treasurer and production manager for the syndicate. Mr. Anderson will reach Los Angeles on or about May 25th, and shortly after his arrival the company will begin operation. The management has several studio and office locations under consideration and production announcements will be made as soon as negotiations for a location have been completed.

The policy of the company will be to produce five to seven-reel feature pictures and the output will be limited to twelve pictures per year.

The company expects to exploit and market its own productions, in all of which all star casts will be used.

AT LASKY'S

Plans for Gloria Swanson's second Paramount star picture have been altered and it is now announced that she will next make a screen version of "The Shulamite," instead of a story by Edward Sheldon as formerly stated. "The Shulamite" was originally a novel by Alice and Claud Askew, and was later made into a three-act play by Edward Knoblock and Claud Askew, and is now being scenarized by J. E. Nash. Sam Wood has again been assigned to direct Miss Swanson, but as yet no details of the cast have been decided upon. May 16th is the approximate date of starting. Meanwhile Elinor Glyn's "The Great Moment," Miss Swanson's latest starring vehicle, is being cut and assembled.

FINAL TITLE GIVEN BUTLER STORY

"Making the Grade" has been chosen as the final title of David Butler's newest five reel feature which was recently made for Irving Lesser. It will soon be released.

Katherine MacDonald's forthcoming starring vehicle, "A Man's Game," is nearing completion, under the direction of J. A. Barry.

John M. Stahl is expecting to be busy by the end of the week, on the preliminary arrangements for his next production.

ORGANIZATION FORMED TO COMBAT IMPORTATION OF GERMAN FILMS

Last Wednesday evening twenty Los Angeles civic and film organizations were represented at a gathering held for the purpose of organizing a concentrated campaign against the importation and exhibition of German films.

Several committees were named to facilitate matters. The following is a list of them and their chairmen: Organization Committee headed by Ernest Joy; Legislative Committee, John Clark, Los Angeles attorney; Finance Committee, J. Horne; Information Committee, J. M. Buzzell of the Central Labor Union, and the Publicity and Advertising Committee, William Mooney.

The Organization Committee will immediately select a title for the new body which will be conducted along purely patriotic lines. Its eventual mission is to influence the passing of a tariff bill in Congress affecting all European films.

GOLDWYN IMPORTS FILMS FROM ITALY

While in Rome during his recent trip abroad, arrangements were concluded by Samuel Goldwyn, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, with the Unione Cinematografica Italiana, known as the U. C. I., whereby a series of pictures made by this company will be distributed in the United States by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. This announcement was made recently at the sales convention of Goldwyn branch managers now in session at the studio.

The Goldwyn Company is now making plans to release thea first two pictures of the group. The first one will be "Theodora," based upon Victorien Sardou's drama.

"Theodora" will be followed by "The Ship," founded on d'Annunzio's novel, "La Nave," with Ida Rubinstein, the Russian dancer, in the featured role. This picture which was a year in the making, was directed by the son of the poet, Gabrielle d'Annunzio, Jr.

Anna Q. Nilsson has been working opposite John Barrymore, under Marshall Neilan's direction, in "The Lotus Eaters."

We started out last week to demonstrate the process that is used by the photodramatist in building a plot. One of the favorite means of making a start was described as being the selection of a big situation which would constitute a dramatic climax, and then by the use of the process of deduction and elimination to establish a chain of circumstances which would logically lead to such a situation.

Some writers will tell you that they begin with a situation, others choose a title, while still others get their inspiration from a character. When we bear in mind that dramatic titles and strong characters suggest big dramatic situations, it brings us back to the point described above—that of building our story around a single big idea.

In order to demonstrate the combination of a strong character with a big situation, I am going to discard the idea with which we started last week and adopt a new one. Let us start all over again.

A couple of years ago I made a trip into the high Sierra mountains in the central part of California. After traversing a mountain road by automobile for ninety miles out of Fresno, it was found necessary to travel two days and nights further into an almost unknown country, by pack train. Finally arriving at our destination at the foot of the famous Tehipite Dome, we camped.

Away back in this isolated country, which during the winter time is totally cut off from civilization by heavy snows, we met two prospectors. One of them was an old man of perhaps sixty-five, while the other was a much younger chap of around thirty. Naturally, they welcomed the advent of human beings into their little camp. For two years these men had been alone in this great silent expanse of mountains and forests. In search of the elusive yellow metal, they had driven a tunnel one hundred feet deep into the mountains, and through their lonely association and work they had become inseparable friends.

The younger man impressed me greatly. He possessed a very strong character and was just such a type of man as Dustin Farnum, or Tom Santschi. Around the camp fire that night, as we smoked our pipes and discussed everything in general, I asked these two men if they never felt a longing for the companionship of the fairer sex. They had told me that for two years neither of them had seen any human being other than one another, with the exception of a few cattle men, who had come in in the spring of the year and again in the fall. The reply of the two men to my question does not matter, but right then and there I got an idea for a big story. Why not use the younger man in my story as the principal character, involving him in a big dramatic situation, and then build my plot around that?

One of the most inspiring situations of the basic thirty-seven is "To make a sacrifice for an ideal." This suggested that I involve my prospector friend in a big situation which would lead to a voluntary sacrifice for an ideal at the climax. A very dear thing to him might be the love of a woman who in some manner is brought into his isolated domain. One's own honor is certainly an ideal. This suggests the idea of having the prospector sacrifice the love of a girl for his honor. Therefore, this shall be the climax of the plot, which we are going to build, and to which we will apply our process of deduction and elimination in the next chapter.

THE MARKET

We lost out on the sale of one of the five reel westerns which I mentioned in last week's Camera. The company desiring the same advised me today that they have already procured a story for thir next release. It will, therefore, be five or six weeks before they will need another story.

The other company, being a new one which has not yet started production, has not definitely decided, but has a number of stories in view. There is, therefore, still a market for a good fast-moving, red-blooded western story, featuring a male lead, and which can be produced for $15,000.

There is a call for a number of breezy two reel, fast-moving sporting comedies, with a male star. These stories should deal with such locale as the race track, the prize ring, the base-ball park, the gymnasium, Olympic games, etc.

An independent producer, here from the East, who has not as yet selected a studio, director, cast or story, is in the market for a series of five reel society dramas. The stories must be clean, and should be of such a nature that they can be produced for fifteen to twenty thousand dollars each. Several stories have been submitted to him, but nothing has been decided upon.

Another thing we lost out on was the five reel farce comedy of the Douglas MacLean type which I mentioned last week. After trying everywhere for a story, and not finding anything that suited, the scenario department of the studio which was looking for this story got busy and rushed out one. Thus the freelancers cannot say that they were not given a chance first.

There is still a market for one or two stories with character ingenue leads, although a couple have been purchased.

I suggest that all of my readers send in their subscriptions to Camera in order to be assured of receiving the paper regularly and benefiting from the valuable information which it contains in every departmnet.

George M. Yohalem has completed the continuity for "Lotus Blossom," to be produced by the Leong But Jung Productions, Inc. The original story was written by Mr. Leong, who did the technical work in "Broken Blossoms," "Crooked Streets," "Pagan God," and "A Cup of Life," a forthcoming Thomas H. Ince production.

James Cruze plans to start presently on Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's forthcoming comedy, "Should a Man Marry?"

The company making "At the End of the World," headed by Betty Compson, and directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws, will leave shortly for location on the coast.

ESTABLISHES PACIFIC COAST BRANCH OFFICE

Bernard A. Goodman, who arrived here recently from New York, has established a Pacific Coast branch office in the Mason Building and is negotiating a releasing contract for the feature pictures of the Van Curen Productions Corporation which are to be distributed on the state rights basis by the Clark-Cornelius Corporation of New York.

Negotiations are also being concluded for the world-wide distribution of a series of six five-reel pictures for the Milburn Morante Producing Company, the first of which, "Bill and the Baby," has just been completed and shipped.

KERN REPRODUCING PAINTINGS

George H. Kern has added James Rowe, Louis Troster, Joseph Roi, Meyer Ouhajou, Jos. Stern, Nancy Brown and Ami Torreani to his staff of players staging the biblical episodes of "The Unfoldment." Mr. Kern has also completed the reproduction of Dore's "Jesus Healing the Sick"; Hofmann's "Christ in the Temple"; Dore's "Nativity" and Raphael's "Sistine Madonna" for "The Unfoldment." During the coming week Dore's "Crucifixion" and the works of other notable artists will be reproduced.

Mrs. Ida Moss and her four weeks' old daughter are playing the roles of "The Madonna" and the "Child" in the biblical episodes of "The Unfoldment."

Percy Marmont is creating the leading of "The Price," to be called "Love Is Everything."

The Vera Gordon Dramatic Club of Milwaukee has been organized as a tribute to the art of Vera Gordon.

ON LOCATION

Harry Le Vere is prograssing rapidly with the first production of his series of two-reel westerns, featuring Nevada Carson in the character of "Desert Ann." The company is on location near San Jacinto.

Freeman Smith, formerly purchasing agent for the Robert Brunton Studios, is now associated with the Arthur H. Gooden Studios in the capacity of assistant studio manager.

Exclusive rights to the only motion picture that will be made of Jack Dempsey in actual training for his coming fight in defense of his heavyweight crown against George Carpentier, have just been obtained by Pathe Exchange.

Josephine Miranda is playing a prominent role in "The Canyon Kid," starring Eileen Percy, at Fox.

Three-year-old Muriel Frances Dana has just finished an important role in the Ince all-star cast production of "Hail the Woman!"

With a carefully selected cast, William de Mille has started his new production, a Rita Weiman story.

TITLE SERVICE THAT SERVES ..... DO YOU KNOW
THAT the pictures that sell . . . are the ones with good TITLES?
THAT the public demands the best TITLES?
THAT at 218 Lissner Building, you can get the best TITLES in the country?
THAT while you try to save a few dollars, by SHOOTING your own TITLES, you are really losing money because you are not properly fixed to do the work?
THAT we are thoroughly equipped to give you the best of everything in the TITLE line. Borders, Art Backgrounds, Double-exposures, Disolves, Irises, in fact everything you may desire.
THAT if you will send us yous list of TITLES for your next production, you will have no more worry. We return you the finished product, all you have to do is cut them in your picture. And the COST will be less than you can do it yourself.

DE SHON AT GRAUMAN'S

The prima-donna, Estelle De Shon, formerly with the original De Koven Opera Company, will be the featured soloist during next week at the Grauman Broadway Theatre. She will be heard in the Santupza number from Mascagni's one-act opera "Cavalleria Rusticana" from the Sicilian tale of Giovanni Vergi, the romanza in which Santuzza tells her sad story of betrayal to Lucia, Turridu's mother. This song, "Voi lo Sapete," was a favorite of Calve, who always gave it a place on her song-recital programs.

Members of Maurice Tourneur's company returned from New York this week where they have been working in scenes for Tourneur's forthcoming Associated Producers' production, "The Foolish Matrons," under the direction of Clarence L. Brown.

The final scenes of the production were made in the east and the production is now being edited for release in the near future.

TO MAKE COMEDIES

The Robert L. Fargo Productions will start filming the first of two one-reel comedies a month, starring Harry Mann. They will be released through the Arrow Film Corporation. The Kinema Bureau will do the casting and Miss Bob Hunter has charge of the scenarios. These one-reelers will be filmed at the National Studios.

COMEDIANS SIGN WITH ITALIAN-AMERICAN FILM CO.

"Shorty" Callahan and Steve Soldi have just signed a year's contract with the Italian-American Film Company to make a series of two-reel comedies. The first of the series entitled "Hans and Jans," will go into production shortly.

GOES SOUTH

Reginald Lyons whose latest photographic accomplishment is "Black Beauty," is on his way to Tulsa, Oklahoma, to fill an engagement with the W. M. Smith productions starring Franklyn Farnum under George Holt's direction.

Mr. Lyons will film eight features for this company.

Marshall Neilan—through the courtesy of Gilson Willett—secured the services of Lucy Fox, Pathe Star, for the John Barrymore picture, "The Lotus Eater," now being completed.

Mr. George Rowan has accepted an engagement as assistant director to Fred Caldwell, who is now directing Catherine Loraine in a series of two-reel comedies. Mr. Rowan was formerly associated with Caldwell in musical comedy.

camera work is satisfactory. Real shots of Sing Sing are employed as a setting for the prison sequences.

Mr. Meighan offers an excellent performance as Jim Montgomery alias Jack Nelson, a country boy who wins against terrible odds. This role is more suitable to the star than have been several of his previous ones.

Lois Wilson manages the small but sympathetic leading feminine role, Molly Bryant, with her customary understanding. Her work is always human.

George MacQuarrie plays the heavy, or Kearney, a man hunter. He is quite typical.

Paul Everton provides a laugh and aids the plot development in the part of old Bill, a "white crook."

Good work is done by Kate Bruce and Guy Oliver in their several scenes as Mrs. Montgomery and Mr. Bryant.

Tom Forman directed the production, which was made both here and in the East.

"HABIT"

Ambassador

First National presents the Louis B. Mayer production, "Habit," featuring an all star cast headed by Mildred Harris, at the Ambassador this week. The story, which in itself is a highly inconsistent drama, is probably saved by a surprise dream finish, a method of smoothing over the improbable which has been out of practice just long enough to let this one "get by" with the public. We certainly hope, however, that our scenarists won't get into the "habit" of utilizing this once-so-run-in-the-ground manner of winding up our future screen entertainment. Memories of the days when it was crammed down our throats on every hand as the usual course of procedure are too poignant to permit our taking another chance.

Photographically the production is satisfactory, but it was poorly projected when we reviewed it.

Mildred Harris fails to create any impression whatsoever as Irene Fletcher, a victim of the habit of luxury. She is neither fascinating nor wholesome in her work, and certainly she fails to offer a convincing characterization. Her interpretation in "The Woman in His House" was superior in every way to this one.

William Lawrence is well cast and quite consistent in the role of John Marshall, a young architect, whom Irene prefers finally to an expensive wardrobe.

Walter McGrail's performance of Munson, the heavy, is the picture's most commanding acting and the best that we have seen him do. His personality is suited to this type of thing.

Emmett C. King is good as Fletcher, Irene's bankrupt father, and Ethel Grey Terry plays Mary Chatres, Irene's confidante.

Edwin Carewe directed the production for Mayer.

Miss Mayme Krasne of Omaha is seeing screenland at close range as the guest of the Metro Pictures Corporation.

AGAINST GERMAN FILMS

The Assistant Directors' Association of California passed the following resolutions at its last meeting, April 29th, held in its clubrooms in Hollywood:

1. That competent authorities have not made a peace with Germany, and that a state of war still exists between this country and Germany.
2. That during the war it was found to be a fact that the popular motion picture was the greatest means used to mould public opinion, and our Government did use this vehicle continuously during the great war.
3. That evidence has been conclusively presented by proper and competent authorities that this country is being propagandized by Germany not only to foment civil unrest, but to create a feeling of animosity between the citizens of this country and those of its allies.
4. That at this time American capital is being heavily invested in German film companies and the product of German film producing companies.
5. That motion picture films from these sources are being brought to the United States for exhibition purposes.
6. That these German films are being exhibited and advertised not as German films, but as "European films."
7. The above mentioned American capital is now and has been for some time withdrawing its financial support from its American producing enterprises that it might participate in the exploitation of the cheaply purchased German films.
8. This withdrawal of financial support has been the cause of the closing of many motion picture studios in Hollywood and New York.
9. That this closing of studios has been the cause of thousands of men and women being thrown out of employment.
10. Two German films exhibited to date have taken for their subjects the fictionized lives of two rulers of countries allied with the United States, thus holding up to ridicule those rulers and their countries in the eyes of the American people; therefore,

Be It Resolved, That the Assistant Directors' Association of California does go on record as being unqualifiedly against this most un-American practice of removing the resources of America to a foreign country, particularly Germany; and,

Be It Further Resolved, That Congress should be requested to take immediate action to stop this wrong, either by prohibition of trade with an enemy country or by enacting such tariff laws as will fully protect American industry from the encroachment of these German products which in no way assist in supporting the Government or citizens of this country; and

That copies of this resolution shall be sent to the President of the United States, members of Congress, the Governor of California, State Legislature, the Mayor of Los Angeles and the City Council, the Motion Picture Producers' Association, Motion Picture Directors' Association, and the general public.

Cecil B. de Mille will go on location shortly for scenes in his new production adapted from Leonard Merrick's story, "The Lady and the Laurels."

"Her Own Money," by Mark Swan, and scenarized by Elmer Rice, is to afford a starring vehicle for Ethel Clayton. Work will begin around the last of May. In all probability Joseph Henabery will handle the megaphone.

Wallace Reid left to-day for New York, where he will co-star with Elsie Ferguson in the George Fitzmaurice production of "Peter Ibbetson." Mr. Reid is expected to return in July to continue his work at the studio.

A Film Fair

Partly because we live in sunny and enterprising California, we know much about stock fairs, fruit exhibitions and such. Indeed we read constantly of them in the papers and note many billboard and placard mentions of them from month to month. Moreover, they have always occurred to us as being very commendable in that the custom of holding them was occasioned by the just pride of the men who, down through the years, have expended their energies unstintingly to perfect the various industries which are thus publicized, and the interest of these people in contributing all possible knowledge concerning their accomplishments to the education of the world. We also recognize the fact that affairs of this sort invariably prove highly profitable to the business of the communities in which they are held, since they attract thousands of open purses within their gates.

Yes, certainly such a practice is a good thing and one to be maintained; which brings us to a subject which we have had under consideration for some days. How much would a world's exposition of the motion picture, staged in Los Angeles, benefit our profession? How much would it mean in dollars and cents for the third industry to gain the attention of the world's big minds for its latest artistic and technical achievements in this manner?

With the Chamber of Commerce behind us, a position which it would occupy to its own great good, who can estimate the extent of the results?

Aside from the financial end, which would in itself encourage an attempt upon the part of the city, what would the moral influence of an undertaking of this kind mean to us, as partners in the furtherance of one of the world's foremost lines of artistic endeavor?

Thus far, we have never properly "cashed in" upon our popularity and we have repeatedly neglected good bets for the elevating of our position otherwise. Why? Still further, a thing of this kind, correctly put over, would bring together, probably at Exposition Park, the best that we can offer in the latest work of our actors, artists, writers, producers, photographers, etc., and the interesting materials with which they gain their effects. Even our contemporaries would learn much.

It is easy to discern why the commercial life of the city would back us in this, for a sufficient campaign would fill to capacity the incoming trains, not only with representatives of the various phases of picture making, but with hordes of tourists, fascinated with the idea of witnessing all filmland on display.

Very nearly as much wealth as poured into San Francisco during the Fair would inevitably be scattered in Los Angeles' midst.

We do not indulge in much impractical pipe dreaming, but this plan seems to us both feasible and vital. What about it?

A Producers' Split?

If one were to listen to current rumors, it would be learned that the foreign film question will quickly split the Motion Picture Producers' Association; that that organization is liable to contain three corporations after the break; that they will represent the capital which has been invested in the cheaper product from "over there," and that the rest of the original body, and by far the largest part of it, will in all probability then create an association of its own, with American production foremost in mind.

It seems that several companies who might otherwise have favorably considered following in the footsteps of their pioneering brothers in the corraling of this continental material, which is so attractively economical (at least to them), have been restrained, as it were, by the agitation against these films which has cropped up over the country. The Independents, of course, have always been opposed to this procedure, and many outfits are quite strenuously inclined to denounce the entire principle.

Indeed, it is not likely that those who have not yet became financially tied up with European producing concerns will do so now. Meanwhile, it is up to those who have, to fight it through or lose their investments.

All very plain, isn't it? At that, we marvel, as we undoubtedly will continue to do, at the financial antics of our very fascinating industry. In the words of the immortal————————, "You never can tell!"

The "Type" Again

This week's reviews brought to mind again the idea that some of our casting directors would do well to forget the word "type" and supply in its place the welcome noun "actor." The fact that a man looks a role certainly does not comprise cleverness on his part, to say nothing of its failure to provide even near-technique. A real actor fills any bill and is an economy to his company. Every man in his place, say we!

Film Capital Production Notes

U. A. TO MAKE "PEG O' MY HEART"

That the United Artists plan to produce "Peg O' My Heart" with Laurette Taylor has been brought to light through an offer from Hiram Abrams, President of that organization, made to Marshall Neilan to handle the film adaptation of the Manners play.

The picturization of this play has involved a number of court actions resulting in the injunction awarded J. Hartley Manners, the author, preventing Famous Players-Lasky from releasing the motion picture version of the story produced several years ago with Wanda Hawley in the leading role.

Recent activities indicate that United Artists have secured the motion picture rights and it is said that Laurette Taylor has been engaged to play the role which was hers originally.

Mr. Neilan is prevented from accepting Mr. Abrams' offer on account of his own production, which is expected to keep him busy during the next six months.

"LORNA DOONE" IN PRODUCTION

After months of preparation, the designing of costumes and settings, the selection of locales, etc., Maurice Tourneur has started the actual filming of R. D. Blackmore's immortal story, "Lorna Doone," from the adaptation and continuity written by Catherine Reed and Cecil Mumford.

Mr. Tourneur is reluctant to mention the names of the various players who will appear in the production, other than the fact that it will be an all-star production which is being cast as the story progresses.

BUSTER KEATON FIRST NATIONAL STAR

Associated First National's newest star is Buster Keaton, who has been making a series of comedies for Metro release.

Keaton is now in New York whither he was reported to have gone to make final arrangements for his marriage to Miss Natalie Talmadge.

It is believed that he will continue to produce in Los Angeles.

PREPARING SECOND WALSH PICTURE

Final scenes of "Serenade," the R. A. Walsh production, have been taken on the Brunton lot and the film is to be titled and edited simultaneously with the preparation of the script of "Kindred of the Dust," the next Walsh production.

Miriam Cooper, who played the leading female roles in "The Oath," and "Serenade," will also be the heroine in the next R. A. Walsh production.

FIRST KIRKWOOD FEATURE READY

The first of the Lasky productions featuring James Kirkwood has been shipped to New York and will be released shortly for a Broadway showing. "The Wise Fool," developed from Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Money Master," is the title of this Paramount picture, which was directed by George Melford.

PHIL HURN SCENARIST

Philip H. Hurn is responsible for the continuity of the current Rockett picture, "Handle with Care." The play was reconstructed for the screen from a Charles Belmont Davis story, "All the Men Who Would Die for Her."

MACDONALD PICTURE TITLED

Katherine MacDonald's last picture made for First National release by the Ambassador Pictures Corporation is to be titled "Sticks and Stones." The working title was "Man's Game." Actual shooting upon her next, "Peachie," will commence next week.

BARTHELMESS FORMS INDEPENDENT COMPANY

Richard Barthelmess, following in the footsteps of Charles Ray, Charles Chaplin and others, is the latest screen luminary to join the ranks of independent stars.

He has left the fold of D. W. Griffith to "go on his own," and under contracts just signed will release his independent productions through Associated First National.

Negotiations for the organization of the new independent producing company with Barthelmess as its stellar attraction have just been concluded by Charles H. Duell, Jr. The company, which will be known as Inspiration Pictures, Inc., has been capitalized at $1,500,000. Under the terms Barthelmess will be starred by the company for two years.

Work on the first production is expected to start presently.

AT THE ROACH STUDIO

The Ruth Roland company has resumed work on the location set called "The Indian Village," where some "shots" are now being taken for the forthcoming Ruth Roland serial.

Harold Lloyd's last picture was run off in final preview recently. The releasing title is "I Do." The star will start work next week on a comedy, the working title of which will be announced later. Mildred Davis will play opposite him.

Production started this week on a convict story for Harry "Snub" Pollard. Marie Mosquini will play the feminine lead.

Erle Kenton, directing the fifth Gaylor Lloyd picture in the "Uncle Luke" series, expects to conclude the comedy within a few days.

AT METRO

Bayard Veiller is about to begin work on his second feature production in which Viola Dana will be starred. Actual filming of the picture will be started as soon as Miss Dana completes work in her forthcoming production, "The Match Breaker."

Mr. Veiller's new production is from the pen of Frank R. Adams and has been tentatively re-titled, "Under the Sour Apple Tree."

Bert Lytell and members of his company are at Glendale, shooting exteriors for his Franz Molnar story, "A Trip to Paradise," which June Mathis adapted for the screen. Maxwell Karger is directing the production.

AT UNIVERSAL

Robert Thornby has been selected to direct Harry Carey in his first Jewel feature, which will be started within a week. The story selected for Carey is "Bransford of Rainbow Ridge," from the pen of Eugene Manlove Rhodes.

Marie Prevost's first starring vehicle will be "The Butterfly," an original story by Percival Wilde. "Kissed," the Arthur Somers Roche story, will probably follow. Work will start immediately upon the star's arrival from New York.

Carmel Myers is at work on "The Black Cap," an original narrative by Wadsworth Camp. Jack Conway, who has recently directed her in "The Scarlet Shawl," is again guilding her before the camera.

Hoot Gibson has begun his first five-reel feature, "The Mascotte of the Three Star," by J. Allen Dunn. Jack Ford is directing.

The first step toward the production of "Conflict," Priscilla Dean's forthcoming super-feature, has been taken, for the star

"THE EDUCATION OF ELIZABETH"

California

This is a great week for Paramount comedies. Even the California is showing one in the Zukor presented production, "The Education of Elizabeth," which stars Billie Burke. The scenario, which is by Elmer Harris, is a well-balanced although not particularly new or startling little affair, containing some excellent characterizations and good contrasts. The locations and sets are consistent and the photography adequate.

Billie herself is charming and altogether satisfies with her performance of Elizabeth Banks, a New York chorus girl, who finds it necessary to "improve" that she may merit her blue-blooded but unromantic fiance. She is delightfully awkward and slangy, and her old pep is present in large quantities. Her girlishness is quite remarkable.

Lumsden Hare is himself responsible for an excellently rendered part. He enacts the bald-headed aristocratic Thomas Fairfax who, despite his family traditions and middle age, enjoys a tolerant disposition and a hankering for the bright lights. The manner in which he manipulates his two rowdy lady loves "gets over" his character to a tee.

Donald Cameron really plays the leading male part, Harry Fairfax, but his action is far from complicated. In fact it is unusually brief.

Edith Shayne is very good as Lucy Fairfax, the spinster, who educates Elizabeth only to be rejuvenated herself. Her work is always finished.

Frederick Burton in the role of her elderly suitor, Charles Middleton, is quite amusing.

Harold Forshay, Helen Dahl, Kay MacClausland, and Frank Goldsmith are included in the list of players.

Edward Dillon handled the direction of this picture, which was made in the east.

"TWO WEEKS WITH PAY"

Clune's

A Realart picture which is somewhat more entertaining than that company's usual ingenue output, is this week's release, "Two Weeks With Pay," starring Bebe Daniels. At that, it doesn't contain the valuable material that "Ducks and Drakes" had to its credit, either in the way of story, characterizations or subtitles. It is a tale of a shop girl who poses as a moving picture star for several more or less worthy reasons, and is unrelieved by new angles. However, some artistic sets and ample photography add their share to the satisfaction of the piece.

Miss Daniels is seen in the role of Pansy O'Dowell, whose striking resemblance to Marie La Tour, a screen actress, leads her to borrow the latter's identity for a space in the name of charity and romance. The star also plays the La Tour part which, while necessary to the plot development, involves little or no action. The former role Miss Daniel treats about as usual. It will please her followers.

The masculine lead is competently filled by Jack Mulhall, who does J. Livingston Smith energetically. This gentleman also has a secret, as is revealed late in the picture. Mr. Mulhall is certainly doing his share of Realarting.

James Mason is excellently suited to his part, Algy Claybourne, the heavy. Mason has upon his list some of the "dirtiest" villains that we have seen celluloided.

Walter Hiers, George Periolat, Frances Raymond and Lucien Littlefield all handle supporting roles well.

Maurice Campbell directed the production.

"BURIED TREASURE"

Grauman's Rialto

Famous-Players releases this week the Cosmopolitan production, "Buried Treasure," featuring Marion Davies. It will will an indefinite engagement in this city. The play, which is taken from a story by F.

RICHARD HEADRICK

Who Plays the Baby in "The Sage Hen"

Britten Austin, deals with a young girl who is visited by trances which reveal her former incarnations to herself. That this subconscious train of thought finally leads her to buried pirate treasure may seem a little "too much so" to practical minds, but there are always those among us with remarkable theories to corroborate, who will undoubtedly enjoy this phase of the story to the fullest; also the mere fact that a film play is overdrawn scarcely sets it aside as different in this Robert W. Chambers age of literature.

Anyway, there are enough big situations in the film to hold the attention constantly, and the performances of the supporting cast are entertaining. The camera work is unusually beautiful.

Miss Davies is not exceptionally interesting as Pauline Vandermuller, the madcap daughter of a millionaire. Someway from a woman of her type one expects poise and in an ingenue role on this order she is too obvious to please. We would observe in an attempt at absolute justice that she has often been unfortunately cast.

It is rather good to see Norman Kerry again in a romantic part such as Dr. Grant, the one which he ably fills in this production.

Anders Raldolf inserts much of his forceful personality into the interpretation of Wm. Vandermullen, the "pirate of Wall Street," and Pauline's irascible parent. William certainly is a disciplining terror when one considers the meek position usually accepted with thanks by the modern American father of grown children. For a business man he also takes an unusual interest in the most casual movement of his family.

Edith Shayne is good as Mrs. Vandermullen and Earl Schenck plays their son, Geoffrey.

John Charles makes a spectacular villain out of Duc De Chavannes, to say the least. He gives the best performance of a conversational pest that we have seen. He even set our nerves on edge away down in the audience. We sympathized with poor Marion, for most of his volubility was directed at her head.

George D. Baker both directed the picture and scenarized the story.

"THE TRAVELING SALESMAN"

Grauman's

Enlivening indeed is Walter Woods' adaptation of James Forbes' laughable stage comedy, "The Traveling Salesman," which was prepared for the consumption of Roscoe Arbuckle. In it a great deal is made of some of the play's best points; and much of the original amusing conversation is presented in the titles. The small-town atmosphere is realistic as are the country types.

The production, which will draw many who enjoyed the stage version, is well photographed and cut.

"Fatty" is quite in his element in the title role. In fact, his genial personality could scarcely be more appropriately set than it is in the part of Bob Blake, a rotund drummer, whose line is woman's togs and whose heart is unaffected—for a while. Arbuckle's physique is greatly in his favor in this instance. Of course he depends upon several of his old slapstick "gags" to obtain laughs but their various logical reasons excuse them. As a whole his performance is exceedingly enjoyable.

Betty Ross Clark makes of Beth Elliott the same demure, wholesomely capable village girl that we all have known.

Frank Holland and Wilton Taylor are the typical small town merchant, Royce, and Drury, the politician. It is easy to imagine them as opposing forces of anything desirable.

Lucille Ward as the well meaning busybody of Grand River, adds a comedy characterization that is included in the scenario advantageously.

Richard Wayne and George Pearce are good in minor parts.

Joseph Henabery directed the picture for Paramount.

"OVER THE HILL"

Philharmonic Auditorium

Possibly because, after the ravings of our Eastern press brothers, we anticipated too much in Fox's "Over the Hill," we were greatly disappointed. We had expected a powerful drama comparable with "Way Down East," chuck full of wonderful characterizations and presented in a technically irreproachable manner. On the contrary, we found a poor scenario in which a proper balance of comedy and pathos has not been struck, a picture with, in every instance save one, far from extraordinary performances, and a production which in spots is scarcely standard technically. This adaptation of Will Carleton's super-pathetic poems is probably saved by good direction and the wonderful interpretation of Mary Carr, who steals the entire play as Ma Benton, a woman who is the victim of the shortcomings of her well-loved husband and children. Her work is a real achievement in the "mother" line, but she is the center of too much morbid tragedy in our estimation.

William Welch also does some good act-

Pickups By the Staff

GEORGE BEBAN ARRIVES THIS WEEK

After a transcontinental tour lasting over a period of six months, and taking in every important center in the United States and Canada, in behalf of the uplift of the silent drama, George Beban, character star of stage and screen, returns to Los Angeles this week.

An elaborate reception will be tendered the star upon his arrival, with Marco Hellman acting as chairman of the reception committee which will consist of important business men, social workers, and motion picture stars and executives.

Mr. Beban will make his appearance at the Kinema theatre, starting Saturday, May 21st, and from the stage of that playhouse will personally speak on the better and cleaner pictures topic in conjunction with the showing of his latest photoplay "One Man in a Million."

Immediately after his Kinema engagement, Mr. Beban will re-open his studio doors and resume his production activities.

CENSORSHIP BEATEN IN 31 STATES

The states most recently repudiating legalized censorship are Rhode Island, Michigan, Wisconsin and California. In Ohio, a measure further controlling the exhibition of pictures was defeated. Other states which have rejected proposed censorship measures during the closing legislative season are: Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Washington and Wyoming. Censorship was also defeated in the District of Columbia. In New York the Lusk-Clay measure is still awaiting action of Governor Nathan Miller.

MORTIMER ENGAGED BY MAYER

Louis B. Mayer has made Edmund Mortimer, director and production executive, a member of his studio staff to do special work on his pictures as associate with the directors in charge. His first work will be on "The Question of Honor," Anita Stewart's vehicle.

In company with Wallace Fox, assistant director, Mr. Mortimer left recently for a mining camp north of Belden, California, where he will make arrangements for Mr. Carewe to film a number of exteriors.

Previous to joining the Mayer forces, Mr. Mortimer was production manager for Maurice Tourneur.

PHOTOPLAYERS LEAVING FOR EAST TO SEE DEMPSEY-CARPENTIER BOUT

Immediately upon completion of his work in the present Lois Weber production, Louis Calhern will leave for the East, to be present at the Carpentier-Dempsey fight.

Mr. Calhern will be accompanied by Earle Hughes, Jack Dougherty, Philip Hubbard and Wilbur Higby, who are working in Miss Weber's latest photoplay.

NEW BUILDING AT UNIVERSAL FOR SCENARIO DEPARTMENT

A new building is being erected at Universal City to house the scenario department. It will face Lankershim Boulevard and will be located between the hospital and the automobile entrance to the studio.

BARTHELMESS RECOVERING

Richard Barthelmess is rapidly convalescing from an operation which he underwent recently in the Flower Hospital in New York.

Who is Playing Opposite Anita Stewart in Her Present Production for Louis B. Meyer

QUIRK SCENARIZES MAYER SCRIPT

"The Question of Honor," a Ruth Cross story which will be Anita Stewart's next starring vehicle, is now being prepared for the screen by Josephine Quirk, former magazine writer and recently a member of the Famous Players-Lasky publicity department in New York.

The comedy quartet, recently organized at the Hal E. Roach Studios, will make its first public appearance in about two weeks. The members plan to sing for benefits and are especially interested in the disabled soldiers, for whose cause they will tender their services. Director Charles Parrott of the Harry "Snub" Pollard company is the soloist.

Tom Santschi will commence work presently on the new series of outdoors pictures which he has contracted to make for Pathe.

Belle Green has gone to New York for a brief visit. She expects to resume her picture work in Hollywood the last of June.

The band of Blackfoot Indians who took part in Marshall Neilan's "Bob Hampton of Placer" will tour the country with that picture.

A large sunlight stage, that will accommodate three companies, has recently been completed for the Border Feature Film Corporation at Bisbee, Arizona.

A big wholesale house has named a hat for boys after Wesley "Freckles" Barry, boy-hero of recent Marshall Neilan productions, and has asked for his endorsement.

CONTEST WINNER FOR CHRISTIE COMEDIES

As the leading feature of the motion picture ball held recently in Chicago, Miss Charlotte Stevens was announced as the winner of the Chicago Journal contest. By way of a prize she wins four weeks' try-out with the Christie Film Company, and her transportation to filmland and back again if she fails to secure a regular contract.

The judges were Watterson R. Rothacker, Samuel Katz of Balaban and Katz, theatrical managers in Chicago and the First National franchise holders, and Crystal Kennedy of the Chicago Journal.

O'HIGGINS GOES EAST

Harvey O'Higgins, author of "The Dummy," "The Argyle Case," and other stage successes, leaves the Realart Studio after several months spent in learning motion picture technique under Supervising Director Elmer Harris.

Mr. O'Higgins has been called East to attend rehearsals of "Main Street," which has been made into a stage play through the joint efforts of himself, its author, Sinclair Lewis, and Harriet Ford.

TO DO "THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE"

With the completion of the "Fall of Sodom," George H. Kern will start work filming Samson's "Destruction of the Temple" for the biblical episode of "The Unfoldment" which was created and directed by Kern.

Vallerio Olivo, James Rowe, Nancy Brown, Joseph Roi and Meyer Ouhajou have been added by Mr. Kern to the cast of players depicting these biblical sequences.

MARSHALL NEILAN LEAVES NEW YORK

Marshall Neilan has left New York for Los Angeles and will stop off at Chicago and other cities on his way back to California in connection with the showing of his "Bob Hampton of Placer." Work on the next Neilan picture for First National release will be started shortly.

Harry Myers and Grace Darmond have been "on location" in Pasadena for "Handle with Care," in which they play the leading roles.

William Fox has leased a studio in Rome, Italy, and sent J. Gordon Edwards there to produce films. The players will largely be recruited on the Continent.

Will Rogers is leaving Goldwyn to form his own producing organization. Victor Schertzinger is also departing shortly from the same studio.

After an absence of three years Ethel Grandin will return to the screen to play opposite Gareth Hughes in his forthcoming Metro production.

At a recent meeting Ida May Park was elected to membership in the Motion Picture Directors' Association. Aside from Lois Weber she is the only other woman in the organization.

Prominent in the all-star cast of "The Heart Line," a Pathe production to be released shortly, are Jerome Patrick, Ruth Sinclair, Claire MacDowell, Gertrude Astor, Johnny Harron, and Ben Alexander .

Production Notes

is enroute for the Oregon woods where the story will be filmed under the direction of Stuart Paton.

Gladys Walton has begun work on "Christine of the Young Heart," a story of modern society life, by Louise B. Clancy. Lee Kohlmar is directing.

After finishing his series of six short "Cyclone Smith" stories. Eddie Polo will appear in a five-reel feature of circus life. The story is now being prepared by Lucien Hubbard, and Reaves Eason will direct.

Frank Mayo, who has been at Balboa Beach for the last three weeks filming island and marine scenes for "The Shark Master," directed by Fred LeRoy Granville, has returned to the studio, where he will remain two days. He will then leave for Palm Springs where a week will be spent in securing desert backgrounds. Mae Collins is playing opposite Mayo.

Edward Kull and his company have returned to the studios from Bear Valley where they have been making scenes for a Northwest Mounted Police story featuring George Larkin and Josephine Hill.

Lee Moran has begun work on his two-reel comedy entitled "Robinson's Trousseau," which is an original story by H. C. Witwer.

Art Acord is concluding "The White Horseman," his serial in which he is being directed by Albert Russell.

Three weeks more and Erich von Stroheim will have finished "Foolish Wives." It is hard to believe, isn't it?

Tod Browning is progressing on "Fanny Herself," which he is filming from the Edna Ferber story of the same name. Mabel Julienne Scott is playing the title role with an all-star cast in support.

Joe Martin, orang-outang star, appears as a bell-hop in his forthcoming animal comedy upon which he is now working. Harry Burns is directing while A. C. Stecker is handling the clever monkey-shiner.

NEW TITLE FOR STAHL PICTURE

"Retribution" has been selected as the permanent name for the first of the John M. Stahl Productions. The picture, made by Mr. Stahl under the working title of the "The Child Thou Gavest Me," was completed several weeks ago and is now practically through the cutting stage. It is expected that the finished negative will be ready for shipment East within the next few days.

Perry N. Vekroff is author of the story, which was scenarized by Madge Tyrone.

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

"Oh Buddy!" has been selected as the title for one of the new comedies which William Beaudine is directing, featuring Neal Burns. "Oh Buddy!" will follow, in the new Christie series, "Nothing Like It," which is being made under the direction of Al Christie.

Frederic Sullivan is starting a new Gayety Comedy, which will be entitled "Standing Pat," for early release through Educational. This single-reeler features Teddy Sampson and Henry Murdock. The story is by Ward Caulfield.

NEW WESTERNS IN PRODUCTION

At the Film Art Studios a series of twelve five-reel feature westerns is being produced featuring Lee Hill and Georgia Hopkins.

Another company will produce a series of two-reel westerns, and casting for the first of this series will begin in a few days at the Russell-Griever-Russell Studios.

B. D. Biggerstaff, supervising director of the Film Art Studios, has just finished cutting "Pals of the West," a five-reel western written and directed by E. Middleton.

These westerns will be released through Capital Film Co., Russell-Griever-Russell.

NORMA TALMADGE'S NEXT RELEASE TITLED

Norma Talmadge's next First National release, formerly titled "Satan's Paradise," founded on the book, "On Principle," by Andrew Soutar, and adapted for the screen by Anthony Paul Kelly, has now been definitely titled "Regeneration Isle."

It will be released early in August.

JUANITA HANSEN STARTS SERIAL

The initial chapter of the Pathe serial production, "The Yellow Arm," in which Juanita Hansen is starred, with Marguerite Courtot and Warner Oland prominent in support, will be released the week of June 19th.

This is Miss Hansen's second appearance on the Pathe serial schedule as star, her previous vehicle being "The Phantom Foe."

MISS MATHIS RE-TITLING "THE FOUR HORSEMEN"

June Mathis, who prepared the screen version of the Metro production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," is personally supervising the writing of the Spanish and French titles for the Ibanez novel, which is a Rex Ingram production.

AT LASKY'S

"The Stage Door" is the temporary title of Wm. deMille's present production, a story by Rita Weiman.

George Melford will presently take his company to Northern California to get exterior scenes for his production, "The Great Impersonation," adapted by Monte Katterjohn from the story by E. Phillips Oppenheim. It features James Kirkwood, with Ann Forrest in the feminine lead.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle and his company are at Catalina Island, getting location scenes for his latest comedy, which is called "Should A Man Marry?" It is a Walter Woods adaptation from the story by Sarah Y. Mason.

Gloria Swanson is scheduled to start next week on "The Shulamite." She will have as her leading man Mahlon Hamilton.

Penrhyn Stanlaws is nearing the completion of "At the End of the World," starring Betty Compson.

According to present plans, Ethel Clayton will start the last of May on a picture called "Her Own Money," under the direction of Joseph Henabery.

BUTLER STARTS SECOND PRODUCTION

David Butler will commence work at once on his second feature production, the title of which is "Bing-Bang-Boom." It has been adapted to the screen from an Earnest Goldman story which ran in the All Story magazine recently.

The cast has not as yet been selected but Fred J. Butler, father and director of the star, is busily engaged in this work at present. George W. Stout will retain his capacity of production manager and the picture will be made at the Robert Brunton studios where "Making the Grade," the first Butler special, was filmed.

NEW PRODUCING COMPANY

A new producing company, known as Zenith Features, Inc., has leased space at the Louis B. Mayer Studios, and has engaged Theodore Wharton to direct its first feature, "The Besetting Sin," from an original story by Leota Morgan. The present plans of the company include the making of four big productions a year, which will be filmed with all-star casts. Production activities will start at once.

HAMILTON-WHITE COMPANY COMPLETING SOUTH-SEA ISLAND COMEDY

Work is progressing rapidly on the new Lloyd Hamilton-Jack White comedy at their Hollywood studio. This picture, which will be released by Educational, and is laid in in the South Seas, is as yet unnamed. Director Jack White will personally supervise the cutting.

Harry "Snub" Pollard, with his mother, recently motored to San Bernardino where they visited friends.

Frank Grandon is in the midst of his new feature, "The Guiding Spirit," which is in production at the National Studio.

CHAPTER II

We started out last week to build a dramatic plot around a big, strong character and an intense dramatic situation. Our character was a prospector and the situation was "His sacrifice — the love of a woman for the sake of his honor." This immediately requires us to put into action our process of deduction. The first questions which naturally arise are: "Who is the woman?" "How does she arrive in such an isolated section of the country?" "What chain of circumstances might lead up to the necessity of his sacrificing her love?"

If we are going to make a one or two reel story out of this, we might simply have the girl come in on a camping trip, with her father, or friends, and then involve her and the prospector in the situation which will lead up to the climax. Let us say, however, that we are going to make out of this, a five reel plot. That means that we must have more complications, which will bring on additional dramatic situations.

I happened to pick up a newspaper this morning and I saw that Eddie Rickenbacher is going to make a cross country flight in an aeroplane. This suggests an idea. Suppose that we use an aeroplane as a means of bringing the girl into the canyon occupied by the prospector. The plane might get lost in the clouds and, going into a tail spin, fall in the underbrush near the prospector's camp. This immediately brings on the question: "Why is the girl making a cross country flight?" "Is she alone, or is she accompanied by some one?" The idea of her being accompanied by some one suggests another character, who might be a young man—an aviator who is in love with her.

Ah! we have it. Let us use this young fellow as a means of bringing about the situation whereby the prospector sacrifices the girl to the aviator; although he loves her himself.

Having gone this far, the following question now arises: "In what way is the prospector called upon to sacrifice the girl to the aviator?" Here is a rule that I always follow in building plots: "Never introduce an extra character excepting when it is necessary to place your principals in dramatic situations, in which they cannot place one another." Right here it looks as if we will have to introduce another character. His entrance will be logical, however. Let us assume that the girl has a very severe old father, who has objected all along to her taking up aeronautics. Suppose the young aviator and the girl start on the cross country flight, without the knowledge of the father—that they get separated in the clouds, and that after the girl falls the aviator returns to the town in the valley below. It is a very easy matter to see that there is going to be a decided complication when the girl's father learns what has happened. It would be intensely interesting and complicating, if he demanded that the young aviator restore the girl in a given period of time, on penalty of death.

It is logical to assume then that the young aviator would make a trip back over the mountains in search of the girl. Now we must have the young aviator fall into the hands of the prospector. The prospector, who has fallen in love with the girl, must now find out that the young fellow is in danger of losing his life if the girl is not restored. This places our prospector right where we want him. If he conceals the girl, she will not be restored to her father, the aviator will lose his life, and the girl will remain in the canyon for him. His honor is certainly involved in this situation.

Now we have smply worked out a mere idea for a dramatic plot. It is far from a finished story. One of the principal reasons why beginners at the business of scenario writing fail to sell their stories is that they do not submit plots to the studios that are completely worked out. There is too much left for the salaried staff writer to do and the producer figures that if he has to pay his staff writer to write the story that it is not worth while to buy it from the outside. In the old days, when studios paid twenty-five and fifty dollars for scenario plots, they were willing to buy mere "ideas." Today, when they are paying from two hundred and fifty dollars up, they want plots worked out in detail.

In our next installment, we will apply our process of deduction to the task of further complicating the plot which we have started, and build it up with more dramatic situations.

THE MARKET

I am still looking for some five reel society dramas, for the eastern producer, who has recently arrived in Los Angeles and who expects to start production about the first of June. He has decided upon one story, but will need five more.

A couple of calls have come in for some censor-proof, two reel westerns with a male lead. The leading man for this company is an ordinary young, red-blooded cow puncher type. They do not care so much about stunts, but want something that will give their star a chance to act.

The producing company, which is in the market for a five reel farce comedy of the Douglas McLean type, called me on the carpet this week because I made the statement in the last issue of Camera that it was supplied with stories. While it was forced to have its staff write a story, the company is still in the market ,and does not want us to cease our efforts to secure more material.

In the meantime, another company—a new one—states that it is in the market for the same type of stories.

Three different companies are immediately in need of stories featuring a blond ingenue of the tomboy type. What, they want is something on the Constance Talmadge order.

A scenario writer in San Francisco wrote me the other day and "bowled me out" for not giving the names of the producers who are in the market for the stories which I describe in these columns every week.

For the information of others who might feel the same way, I might say that Camera has been adopted as the official publication of The Photoplaywrights' League of America, and that the page which is edited by me is conducted as a means of keeping our membership, the most of whom are subscribers, advised as to current market demands.

MEIGHAN AFTER EXTERIORS

Tom Meighan and the "Cappy Ricks" company leave for Boston today to secure exteriors for the picture which Tom Forman is directing. The company includes Agnes Ayres. The ship-wreck will be filmed off the Main coast.

TOURNEUR BUYS ORIGINAL

Maurice Tourneur has purchased "Coals of Fire," an original story by Malcolm Mollan. He will probably produce it after "Lorna Doone."

NEW PATHE SERIES

Pathe announces for early release a series of short reels to be known as Pathe Screen Studies. The releases will be composed of material which Pathe has been accumulating for some time. Colored pictures will be used in some of the issues.

"DEVIL DOG DAWSON" HOXIE'S NEXT

"Devil Dog Dawson" will be the title of the June release of the second Jack Hoxie series, according to Arrow, who are handling these pictures in the independent field.

NEW RELEASE FOR FEDERATED

"Screen Snapshots," showing intimate touches of the daily lives of film stars, will be distributed by Federated during the next year.

NEW URBAN SERIES

Charles Urban is making a series of pictures which he will call "Modern Truths from Old Fables." They will be taken from the classics.

NEW B. B. HAMPTON PRODUCTION

Frank Hayes and Betty Brice have been added to the cast of "Heart's Haven," Benjamin B. Hampton's latest production, which starts this week. Eliot Howe and Jean Hersholt will direct, with F. H. Sturgis and Gus Peterson as their respective cameramen.

WILLAT LEAVES FOR NEW YORK

C. A. (Doc) Willat, President and General Manager of the Willat Productions, Culver City, left Thursday with a print of "The Face of The World," Irvin V. Willat's latest feature for Hodkinson release. While there he will confer with the Hodkinson officials concerning the forthcoming Willat productions.

LeRoy Stone has completed the cutting of Irvin V. Willat's newest production, "The Face of The World."

George Bunny has completed his tenth comedy, "Why Worry?" for Goldwyn release, and will start immediately on another.

Joe Mitchell has been added to the scenario staff of the Hallroom Boys Comedies and will collaborate with Lex Neal, who is in charge of the scenario department.

Can You Qualify for Screen Authorship?

A NATIONAL educational institution to train photoplaywrights by correspondence during spare time at home has been established in Los Angeles to meet the needs of the motion picture industry.

This institution is directed by experienced writers and sponsored by Cecil B. DeMille, Thos. H. Ince and other prominent producers.

The field for photoplaywrights is lucrative and applicants drawn from every walk of life respond to the call.

Only persons naturally endowed with the gift of creative imagination and dramatic insight, however, can hope for success in this profession, and applicants must be selected accordingly.

All applicants, therefore, are requested to apply by mail to Frederick Palmer, Director of Education, for the Palmer Home-Test Questionnaire to determine their fitness to undertake this course of vocational training.

This questionnaire, scientifically compiled by Professor Malcolm Shaw MacLean, A.M., formerly a Northwestern University instructor of English composition, in collaboration with H. H. Van Loan, noted photoplay author-producer, is the first test of its kind ever adopted by an educational institution.

The purpose of this questionnaire is to help applicants determine the degree of creative imagination possessed by them and consequently their eligibility to enroll in this curriculum.

If successful in making this home test, the Palmer Plan of Instruction in Photoplay Writing is available to you.

BRANDT LEAVES FOR THE EAST

Joe Brandt, president of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corp., who has been here for two months, going over production details on Hallroom Boys Comedies, Screen Snapshots, Star Ranch Westerns, and features which are released through his company, has completed his work, and leaves for the East today. He will make a few stops enroute, to look over the state right situation in several of the larger cities.

SCHENCK FOREIGN PUBLICITY DEPT.

Beulah Livingstone will sail on the Mauretania June 9th for a two or three months' trip abroad in the interests of Joseph M. Schenck. She will visit all the Associated First National's affiliated foreign exchanges in France, Italy and England.

Miss Livingston has organized a new department for the Schenck activities, a foreign branch of the publicity department, to be known as The Overseas Feature Service.

DREW POST PLANS SHOW

The S. Rankin Drew Post of the American Legion, in New York, to which a number of film men belong, will sponsor a show at the Hippodrome on Sunday night. D. W. Griffith and Frank Bacon will appear in a sketch called "Just Nothin'." Others who have promised to appear are Dorothy Gish, James Rennie, Mae Marsh, Gordon Standing, Gilbert Rooney, Mae Murray, Wallace McCutcheon, Arthur Rankin and Betty Blythe.

Anna Q. Nilsson is on her way to Sweden for a vacation. She will visit Paris and London before returning to New York.

A. P. SELLS ORIENTAL RIGHTS

Associated Producers, Inc., have closed a deal with the A. H. Woolacott Co. whereby that company secures distribution in the Orient of the company's first year product. Woolacott and a number of Japanese film men are now in Los Angeles. The first release will be "Lying Lips."

TAYLOR GOING TO EUROPE

William D. Taylor plans to take his vacation in Europe. He has been given a leave of absence until Aug. 1.

"Mid-Air" is the title of the fifth episode of the new Seitz serial, "The Sky Ranger," which is co-starring June Caprice and Geo. B. Seitz.

"The Heart Line," presented by Arthur F. Beck, as an adaptation of Gelett Burgess' celebrated novel of the same name, will be released by Pathe Exchange on June 5th.

W. F. Alder is taking a company of players to Tahiti to make a feature film, "The Lagoon of Desire."

It is said that Lloyd Ingraham will be the next director to have his own producing organization. He is completing his fourth production as director of Carter and Mrs. De Haven.

Jay Chapman, who for the last three years has been publicity manager for Benjamin B. Hampton productions and personal representative for Mr. Hampton in publicity matters, is leaving that organization to go into general personal publicity and scenario writing.

ing in the role of Dad Benton, and Vivienne Osborne shows possibilities as Isabella Strong, the little sweetheart of Ma Benton's "black sheep" son, Johnnie.

The last mentioned capacity is filled by Johnnie Walker, who does very little with it. The romance of the youngsters could have been played up more to advantage.

Noel Tearle is a good type for Isaac Benton as is Dorothy Allen for the part of his wife, but particularly in the case of the latter that ends it.

John Dwyer, Wallace Ray, Phyllis Diller, Louella Carr and Edna Murphy complete the adult cast. Their action affords them little opportunity. It is probably better so.

Frankly, we enjoyed the general work of the Benton family in the prologue more than that which was done later, save as we said before, Mrs. Carr's artistic rendition which improves from the start through each sequence. The little Bentons are played by Sheridan Tansey, Stephen Carr, Jerry Devine, James Sheldon, Rosemary Carr, and May Beth Carr. The name of the cleverest child in the cast, however, is not included in the program. She does Vivienne at eight years.

Although hampered by the material with which he worked, Harry Millarde must be credited with unusually careful handling of the picture.

Due both to the present state of underproduction and to its sentimental appeal, "Over the Hill" is bound to continue a good box office attraction. Looks to us as though it were time for someone to start a few real masterpieces.

Ogden Crane is leaving for a month's vacation in New York.

La Verne Swiszer has a part in Anita Stewart's "Sowing the Wind" at the Kinema.

Ethel Clayton has recently returned from a trip to Yosemite Valley with her parents and brother.

Willard Lee Hall will enact a role with Douglas Fairbanks in his latest production, "The Three Musketeers."

The Border Feature Film Corporation has finished its first two-reel picture, called "The Only Girl," and will start on another Lighton story presently.

Jackson Reade, who has recently finished a part with Frank Mayo in "Three in a Thousand," has been signed by Lois Weber to play in her forthcoming production which is as yet untitled.

Gerald Duffy, who is responsible for the titles of Mary Pickford's latest picture, "Through the Back Door," is titling Katherine MacDonald's "Her Social Value" at the Ambassador Studios.

It is announced that Playgoers Pictures, Inc., will release several independently made productions through Pathe Exchanges. The first of these productions is "The Butterfly Girl," a comedy-drama starring Marjorie Daw. It will be released on June 12th.

Anita Stewart has returned from her vacation trip to Coronado ,and is making preparations to start work on "The Question of Honor," her forthcoming Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction, which will be directed by Edwin Carewe.

Dorothea Wolbert will have a principal part in the forthcoming Hoot Gibson picture.

Fred Newmeyer, director of Harold Lloyd comedies, is contemplating a home in Culver City.

Blanche Sweet has recovered from her recent illness and is back at her Hollywood apartment.

Jack Nelson has been engaged to direct Lee Moran in his two-reel comedy, "Robinson's Trousseau."

Lee Hill is playing the juvenile lead in "Pals of the West," being produced at the Film Art Studios.

Clara Horton will play opposite Hoot Gibson in his next picture, "The Mascotte of the Three Star."

Lee Kohlmar has been chosen to direct Gladys Walton in her next picture, "Christine of the Young Heart."

Norma Talmadge has an article in the June issue of the Pictorial Review called "What Do You Mean By 'Sex Plays'?"

Esther Ralston is playing the juvenile feminine lead in the five-reel western, "Pals of the West," in production at the Film Art Studios.

Edward Burns is playing opposite Katherine MacDonald in her current associated First National production, "Sticks and Stones."

Edgar Lyons, brother of Reggie Lyons, is photographing his second five-reel Western with Wm. Fairbanks and Marion Aye for the Western Feature Co.

"Bull" Montana is playing the part of Red Mike, a bootlegger, in "One Wild Week," by Francis Harmer, the current Bebe Daniels comedy-drama for Realart.

Theodore Roberts is recovering from an illness and will shortly return to work in "Hail the Woman," which John Griffith Wray is directing.

Henry King is expect here from the East Coast where he has been during the vacation period at Robertson-Cole. He will again direct Pauline Frederick, with whom he has work on three productions.

In line with the Morosco policy of using, wherever practical, the members of the stage cast in the same roles in the picturization, John H. Elliott will play the priest, his original role, in Oliver Morosco's second film, "Slippy McGee."

The Actor in History

Even in this day of the theater's great popularity we are wont to resent what sometimes seems to be the public's inconsideration for the members of the profession which supplies the world with its demanded entertainment. At that, it is easy to realize that we have comparatively little to annoy us when we wander, in our literature, back to other ages when the actor had absolute social persecution to endure for the sake of his art. An encouraging point which is sometimes lost to sight, however, is the fact that the most truly educated of every century have not been unappreciative of the dramatic efforts and accomplishments of their various times. We quote the following from Sir Richard Steele in "The Tatler," issue of May 4, 1710:

"Having received notice, that the famous actor, Mr. Betterton, was to be interred this evening in the cloisters near Westminster Abbey, I was resolved to walk thither, and see the last office done to a man whom I had always very much admired, and from whose action I had received more strong impressions of what is great and noble in human nature, than from the arguments of the most solid philosophers, or the descriptions of the most charming poets I had ever read. As the rude and untaught are in no way wrought upon more effectually than by seeing public punishments and executions; so men of letters and education feel their humanity most forcibly exercised, when they attend the obsequies of men who had arrived at any perfection in liberal accomplishments. Theatrical action is to be esteemed as such, except it be objected, that we cannot call that an art which cannot be attained by art. Voice, stature, motion, and other gifts, must be very bountifully bestowed by nature, or labor and industry will but push the unhappy endeavorer in that way, the farther off his wishes.

"There is no human invention so aptly calculated for the forming a free-born people as that of a theater. Tully reports that the celebrated player of whom I am speaking, used frequently to say, 'The perfection of an actor is only to become what he is doing.' Young men, who are too inattentive to receive lectures, are irresistibly taken with performances. Hence it is, that I extremely lament the little relish the gentry of this nation have at present for the just and noble representations in some of our tragedies. The operas, which are of late introduced, can leave no trace behind them that can be of service beyond the present moment. To sing and to dance, are accomplishments very few have any thoughts of practicing; but to speak justly, and move gracefully, is what every man thinks he does perform or wishes he did.

"I have hardly a notion that any performer of antiquity could surpass the action of Mr. Betterton in any of the occasions in which he has appeared on our stage. The wonderful agony which he appeared in, when he examined the circumstance of the handkerchief in Othello; the mixture of love that intruded upon his mind, upon the innocent answers Desdemona makes, betrayed in his jesture such a variety and vicissitude of passions, as would admonish a man to be afraid of his own heart, and perfectly convince him that it is to stab it, to admit that Kidding Ourselves Out of Jobs?

"Oh my gosh, No! We cannot consider anything but published stories!" I wonder who started that darn fool idea. From the big producer, who ought to know better, down to the 2 by 4 promoter who is trying to organize a company, we hear the same tune.

The motion picture industry is kidding itself out of a job. It has erected a pretty brazen image in the person of the "published story" and is worshiping the same with a loud beating of tom toms and cymbals. No one else is! The Gink we are all working for—the Public—has not indicated his preference for our "tin god."

The majority of the screen's biggest money-makers have not been "published stories." If a photoplay which is based on a published story does make a lot of money, it is because the picture is a good one, and because more people have heard about the published story through the producer's press department, than have read it.

The more widely read the published story, the greater the number of disappointed theatre patrons, when the picture is shown. The film production may be immensely superior, but it never measures up to the imaginary picture in the mind of the reader. They come out of the theatre "cussing" the movies for spoiling their wonderful illusions. The Producer gets the blame for not interpreting the fiction masterpiece as written, but there is no censure for the novelist who has not written a story that can be screened—or has written one that has such a hackneyed or weak plot that some continuity writer has had to rewrite it.

I do not believe that there are half a dozen author's names in existence that mean anything on a pictureplay, to the public. What they want is a good story—well done. When we give them that, there is nothing for them to kick about—which can not be said of the "published story," no matter how much it is improved upon by the producer. It may be good and still be "rotten."

Fiction authors from all over the world have invaded the motion picture field with a rush. We have often wondered why the professional screen writers whom they are crowding into the discard, do not show a few bristles. We guess they are too busy listening to the after dinner speeches of the new-comers—and teaching them the art of photoplay-writing. Yezza, we're kiddin' ourselves out of a meal ticket—both producers and screen writers.

Film Capital Production Notes

NEILAN TO PRODUCE BYRNE STORY

Marshall Neilan has closed negotiation with Donn Byrne, the Irish author, for the picturization of his novel, "The Stranger's Banquet."

Preliminary arrangements have been made for the handling of this adaptation and Mr. Neilan will collaborate with the author in adapting the story to the screen.

ITALIAN-AMERICAN STARTS WORK

A. Guard Hill, president and general manager, and Alexander Bodo, director and supervisor of production of the Italian-American Film Corporation, have engaged the services of Tom Regan to co-direct their first three productions.

This new company started producing Monday, May 23rd. The company is in the market for good two-reel situation comedies.

EAGLE CORPORATION TO EXPAND

The Eagle Producing and Finance Corporation, the organization sponsoring Marion Fairfax Productions, is about to enter the producing field on a large scale, according to an announcement yesterday afternoon.

Several well known directors are said to be practically signed to put on a number of special pictures under the banner, and arrangements are now being completed for the financing by the Eagle Corporation of two individual organizations bearing the names of prominent figures in the producing world.

Marion Fairfax's "The Lying Truth," which is the initial release of the Eagle company, is now finished and arrangements for its distribution will be made within the next few weeks.

WILLIAM DESMOND PRODUCTIONS

William Desmond has formed his own company, "William Desmond Productions," with headquarters at the Brunton Studios. Mr. Desmond will make four features a year, and has begun production on H. H. Van Loan's "Fightin' Mad," a modernization, with a Western setting, of Alexandre Dumas' "The Three Musketeers."

The picture is being directed by J. J. Franz, who directed Mr. Desmond in "The Broadway Cowboy," "The Parish Priest," "Bare-Fisted Gallagher," and "The Blue Bandana," and is under the personal supervision of Robert Brunton.

RUBYE DE REMER IN SERIES OF FROTHINGHAM PRODUCTIONS

Rubye de Remer has been signed for a series of feature pictures to be produced by Frothingham Productions over the Associated Producers' releasing route. She commenced work this week in E. Phillips Oppenheim's story, "Passers-by," under the direction of Ted Sloman at the Brunton Studios. The name of the picture will be changed upon release, as a previous production by another author has already employed the title.

The Italian-American Film Corporation has completed its first picture under the supervision of Alexander Bodo (King), directed by Tom Regan, and production has already started on their next picture.

The new David Butler picture, "Bing-Bang-Boom," will commence this week with Fred J. Butler directing. The cast is as yet incomplete.

AT METRO

Balzac's "Eugenie Grandet" is the story that serves as the groundwork for the forthcoming Rex Ingram production titled "The Conquering Power." John Seitz is in charge of the camera work for this picture.

Viola Dana, with her company, has returned from a three weeks' stay at Coronado Beach locationing, only to set off again for Altadena where remaining exteriors will be taken for her forthcoming picture, "The Match Breaker."

RINEHART'S STORY IN PRODUCTION

Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix, who had the leading roles in Rupert Hughes' photoplay, "Dangerous Curve Ahead," are to play together again in Mary Roberts Rinehart's first original screen story for Goldwyn, tentatively called "The Glorious Fool."

The screen adaptation was made by J. G. Hawks. The picture went into production last week under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd's latest comedy, "I Do," was shown in finished form at a Glendale theatre recently and will be shipped immediately to New York.

Eddie "Bo" Boland finished his Zeppelin comedy recently, the title of which is "The Non-Skid Kid." The subject matter is concerned with probable happenings in 1943. Among others in the cast is "Sunshine Sammy," who makes his first appearance in a Boland comedy. Production begins Monday on a new comedy, the working title of which is "The Chink."

Harry "Snub" Pollard is working on a picnic comedy under the direction of Charles Parrott. Bobby Doran is cameraman. Plans are now under way for Mr. Pollard's next picture, which will be "shot" mostly at Catalina.

Gaylord Lloyd started production today on a London tenement story which is included in the "Lonesome Luke" series. Erle Kenton is directing.

The accounting department has moved to its new quarters on the second floor of the main building. The former office will be occupied by General Manager Warren Doane.

AT UNIVERSAL

King Baggot is preparing to shoot the finish of "The Gossamer Web," Edith Roberts' forthcoming screen play. All scenes, with the exception of the climax, have been filmed. The story was written by John A. Moroso.

Production on the super-feature, "Fanny Herself," which is being filmed by Tod Browning from the Edna Ferber story, is reaching its middle stretch. Mr. Browning is beginning the third sequence of "Fanny Herself," with an entire new cast of characters. The only character carried over from the second sequence is Fanny, played by Mabel Julienne Scott.

Harry Carey is about to begin his first Jewel feature. The story, which is "Bransford of Rainbow Ridge," will be directed by Robert Thornby.

Elmer Sheeley, art director at Universal, has just finished the final set for Von Stroheim's production, "Foolish Wives."

Billy Fletcher is being featured in another short-reeler titled "Tamale Mine," under the direction of Ward Hayes.

Eddie Polo is in the midst of a series of two-reelers of the romantic old West.

Current Reviews

"SENTIMENTAL TOMMY"

Grauman's

Sir James A. Barrie scores again with his second Paramount release, "Sentimental Tommy," proving that what we need for the screen, after all, is real dramatic value. Certainly this famous playwright gives promise of creating a furore with the transference to the shadow stage of his subtle, always graceful work.

We do not know whether or not he collaborated with Josephine Lovett in the preparation of the scenario for this production, but it surely includes all of the delicate touches that individualize Barrie. Further, the picture is exquisitely cast with an equal amount of care given to both the principal and minor parts.

Although we've never visited that country, the picturesque Scotch village atmosphere and the beautiful little details of the villagers' daily life appeal to us as being unusually consistent. In any case they are delightful!

As for the story, it is probably one of the most artistic tales ever produced, dealing with the love of a fatherless lassie for a boy who lives in the world of make-believe and self conceit.

It is hard to imagine anything more sweetly, impossibly young than is Gareth Hughes' interpretation of Tommy Sandys, the lad to whom pretense and the adoration of others is the very breath of life. His mannerisms are unique but natural, always. His repetition of them occurs opportunely and is never forced. The very inadmirable indecision of Tommy makes him adorable, and his tenderness entirely eliminates that in his nature which is unpleasantly weak. He is a film character who will live as long as did ever one of fiction or drama; besides which he is the biggest success of Gareth Hughes' highly successful career.

In striking contrast to the aspiring Tommy we see Grizel, the strong-minded, quick tempered, yet gentle-hearted child of an illicit love whom the inhabitants of Thrums feel it a duty to question, if not absolutely scorn. May McAvoy is more than excellent in the role. In fact, there are no stereotyped phrases or adjectives to describe her performance of the dignified, high-spirited girl who requests the doctor to "cut out her bad blood" as a child, and who later prays her little prayer for deliverance from "masterful men." No less affecting is her passionate mothering love for her unfortunate little mother. Her clear-eyed, intellectual beauty, her daintiness, her self possession, combined with a rare artistry, render her effort in this play superb. Supplied with the proper material and direction this actress will accomplish great heights.

Mabel Taliaferro offers a chokingly, pathetically delicate piece of acting in "The Painted Lady," Grizel's wandering minded, fragile mother whose lover never returned save in fancy. Her relationship to the daughter upon whom she leans for protection, both spiritual and physical, is lovely to follow. The resemblance between Miss McAvoy and Miss Taliaferro in these parts is striking.

Who could have been so enjoyably placed in the role of the tempestuous, untidy old village doctor who takes Grizel under his wing upon her mother's death, as is George Faucett? As always, he is there with his sniffs, scowls and wrinkles to help gain sympathy when and where it is needed. There is no one quite like him.

Leila Frost and Kempton Greene as Elspeth, Tommy's sister, and David Gemmell, her lover and then husband, are fortunately cast.

Both Harry Coleman and Virginia Valli do "bits" that live.

John Robertson's direction could scarcely have been improved. He has a good sense of proportion.

In our estimation this production deserves a long run if ever one did, and many have. It is the year's best in its line.

F. R.

GENE HERSHOLT

B. B. Hampton's newest director who may be seen in "A Certain Rich Man"

"THE DWELLING PLACE OF LIGHT"

Alhambra

We cannot but wonder where the "anti-sex play" sentiments of Benjamin B. Hampton were lurking when he made "The Dwelling Place of Light," a production which he releases locally at this time. Certainly it is impossible to reconcile the recent Hampton article in the Pictorial Review with this crudely suggestive picture, which has been handled in such a manner as to lose all of the best touches in the Winston Churchill novel from which it was prepared. Its main point is literally "snowed under" with much confused action and a jerky system of cutting that mutilates the scenario cruelly. The subtitles are now weakly inappropriate and again unnecessary. The photography is below standard.

It is the story of a factory town with its capitalistic and labor elements. It contains the usual high-idealed heroine who spurns the attentions of her influential employer and gains the love of a philanthropist; her earthy younger sister who treads a sordid path down further than the censors usually let them go, and a strike with its following general misery. The whole is neither new nor compelling as it is treated; consequently it will scarcely appeal to the modern American public. The cast is in most cases too good for the vehicle in which its members appear.

Bob McKim, who enacts Claude Ditmar, the super-villainous heavy, gives by far the most striking performance in the play. We will hand it to anyone who could make such stagy action as is allotted him human. McKim has often carried much dead-weight material, gracefully.

Claire Adams offers us a characteristic role in Janet Butler, Ditmar's secretary who, it is simple to discern, is "immediately" desired by her employer. Miss Adams never seems to be feeling her work very deeply; on the other hand she rarely falls down upon a scene.

Brooks Insall, the philosopher who loves Janet, has more sympathy than "business" to his credit. He assumes the responsibilities of chief advisor and benefactor for the cast. King Baggot satisfactorily fills the role.

Lydia Knott accomplishes a realistic piece of acting with Hannah Butler, Janet's mother, whose mind is broken by sorrow and worry.

Lassie Young is suitably cast as Elsie Butler, Janet's younger sister, who rebels at work and poverty only to reach a Boston sporting house in her search for luxury. Her work contrasts interestingly with that of Miss Adams.

Aggie Herring deserves special notice for her few effective sequences as Mrs. Gallagher, the "woman across the hall."

Ogden Crane, William Mong, George Berrell and Beulah Booker are all well cast and play convincingly the remaining characters in the story.

We are really sorry to say that Jack Conway directed this production which, from most standpoints, is not worthy of him.

"WET GOLD"

California

Once again we are treated to a strenuous story of under-sea treasure and intrigue. This time, however, the tale is a little wilder and more inconsistent than any of its forerunners have been, and, unquestionably, it is inferior from the standpoints of cast and dramatic balance. It is J. E. Williamson's Goldwyn-distributed "Wet Gold," which Ralph Ince directed. Let it be said to the picture's credit that its under-water action is quite realistic, but when the "poor" cast gets out of its diver's rigging, much falls away from the value of its work.

The introduction of the play is silly and the haphazard chase for hidden riches is quite ludicrous, since it lacks sufficient motive. Mr. Williamson should leave his yarn spinning and scenario writing to someone who knows the screen and its feasible situations.

Mr. Ince also plays the part of John Cromwell, an enigma adventurer, who, although heading the cast, does not one thing to gain sympathy for himself. In fact, the role is irrelevant to the remainder of the characters involved. He does nothing to make it distinctive, and after all is said and done, it means nothing vital.

Thomas McGrane is evidently supposed to characterize Col. Hamilton, a hard put Southerner who is in pursuit of the illusive greenbacks. He exaggerates his action to an amusing degree and his make-up is that of an outright amateur.

Aleene Burr, an empty-faced, fuzzy-headed child, cavorts jerkily through the ingenue as the Colonel's daughter. She is present, we take it, that the villain may have some one further to vent his bestiality upon.

We were undecided as to whether we were expected to laugh or weep at Charles McNaughton, who is given credit in his introductory title for doing Chipman, "a specializer in women, horses and gambling." We're afraid McNaughton has never specialized in screen performing, but he surely has a rampant imagination.

The rest of those appearing in the picture are John Butler, Harry McNaughton and Alicia Turner.

At that, there may be a real chuckle for the profession in this picture. It may remind many of days gone by.

FIRST WOMAN DIRECTOR RETURNS TO SCREEN

Lucie K. Villa, former director of motion pictures, has returned temporarily to the screen after an absence of four years, to play a leading character role in "The Stolen Umbrella," the second of the series of Ellis Parker Butler's stories of "Philo Gubb," which are now under production by Webster Cullison of Clever comedies.

McCORMICK WESTERN REPRESENTATIVE FOR FIRST NATIONAL

Word has been received from New York that John E. McCormick has been appointed western representative of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

McCormick will return to Los Angeles within the next few days and make his headquarters in the Pacific Finance Building. Prior to his promotion McCormick was western press representative for Associated First National.

NEXT WEBER PICTURE TO HAVE CUBIST EFFECTS

Lois Weber has engaged Frank D. Ormston, art director of "Kismet," "Hypocrites" and "For Husbands Only," to design the sets for the picture she is now producing.

Pat O'Malley is cast as the juvenile in Oliver Morosco's "Slippy McGee."

Edith Yorke has a part in "Slippy McGee," featuring Wheeler Oakman.

Casson Ferguson will play opposite May McAvoy in her forthcoming picture for Realart.

Stuart Holmes is cast for an important part in the Tod Browning special production, "Fanny Herself."

Earl Schenck is selected for an important role in the Edna Ferber story, "Fanny Herself," being produced by Tod Browning.

Alec B. Francis will have an important part in the new picture starring May McAvoy at the Realart Studios.

William Welsh, character actor, recently seen in "Over the Hill" and "Reputation," is now appearing in an important role with Edith Roberts in "The Gossamer Web."

Harold Lloyd will be supported in the earlier scenes of his new comedy by Mark Jones, Charlie Stevenson, Wallie Howe, George Rowe and Roy Brooks.

Ethel Broadhurst and Mark Jones will have the principal roles in the new Eddie "Bo" Boland comedy soon to go into production at the Hal E. Roach studios.

Willard Louis, Ernest Shields and Peggy O'Neill have been engaged by Webster Cullison for his second "Philo Gubb" story, "The Stolen Umbrella."

DeWitt C. Jennings, impersonator of police roles on the stage and screen, has been cast in "The Poverty of Riches," Reginald Barker's current production for Goldwyn.

Winifred Wright has been engaged by the Italian-American Film Corporation to play in their productions under the direction of Tom Regan and Alexander Bodo.

Pickups By the Staff

PASADENA COMMUNITY PLAYHOUSE ASSN. TO RESUME ART COURSES

Announcement of the resumption of the summer art colony in Pasadena, June 27th, may interest many. This is a Pacific Coast institution, fostered by the Pasadena Community Playhouse Association, to elevate public amusement standards by disseminating technical knowledge concerning the allied arts of the theatre.

Dr. Richard Burton, educator, author and former president of the Drama League of America, will head the faculty and conduct a course in practical playwriting. Other instructors will be Frayne Williams, Hope Knapp, Arthur Farwell and Louise P. Sooy. Courses will be offered in dramatic writing, play construction, costume design, dramatic dancing, interpretation, pantomime, and community music.

The Playhouse Association is a civic enterprise and hopes that the summer art colony will develop into a school for training community directors. The session continues six weeks. During the last week a production of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" will be made by thet art colonists, giving them practice in applying the principles they have learned.

A prospectus containing detailed information concerning this activity will be sent to anyone requesting it of the Secretary of the Community Playhouse Association, Pasadena, Calif. Six free scholarships are offered.

CHANGES IN HAMPTON PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT

King Young succeteds Jay Chapman as personal press representative for Benjamin B. Hampton. The office of publicity manager for Mr. Hampton's producing companies, Great Authors Pictures, Inc., and Zane Grey Pictures, Inc., which Mr. Chapman also held and is now vacating, has not yet been filled. Harry Hammond Beall, well known publicist, has charge of local publicity on pictures showing in Los Angeles. The changes took place this week.

FIRST ISSUE COMPLETED

The first issue of Federated Screen Snapshots has been completed by its producers, Jack Cohn and Louis Lewyn, and after final editing by Mr. Cohn was turned over to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for release.

BUTLER RECEIVES STAGE OFFER

David Butler has recently refused an offer to appear in a featured role in a Broadway production scheduled to open the first of the eastern theatrical season.

Mr. Butler did not entertain the offer inasmuch as his picture work will keep him busy for many months to come. He is scheduled to make a series of five-reel features.

KIRKWOOD WRITES A BOOK

James Kirkwood is supplying the material for a new volume to be titled "Stars I Have Directed—and Directors Who Have Directed Me." The stellar list includes such personages as John Barrymore, Mary Pickford, Antonio Moreno, Lionel Barrymore, Dorothy Gish, Blanche Sweet, Owen Moore, Jack Pickford, Thomas Meighan, Billie Burke, Henry B. Walthall, Mary Miles Minter and others. Among the directors who figure in the Kirkwood narrative are D. W. Griffith, Marshall Neilan, Allen Holubar, George Melford, Wesley Ruggles and Allen Dwan.

PAUL BRUNET SAILS FOR FRANCE

Paul Brunet, President of Pathe Exchange, Inc., accompanied by Mrs. Brunet, sailed for Europe recently, aboard the Olympic.

Mr. Brunet will go direct to Paris, where he will consult with Mr. Charles Pathe.

LIBRARY BOND CAMPAIGN HAS ASSISTANCE OF STUDIOS

Public spirited motion picture producers and exhibitors have acted to assist the library bond campaign which will come before the voters on June 7th. At the suggestion of W. S. Smith, president of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, and general manager of Vitagraph, the actual conditions in the present public library have been made into a reel of film. Exhibitors throughout the city will throw the pictures on their screens the week before election.

Co-operating with Vitagraph in the production of the reel were Universal, Goldwyn, Metro and the Ince Studios. The titles were donated by the Jacobsmeyer Company.

The picture was photographed during a typical rush hour in the library and shows the congestion in all departments, notably the juvenile room where only a few children can be accommodated.

WALTER HIERS VACATIONING

Walter Hiers is vacationing until June 9th, when he will co-star in the new Bebe Daniels picture. He is taking advantage of the opportunity to make personal appearances at theatres throughout the South, especially in Atlanta, Ga., Chattanooga, Tenn., and Memphis, Tenn., in connection with the showings of "Oh, Lady, Lady," "Two Weeks with Pay" and other Realart productions of Bebe Daniels and Wanda Hawley.

Ignace Jan Paderewski, musician and patriot, was a recent visitor at the Goldwyn Studios.

Edna Dumary will play in "The Conquering Power," Rex Ingram's forthcoming Metro production.

GRAUMAN BEAUTY CONTEST

Sid Grauman is going to put on a performance at the Actors' Fund Show at the Beverly Hills Speedway, June 4th, which will be entitled "A Beauty Show of Movie Stars."

The fifty beautiful girls whom he will have selected will appear in the spectacle along with about ten picture stars.

The public will be asked to vote on the most beautiful girl of the fifty, and the winner will be scheduled immediately for screen honors. Cecil B. deMille, Jesse L. Lasky, Allen Holubar, Carter DeHaven and others will be present to assist the public in choosing the winner.

"The Actors' Fund," for which the benefit is to be given, is one of the most worthy of causes and is under the guiding hand of Daniel Frohman.

MORENO'S CAR RAFFLED OFF

Antonio Moreno has donated his pet speedster to the Actors' Fund Benefit, and it is to be raffled off at the pageant on June 4th.

The car will be displayed in a downtown window until the day of the pageant when Moreno will take it out to enter the race against Fatty Arbuckle. After this event it will be awarded to the person holding the prize ticket. Officials of the benefit expect to realize several thousand dollars on the raffle.

FILM STARS CONTEMPLATING VAUDEVILLE

Mildred Harris is expected to accept a vaudeville engagement in September. It is said that Dorothy Phillips and Wheeler Oakman have both received similar offers.

LLOYD INGRAHAM TO VACATION

Mr. Ingraham will vacation a while on his mountain ranch upon the completion of "My Lady Friends," the fourth consecutive film in which he has directed the Carter De Havens.

TAYLOR TO MAKE TRIP EAST

Charles A. Taylor, adaptor and director of Oliver Morosco's "The Half Breed," is preparing to go East as soon as he completes cutting the picture for delivery to Associated First National. Taylor goes East to claim his share as a principal heir to an estate which awaits him in an Eastern bank.

FILM EXPERT BRINGING CZECHO-SLOVAKIAN PICTURES TO THIS COUNTRY

We have had an invasion of British, French, German, Italian, and even Danish pictures, but the first pictures from Czecho-Slovakia will arrive with Mr. Julius Kohner on the New Amsterdam. Mr. Kohner, who is the owner and publisher of the "International e Filmschau," the motion picture trade paper of Czecho-Slovakia, is coming to America at the invitation of Carl Laemmle.

Vera White, a member of stock at the Hal E. Roach Studios, is planning to offer her collection of 500 army buttons to the cause of the disabled soldiers. The collection includes types of every button worn by the contestants in the late world war. The collection was given to Miss White by Gen. Edmund Allenby, who led the forces in Palestine and who is an uncle of the actress.

Eileen Sedgwick, who has been in the hospital for the last three weeks recovering from an operation for appendicitis, has regained her health and recently visited the studio. She will resume her work within the next few days on her current serial, "The Terror Trail," under the direction of Edward Kull.

Josephine Hill and George Larkin have just finished a five-reeler in which they deal with the history of the Northwest Mounted Police. The story is called "The Vengeance Trail," and was directed at Big Bear by Edward Kull.

Maty Philbin, who won honors in a recent brains and beauty contest, is being featured in "The Harbor Road." The story is by Sara Ware Bassett, and Rolin Sturgeon is directing.

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan is completing "Where Men Are Men," his new feature. It is planned that this production will be released in seven reels, and marks Duncan's departure from serials. Edith Johnson plays opposite him.

With several night sequences Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester are finishing their super special, "The Son of Wallingford," and will leave soon for New York to edit the production at the Brooklyn studios.

Larry Semon is recovering rapidly from injuries received in his last picture. and has started on a new comedy under the direction of Norman Taurog.

David Smith is preparing to direct a new special, probably a north country story.

Earle Williams is scheduled to start a new production about the last of May.

Antonio Moreno is finishing his feature, "The Secret of the Hills," under the direction of Chester Bennett.

Jimmy Aubrey will start a new comedy soon.

AT CHRISTIE'S

"Spiking the Spooks," a new Vanity Comedy with Earl Rodney and Irene Dalton, is in production. The story is by Rose Loewinger, and is being directed by Frederic Sullivan.

Al Christie has finished the first comedy in the new series of Christie Comedies, to be released through Educational exchanges. The first under the new contract is titled, "Nothing Like It."

A farewell dinner was given recently at the Ambassador Hotel by Arthur S. Kane in honor of Harold. Lloyd, Mildred Davis and Hal E. Roach. Among the guests were Bessie Love and her mother, Gus Inglis and Miss Grace Inglis. Mr. Kane, having held various conferences with Charles Ray, whose films he sponsors, has proceeded to New York.

AT GOLDWYN

Will Rogers has finished "A Poor Relation," under the direction of Clarence Badger. Sylvia Breamer, who played opposite the star in "Doubling for Romeo," played the leading feminine role.

The photoplay on "The Glorious Fool," an original screen story by Mary Roberts Rinehart, for which J. C. Hawks wrote the continuity, was finished last week under the direction of E. Mason Hopper. Richard Dix and Helen Chadwick portray the leading roles.

"From the Ground Up," an original screen story by Rupert Hughes, will soon go into production as a starring vehicle for Tom Moore.

Director Frank Lloyd is at present in the redwood country of Northern California, picking locations and building a camp where most of the scenes will be filmed for "The Man from Lost River," the Katherine Newlin Burt original screen story which is soon to go into production.

AT REALART

Wanda Hawley starts work presently on her next feature, "Her Face Value." The scenario is by Percy Heath, based on a Saturday Evening Post story by Earl Derr Biggers, "The Girl Who Paid Dividends."

Mary Miles Minter has completed "Her Winning Way" under the direction of Joseph Henabery.

May McAvoy has started work on a new picture under the direction of Frank O'Connor. It is an adaptation by Edfrid Bingham, of "A Virginia Courtship," the old stage success by Eugene Presbery.

Elmer Harris is cutting and titling his original photoplay, "Her Study Oak," which Wanda Hawley has just completed. This was filmed under the working title of "The Clinging Vine." Hector Turnbull is also busy cutting and titling his story, "Everything For Sale," a recent May McAvoy picture directed by Frank O'Connor.

CARL LAEMMLE ANNOUNCES NEW COMEDY COMPANIES

After taking stock of the short feature situation as presented in the reports of last year, Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, has decided that next year's plans shall include an unusual number of single and two-reel comedies. In addition to the single-reel Star comedies which Ward Hayes has been turning out for the past few months, and which will be continued, Mr. Laemmle announces several new companies of two-reel proportions.

It is his intention to add another two-reel comedy release to the weekly program. The Centuries will continue as heretofore, one two-reel release each week, featuring in rotation Harry Sweet, Charles Dorety and Brownie, the Century Wonder Dog. Also the Joe Martin comedies will continue and will be directed by Harry Burns, assisted by A. C. (Curley) Stacker, Joe's trainer.

D. W. Griffith returned recently to the stage after many years' absence at a benefit performance at the New York Hippodrome. He and Frank Bacon, star of "Lightnin'," presented a dramatic sketch.

Frank Lacktine, playing an Indian "heavy" in the Ruth Roland serial now under production at the Hal E. Roach Studios, has made a translation of the Arabian classic "Essmah," which he has put into an eight-reel scenario. The script is a drama on the dimensions of "Kismet." Mr. Lacktine is also translating other Arabian stories and poems for a big eastern publishing firm.

THE PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

CHAPTER III.

We decided last week that we had developed a very good idea for a dramatic plot but that we did not have enough story for a five-reel picture. Therefore it is up to us to build it up. For lack of space I will not recount the idea that we have developed, but suggest that those of my readers who are following this little experiment in plot-building, secure the two last numbers of Camera!—if they have not already done so.

So far, we have not decided who is to be the villain in the story. The idea of picking on the young aviator does not appeal to us. If our prospector is the big man that we are going to try to paint him, the aviator is not worthy of his steel. Besides, we are going to have the girl in love,—(or she to think that she is)—with the aviator, and it would reflect on her to be in love with the villain.

We want to introduce a real "heavy" whose low-down nature will serve as a good contrast to the manly character of our hero, and one who can put up a whale of a fight with him. A good hand-to-hand fight between the villain and the hero is always exciting and interesting, particularly in the type of outdoor story which we are writing, and in which the primitive side of man can be shown to picturesque advantage.

Let us try the introduction of the villain in the person of another prospector who comes into the canyon and takes up a claim across the river. What manner of conflict are we going to establish between the two? is the next question that our process of deduction suggests. It could involve the girl—but if we are going to establish the newcomer as the villain, he should be planted as such before the arrival of the girl. This would have a tendency to heighten suspense for the reason that as soon as the girl does arrive there is a fine promise of something exciting happening as soon as the villain learns that she is present.

Whatever the nature of the conflict between the hero and the villain, it will also serve to establish and build up the character of the hero. We must bear in mind that it is not sufficient to merely say that a man is brave, sympathetic, magnanimous, or honorable. We must delineate him as such. And, bear in mind that this action, whatever it is, must have some direct bearing on the plot, and not be extraneous. I read an amateur script the other day, in which the author had written in three hundred feet of action and introduced an extra character—for the sole purpose of getting over what he thought was a clever spoken title for the leading man.

I believe I mentioned in the first installment of this series that there were two prospectors who were bosom friends back in the isolated canyon where I received my inspiration for this story. Suppose that even before the arrival of the girl on the scene that there is a fight on a cliff between the hero's friend and the villain; that the hero is across a canyon and powerless to help his friend and that the villain throws the friend over the cliff a thousand feet below. The hero arrives and grapples with the villain, finally overcoming him. Although tempted to throw his adversary over the cliff, he resists and casts him aside with a warning never to cross his path again.

In the action described above we not only have some great melodrama with thrills, but we have strengthened the character of our hero. There is a chance for some pathos as he contemplates the bruised body of his dead pal on the rocks below and falls on his knees. He might be in the act of just finishing the burial of his pal later, when he hears the crash of the plane and discovers the unconscious form of the pretty girl in the wreckage.

Now, we have built up the plot considerably. Still it is far from finished. The story has just begun to move rapidly when we bring the man and the girl together. In our next installment we will add some more material, and knit the plot more firmly together.

STORIES WANTED

We're looking for a "waif" story for a wistful little ingenue. Strong characterizations are desired in the plot and the romantic element may be only incidental.

Several companies are in the market for tomboy stories, or something of the madcap kind of vehicle such as would be appropriate for Bebe Daniels.

There is a chance to make a quick sale of a strong dramatic plot in which the woman star is given a chance to do some emotional acting with some good comedy relief.

Another company wants a combination Charles Ray and Douglas McLean story.

CLARA WILLIAMS REGAINS HEALTH

Mrs. Reginald Barker (Clara Williams) is celebrating her recovered strength after an illness of six months.

MARY MILES MINTER DEPARTS FOR EUROPE

Mary Miles Minter, having finished her current production, "Her Winning Way," for Realart, will vacation for two months in Europe. Mrs. Charlotte Shelby (her mother) and Miss Margaret Shelby (her sister) will accompany the star.

FRANK BORZAGE PERFECTING NEW PHOTOGRAPHIC EFFECT

A new photographic effect whereby colored motion pictures may be taken in soft-focus has been practically perfected by Frank Borzage, the director of "Humoresque." He is now directing Seena Owen and Matt Moore in "Back Pay" for Cosmopolitan.

"Bud" Osborne is provided with one of the leading supporting roles in the new Ruth Roland serial.

Louis B. Mayer has signed Bess Meredyth, scenario writer, to prepare the continuity on the next John M. Stahl production.

Mary Anderson, who is now playing with Charles Ray, has signed to do a series of comedy dramas with Spencer Productions, Inc., under the direction of Scott Dunlap. The pictures will be distributed through Associated Photoplays, Inc.

A DOCTOR FOR FILMS!

W. A. Futter, previously connected with several studios as film cutter and editor, will henceforth specialize in re-cutting and re-titling old pictures.

He has established an office in the Berwilla Studios, Hollywood.

"MY LADY FRIENDS" NEARING COMPLETION

"My Lady Friends," the latest Carter De Haven production for Associated First National release, is nearing completion. Mr. and Mrs. De Haven and several of the principals of the cast will start north within the next few days to shoot the final exteriors for the picture.

Director Lloyd Ingraham expects to finish the studio interiors within a few days after the company's return. The picture will be cut and titled by Ingraham.

HALLROOM BOYS COMEDIES IN ADVANCE OF SCHEDULE

A definite production schedule, calling for the completion of all pictures at least three weeks in advance of the date on which they are to be turned over to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for release, has been established by Harry Cohn at the West Coast production center of Hallroom Boys Comedies, the two-reelers featuring Sid Smith.

The schedule covers both Western and Eastern activities in connection with the making of Hallroom Boys Comedies.

Edward Jobson has been selected for an important role in Viola Dana's newest Metro starring picture, "The Match Breaker."

Resolutions favoring an adequate tariff on foreign-made films were adopted at the latest meeting of the Art Directors' Association in Hollywood.

Gale Henry will be seen in the supporting company that has been selected to appear in Gareth Hughes' first Metro starring picture, "The Hunch."

Richard Tucker has been engaged for an important part in the new Realart production from the old stage success, "A Virginia Courtship," featuring May McAvoy.

It is expected that Jackie Coogan, who is enroute home, will arrive in time to witness the initial showing of his first starring photoplay, "Peck's Bad Boy," which opens at the Kinema Theatre, May 28th.

Bert Lytell, having finished his newest Metro production, "A Trip to Paradise," is preparing to go to Catalina Island for a fishing trip before starting his next picture. This will be Mr. Lytell's first vacation in more than a year.

Hazel Daly, instead of Helene Chadwick, is to play opposite Tom Moore in "Beating the Game," which has just gone into production at the Goldwyn studios. This change was found necessary for the reason that Miss Chadwick had been cast for the leading role in "The Glorious Fool," which is being filmed at the same time.

"DON'T CALL ME LITTLE GIRL"

Cunie's Broadway

Once in a while Realart comes along with a clever farce, starring one of its "severial" ingenues. This week's release, "Don't Call Me Little Girl," is one of these. It is a fast moving comedy with many enlivening situations and an ultra modern theme. Moreover, the cast which supports the star, Mary Miles Minter, takes complete advantage of its various chances for characterization and an unusual number of these opportunities present themselves as the plot unravels. Edith Kennedy scenarized the original, which is by Catherine Cushing.

Miss Minter must be credited with a spirited performance of Jerry Doubleday, a precocious boarding school flapper, who steals her aunt's fiance, after providing that exceedingly shocked individual with a far more suitable husband and petrifying the entire family with her speedy maneuvering. She meets, disengages, woos and wins her man within twenty-four short hours. Miss Minter accomplishes her action in better than usual form.

Jerome Patrick makes a good foil for the flighty Jerry as Monty Wade, the deliberate, settled fiance of the former's old maid aunt. He awakens quickly, as bachelors are wont to do when real romance puts in an appearance, however, and falls heavily for the flirtatious child. His work thoroughly satisfies.

Some excellent characterizing is done by Ruth Stonehouse, who plays Joan Doubleday, the old-fashioned girl who has enjoyed a ten year old engagement only to have husbands shifted for her overnight.

Due to the snappy theories of her disquieting niece, Peter Flagg, the older woman's real mate, is discovered and encouraged. The more intellectual than bright Peter is successfully played for comedy by Edward Flanagan.

Winifred Greenwood fits into the part of Mrs. Doubleday, Jerry's merry widow mother, with customary ease.

Florence Midgely completes the cast in a minor part.

Joseph Henabery handled this production.

"ONE MAN IN A MILLION"

Kinema

George Beban terminates his country-wide tour personally presenting his independent photoplay, "One Man in a Million," with this week's Los Angeles engagement. In conjunction with the picture he gives a selection from his well remembered play, "The Sign of the Rose," which as much as anything seems to be attracting the audiences and winning their applause.

The film production which Beban both wrote and directed is a wholesome story of a tender-hearted Italian who loves the world and a little waif whom Fate throws in his way. Tears and laughs it has a-plenty and a couple of novel twists which lend much interest to the thread of progress.

The inimitable interpreter of Italian roles is at his best as Lupine Delchine, a generous "wop" who, provided with the means (he acquires the position of city dog catcher), indulges all the helpless creatures who cross his path. His love for the Belgian orphan and his kindness to, and imaginary attachment for, the child's supposed mother, present situations filled to the brim with heart interest which Beban uses to tug at the throats, and then appeal to the humor of the audience.

Flora Valenzi, the pound master's worshipping secretary, is simply but artistically played by Helen Jerome Eddy. She excels in characters.

Little George Beban, Jr., is a lovely baby and proves himself a performer of ability with his cherubic work as Lupine's adopted child. The diminutive immigrant finds a mother who temporarily mistakes him for her own, only to exchange her for Flora when his adored "papa" recognizes his true love, and "mamma's" real son puts in an appearance.

Irene Rich makes Charlotte Maureveau, the Belgian mother, wholesomely beautiful.

Much more should have been done with Clyde Hartley, the detective suitor of Madame Maureveau. The part is quite inadequately done by Lloyd Whitlock, who fails to recognize the points allowed him.

George Williams and Jennie Lee provide an atmospheric touch and a link in the chain of events, with their work as Mr. and Mrs. Koppel, trainers of thieves.

Wade Boteler in a minor role ends the list of actors in this picture, which Robertson-Cole is releasing.

Beban's unassuming type of work will always please those who are attracted by it at all.

"HEARTS ARE TRUMPS"

Tally's

Rex Ingram has made a very entertaining screen play of the old English melodrama, "Hearts Are Trumps," which is a present Metro release. His direction is as careful as June Mathis' scenario, resulting in a fairly consistent production.

The appealing story has to do with a man and woman who do not forget; with the romance of their convent-bred daughter and with a persistent lord whose forte is wrecking love affairs. It has some strong moments.

A few excellent miniatures are used in Alpine avalanche scenes, and it is a real pity that even two or three faked shots should have been permitted to spoil their impression. We'd wager our powder-puff that the obvious sets were hold-overs from the terrible iceberg effects employed in "Uncharted Seas." Happily, we are only afflicted with occasional glimpses of them.

Francelia Billington enacts Lady Altcar, the daughter of an impoverished but aristocratic family, both as a young wife and twenty years later. She lends the part much naturalness and a decided bit of fascination.

Current Reviews

Frank Brownlee proves Miss Billington's equal in versatility with his work as Michael Cain, Lady Altcar's husband, at the ages of thirty and fifty. In the role of the Altcar gamekeeper, who becomes cynical after his wife has been snatched away from him under circumstances with which he is unacquainted, Brownlee is excellent. Later he makes his instinctive attraction to his unknown daughter very beautiful.

Alice Terry seems quite sincere and is fittingly cast in the part of Dora Woodberry, who although the daughter of the two, believes herself to be the orphan ward of Lady Altcar.

Joseph Kilgour does his "dirtiest worst" with the mocking heavy, Lord Burford. Those who follow him know how correctly despicable he can make himself, with his polished screen technique and his deliberate movements.

Lord Altcar, an inveterate gambler, is well portrayed by Winter Hall. It is not often that we see him doing unsympathetic work, but as might be expected, he perfectly satisfies.

Brainsley Shaw does well the small part of Fell, a questionable money lender, and Burford's half-brother.

Norman Kennedy, as Dora's American artist sweetheart, and Edward Connelly, as her godfather, complete the cast.

"Hearts Are Trumps" is a Metro-Screen Classics offering.

worst of daggers, jealousy. Whoever reads in his closet this admirable scene, will find that he cannot, except he has as warm an imagination as Shakespeare himself, find any but dry, incoherent, and broken sentences: but a reader that has seen Betterton act it, observes that there could not be a word added; that longer speeches had been unnatural, nay, impossible, in Othello's circumstances. The charming passage in the same tragedy, where he tells the manner of winning the affection of his mistress, was urged with so moving and graceful an energy, that while I walked in the Cloisters, I thought of him with the same concern as if I waited for the remains of a person who had in real life done all that I had seen him represent. The gloom of the place, the faint lights before the ceremony appeared, contributed to the melancholy disposition I was in; and I began to be extremely afflicted, that Brutus and Cassius had any difference; that Hotspur's gallantry was so unfortunate; and that the mirth and good humor of Falstaff could not exempt him from the grave. Nay, this occasion in me, to look upon the distinctions amongst men to be merely scenical, raised reflections upon the emptiness of all human perfection and greatness in general; and I could not but regret, that the sacred heads which lie buried in the neighborhood of this little portion of earth in which my old friend is deposited, are returned to dust as well as he, and that there is no difference in the grave between the imaginary and the real monarch. This made me say of human life itself with Macbeth:

" 'Tomorrow, tomorrow, and tomorrow,
Creeps in a stealing pace from day to day,
To the last moment of recorded time!
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
To the eternal night! Out, out, short candle!
Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more.' "

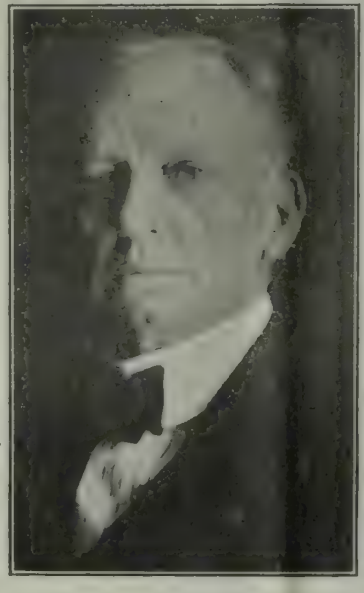
Because:—

He Stands Against Freak Laws.

He Stands for Medical Freedom.

He is Your Friend.



Here is His Platform:

I stand for a clean, moral and safe Los Angeles—a City in which the business men are protected from the greed of special interests, and where all may pursue health, prosperity and happiness in accordance with law.

LEGISLATION

I am unalterably opposed to freak, foolish or fanatical laws, and I shall veto legislation of this kind whenever presented to me.

MEDICAL FREEDOM

In an interview published on February 3, 1921, I publicly declared that I stood for medical freedom—that is to say, the right of the individual to choose for himself and his family the method of healing which he deems most efficient. I stand for this now. I believe that medical freedom is equally important with political and religious freedom, and these are guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

GOVERNMENTAL EFFICIENCY

I am opposed to the introduction of party politics in City affairs, and shall at all times appoint only those who can render wise and efficient service to the city regardless of political affiliations. I shall continue to enforce the laws and administer the government of this city upon an economical and efficient basis.

Equity Against Hamon Film

The following resolution was passed by the Executive Committee of the Actors' Equity Association, May 30th, 1921:

"Moved, seconded and carried unanimously that this committee go on record as being opposed to the making of a motion picture which is to feature Clara Smith Hamon."

Both the Equity and the Los Angeles Laboratories which have refused to develop or print the Hamon film, are to be highly commended and thanked.

We would personally like to add that any professional player, director or technical man who considers an engagement with this notorious woman's company is, in our estimation, disloyal to an industry which is generally doing its utmost to create wholesome and instructive entertainment for the consumption of the world. Further, he is a detriment to it.

Who is Clara Smith Hamon to either say, "I am a capable actress" or "I will make a motion picture."? Let us cast off some of these obnoxious hangers-on who expect to cash in on their infamy via the screen. They can do us nothing but harm.

Congress Plays Up

The interesting and vital letter below was written to George Arliss by John Tilson, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives at Washington, in answer to the profession's opposition to foreign made photoplays. Surely it shows that what our industry goes after earnestly and concentratedly, it will obtain:

"My dear Mr. Arliss:

"In response to your letter of the 12th instant I have to say that the danger to the motion picture industry referred to by you is a real one and one which the subcommittee of which I happen to be chairman has wrestled with in an effort to find a remedy. A substantial ad valorem duty upon American valuation is probably the best we can do, and this it is our purpose to recommend to the full committee.

"Very truly yours,
"JOHN Q. TILSON."

Are You Voting?

Tuesday, June 7th, you will have voted nine times for a motion picture representative in your city council when you have cast a single shot vote for Edward Roberts, the industry's candidate. Remember, please, that united, our profession has never lost an issue; but its negligence has often brought failure, even disaster, upon itself. What is your choice?

A Challenge

Los Angeles, Calif., June 2, 1921.

Miss Fanchon Royer,
Editor "Camera!"
Hollywood, Calif.

My Dear Miss Royer:

In the course of my publicity work for the General Moving Picture Industry I have come into contact more or less intimately with nearly every important newspaper in the country recently, and have established myself before their editors as being somewhat of an authority upon matters pertaining to this field. In view of this fact I am repeatedly receiving inquiries and communications from publications all over the United States and Canada asking me various things concerning "Camera!" Among these many inquiries I have been impressed by the oft-repeated quiz, "Who is F. R.?"—"Who is the author of the brilliant editorials appearing over the signature 'F. R.'?"—"Why don't you smoke out 'F. R.' of Camera! and give us a chance to see what the animal looks like who can write the splendid dope he or she does?"—"Can you get us a series of special articles from your mysterious 'F. R.' of the "Camera!" on present movie conditions?"—etc., etc., etc.

Frankly, it becomes wearisome to me when I find that their attention for all my efforts, passes over my shoulder completely, ignores me and centers on an impersonal, vague and indefinite thing represented only by angular and unlovely initials, when they might be centering this same worship upon me. I've even seriously considered mutilating and twisting my own initials and claiming the title myself on a "printer's error" of "pied-type," but I'm afraid they'd trap me the first time they asked me to duplicate your work.

Therefore I am writing you for a double purpose, both for your own sake and for my sake, as well that I may be saved from temptation, and I am taking the liberty of suggesting that you come out from under your "pen name" and "tell the cock-eyed world" (cock-eyed with curiosity evidently) just who you are. You've earned it. I hate to admit it out of my professional jealousy, but I have to. The fact that your editorials have been repeatedly reprinted by such standard and sterling journals as "The Literary Digest" and magazines of that type proves your justification and sets the seal of merit upon the splendid work you have performed. So be a sport in the future and "come out of it"—sign your full name and give the world a chance to meet and know you for your own charming personality as well as they have learned to know you and respect you for your brilliant mentality.

And while I am about it there is another reason why I'd like to see you do this. I'd like to show the rest of the Motion Picture Industry here in Los Angeles that "a prophet has no honor in his own country;" that in their smug, supercilious attitude of ignoring "Camera!" or at least patronizingly naming it merely as "one of our local

J. STUART BLACKTON PRODUCING IN LONDON

Commodore Blackton has transferred his activities from New York to London, and is making ready to start on the first of a series of four photoplays presenting the English beauty, Lady Diana Manners, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland.

The first of these plays will be a drama of the Charles II period, from an original story by Felix Orman. The art work is in charge of Almon C. Whiting, and Commodore Blackton will personally direct.

COMPANY FOR DISTRIBUTION OF PICTURES IN ORIENT

The Orient Pictures Corporation, a local organization, headed by A. H. Wollacott, has been formed to handle the foreign rights of first-class productions, to be distributed through the Orient by a system of exchanges operated by American methods under the supervision of American representatives. Exchanges will be established in Tokio, Hongkong, Bombay, Manila, and other Eastern cities.

E. S. Holmes has been engaged as business manager of the Orient and contracts have been closed with the Associated Producers for their first year's product.

NEILAN STARTS

Marshall Neilan, who has just renewed his contract for the production of Associated First National releases, returned to Los Angeles last week to start work on the first of the two big features which will occupy his time during the next year.

While in the East, Neilan signed up a number of authors to write titles and scripts for future pictures. Also he has announced that his productions from henceforth shall be picturizations of original stories.

Mr. Neilan has moved his office from the Hollywood Studios to the new Marshall Neilan lot, on North Wilton Place, near Sunset Boulevard.

SEELING PRODUCTIONS COMPLETE FIRST OF SERIES

The Charles R. Seeling Productions, Inc., have just completed "The Jack Rider," the first of the six five-reelers to be released through the Aywon Film Corporation of New York.

NEW COMEDY COMPANY

The Max Roberts Syndicate has been formed to produce one-reel comedies, with studios in San Francisco. The pictures will be released through the National exchanges.

PICTURE NEARING COMPLETION

Dorothy Valleron and her director, George Edward Lewis, are in Seattle on their way to the far north to complete their picture, "Dorothy, a Daughter of Alaska," which has been in the course of production for nearly three years.

Director Fred Caldwell is completing "Dr. Hookworm's Cabinet," his latest comedy burlesque, with the Catherine Loraine Company.

Anita Stewart and her company are still in the Sierras getting exterior scenes for her next picture, "A Question of Honor," a future First National attraction which Edwin Carewe is directing.

SHIPMAN PRODUCTIONS TO RELEASE ITALIAN PHOTOPLAYS

The Ernest Shipman Productions have contracted for three years for the output of a foremost Italian star and her director. They're all doing it!

AT LASKY'S

Following the completion of "The Great Impersonation," upon which he is now engaged, George Melford will next produce an adaptation by Monte Katterjohn of S. M. Hull's novel, "The Sheik," in which James Kirkwood will be featured. Meanwhile Mr. Melford is going North to shoot the finishing exteriors for his present production, "The Great Impersonation."

Sam Wood starts this week on "The Shulamite" with Gloria Swanson as the star and Mahlon Hamilton as leading man. Two other important members of the cast are announced as Russell Simpson and Lillian Leighton.

Cecil B. DeMille has been to Santa Barbara for several days making exterior scenes for his current production as yet untitled, and returning, will complete work at Naples, after which he comes to the studio for further interiors.

James Cruze with his company is back from Catalina Island, whither he went for additional water scenes in "Should a Man Marry?" starring Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle.

William deMille is making progress with his present production, "The Stage Door," by Rita Weiman, in which Jack Holt, Lila Lee, Charles Ogle and others appear.

Penrhyn Stanlaws is still locationing on the coast of Southern California, where scenes of "At the End of the World," starring Betty Compson, are being shot.

AT GOLDWYN

Director Frank Lloyd and company left the Culver City studio last week bound for Huntington Lake in Northern California, where they will film "The Man from Lost River," an original screen story by Katherine Newlin Burt.

E. Mason Hopper, who directed Tom Moore in "Hold Your Horses," has been assigned to direct the Irish comedian in another Rupert Hughes story, "From the Ground Up," which will soon go into production at the Goldwyn Studio. The story was put into continuity by Mr. Hughes.

Will Rogers is titling his most recent production, "A Poor Relation," the photography of which was completed last week.

"LUCKY DAMAGE"—NEW INCE SPECIAL

The new Thomas H. Ince feature for Associated Producers, Inc., temporarily titled "Lucky Damage," enters production at the Ince Studios during the coming week under the direction of Lambert Hillyer. The photography will be in the hands of Henry Sharp.

The original story of "Lucky Damage" is by Marc Edmond Jones. Hillyer has prepared the continuity.

FLORENCE VIDOR SIGNED BY ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Announcement is made by the Executive Committee of the Associated Exhibitors that Arthur S. Kane, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Associated, has signed contracts making Florence Vidor the latest star acquisition of that organization.

Production will be commenced at once at the King Vidor studios on the first of her pictures, and under present plans, she will make four of the series in the first year.

"The Crystal Prism," Pathe's, is the title of episode six of the new Seitz serial, "The Sky Ranger," in which June Caprice co-stars with George B. Seitz.

Current Reviews

"SALVAGE"

California

The present showing at this theater is Robertson-Cole's "Salvage," a production which stars Pauline Frederick. It is a strong drama, containing an unusual amount of heart interest and a deliberately handled plot which unravels quickly in a surprise finish. Because the story's theme is one of mother love, the picture will appeal largely to the feminine audience. There are really very few inconsistencies apparent, which is probably due to the fact that the action is kept natural throughout. The photography is good.

Miss Frederick gives one of her always exceptional performances as Bernice Ridgeway, a young mother who is denied her child by her domineering husband. She puts touching pathos into the woman's departure from her wealthy home and the mothering adventures of her hungering heart which gathers unto itself the little waifs who happen her way. Miss Frederick is a rare artist. She also plays, in this film, the role of Kate Martin, a self-indulgent drug addict who abuses her baby to obtain money until, in a fit of despair, with resources gone and her husband in prison, she commits suicide, leaving Bernice Ridgeway the heritage of her name and child.

Ralph Lewis is excellent as Ridgeway, a moneymaker and man of affairs. His work typifies the class of men to which his aggressive, conceited and yet withal not intentionally cruel character belongs. Moreover, he calls forth one of the most commanding tears in the piece.

Milton Sills amply serves in the part of John Martin, a father who honors the name of his child sufficiently to sacrifice months of imprisonment to save it from the breath of scandal. Although one might doubt the judgment of such a one to leave his baby to the cruelties and neglect of a moral derelict, rather than to expose the mother and carry the child to peace and safety, we suppose that it is all right. Peculiar conceptions of the heroic are often found in fiction.

Raymond Hatton's work as the pseudo cripple and little Ruth King as Ruthie Martin end the list of players.

Henry King handled the direction of the production.

"PUPPETS OF FATE"

Tally's

A simple little tale of the undying love of a child-wife whose faith is great enough to carry her to unknown America from far away Italy in search of her missing husband, is "Puppets of Fate," Viola Dana's latest Metro release. The original story, which finds its settings in Venice and New York, is a rather over-drawn effort of Donn Byrne; nevertheless it is entertaining, particularly as scenarized by Ruth Baldwin and Molly Parro, besides which it contains some unusually good performances.

The Venetian Canal sets are merely artistic suggestions which are too little seen to appear unrealistic.

Miss Dana is unusually careful with her interpretation of Sorrentina Palombra, the tender little Italian peasant who loves her Gabriel enough to send him forth alone to make his fortune. Her wide-eyed trust is very beautiful to follow and her technique is always good.

Francis MacDonald splendidly characterizes Gabriel Palombra, the simple-hearted "wop," who makes his fortune only to nearly lose his temporarily forgotten wife. He is allowed nearly as much footage as is given the star.

After a long absence from local screens, Jackie Saunders appears in a heavy in this photoplay. She is well cast and accomplishes, according to her old form, "Babe" Reynolds, a manicuring vamp who desires Gabriel's quickly won cash. She is delightfully hard-boiled.

Fred Kelsey, Thomas Ricketts and Edward Kennedy also play in the production, which Dallas Fitzgerald directed.

"TOO WISE WIVES"

Grauman's

Another elaborate Lois Weber written and directed production is released here this week by Paramount. The interest of the story, which treats the problems of two married couples in their search for happiness, varies decidedly. As has been true of Miss Weber's most recent pictures, this one has an unusually weak plot, which is submerged by the very details upon which, it is apparent, that infinite care and much money have been expended. While this superficial story will never solve any world problems nor even prove an unusual drawing card, it is considerably more sensible than "What's Worth While."

Practically the same players who appeared in the last mentioned production, are used in this one. Peculiarly enough, not one member of the cast succeeds in gathering any real sympathy for his part.

Louis Calhern quite competently fills the role of David Graham, a somewhat selfish individual who goes through much before he learns to appreciate his wife. Calhern is an actor all right, but, at that, he misses many points which a screen performer would never let slip.

Claire Windsor, Miss Weber's latest protege, is seen as Marie, David's fussy, jealous, self-condemning wife. This could have been the big dramatic portrayal of the play, but it is handled in a manner that entirely eliminates all of its possibilities. Close-ups and extravagant wardrobes have never yet proclaimed an actress. Even so, Miss Windsor is slowly improving, we might say, very slowly.

Mona Lisa again steals the feminine action of a Weber picture with her work as Sara Daly, the wife who cleverly manages her husband to gain her own ends. We cannot help thinking that there is a real place for Miss Lisa on the screen, although she hasn't, we think, been perfectly cast, ever.

Phillips Smalley handles John Daly, Sara's indulgent better half, satisfactorily.

We need better film stories than this one, with the leading roles more consistently cared for. If necessary, we will demand them.

"PECK'S BAD BOY"

Kinema

Jackie Coogan, who reached fame over night as "the Kid," may be seen in a starring vehicle of his very own here this week. It is Irving Lesser's 1921 model of "Peck's Bad Boy," and it is a knockout in its line. The screen version, which was prepared by Sam Wood, who handled the picture's direction, moves easily from a casual start to a riotous, well-developed climax. Most of the Irvin S. Cobb subtitles possess the rare Cobb humor which is a valuable added note, and the supporting cast is exceedingly well placed.

Master Coogan himself is, in our estimation, by far the cleverest child comedian in the profession. He never depends upon a situation for a laugh, but lets his action derive mirth from the most ordinary of circumstances. He doesn't belong to the class of starry-eyed "natural" young ones of whom we have so many pleasing examples. He is rather an innate actor, and as clever a little showman as one would care to see. He makes of Henry Peck, the nimble-minded "lamb" of the typical American family, the kid that has always lived next door to us all. An adorably impulsive, ingenious, diplomatic little devil is Peck's Bad Boy. He will beguile both old and young.

The child's continually distraught father is played to the great hilarity of the audience by James Corrigan. He is his son's most persecuted victim, and vice versa.

Lillian Leighton is excellent in the role of Mrs. Peck, Henry's doting mother and only morally supporting friend.

Wheeler Oakman and Doris May provide an unimportant romance with their work as Dr. Martin, Henry's friend, and Henry's sister.

Raymond Hatton has the easily handled minor part of the grocery store-keeper to his credit.

Tar Baby, a clever canine, completes the cast.

First National releases this Irving production.

"THE HOUSE THAT JAZZ BUILT"

Clune's Broadway

Wanda Hawley's current Realart picture is "The House that Jazz Built," a comedy drama with several entertaining twists. The Sophie Kerr story deals with a man who becomes disgusted with the life which he leads with a wife whose instincts are sluggish save when contemplating a jazz party. That Mr. Husband next imagines himself enamored of the cooly slim, little lady whom he continually contrasts with his spouse, is inevitable. It all ends, however, as it should, when the wife "comes out of it," and the vamp is shown up. This photoplay has more entertainment to offer than Miss Hawley's recent ones have had, and is, taken all in all, much more consistent.

The star is perhaps more convincing as the jazz baby, Cora Rodham, than as the serious-minded woman into which she later dissolves. Her work is really better than usual. It might be said, however, that much as we detest criticisms of a too personal

Eugenie Forde has joined the Rockett Company to play a part in the all-star cast of "Handle with Care."

Marion Feducha plays a part in "The Butterfly Girl."

Jim O'Neil is cast with Tom Santschi in "The Secret of Butte Ridge."

Charles Meredith will play opposite Katherine MacDonald in her next First National production.

Joseph Dowling will have an important role in Katherine MacDonald's forthcoming picture, as yet untitled.

Milla Davenport has gone to Huntington Lake on a three weeks' location trip with the Frank Lloyd company.

Wilfred Lucas will have one of the principal parts in the forthcoming Katherine MacDonald First National production.

The cast of "The Jack Rider," a Chas. R. Seeling production, includes Will Rogers, Jr., miniature double of his father, and Thelma Worth, a cousin of Betty Compson.

Adelaide Hallack has returned from Mexico, where she has been locationing with the Neal Hart company, making "Kingfisher's Roost," under the direction of Hurst and Chaudet.

Little Marie Moorhouse, fifteen months old, is now working for Reginald Barker at the Goldwyn Studios in "The Poverty of Riches." The child also appears in "The Old Nest" and "Ace of Hearts," soon to be released.

Monte Blue, who recently recovered from an operation for appendicitis, has left for New York City, where he will play one of the leading roles with Mae Murray in a new Paramount picture to be made in the Long Island Studio.

Pickups By the Staff

EDUCATIONAL PICTURE SEEN BY MRS. HARDING

A comedy from the Christie series distributed by Educational was chosen as one of the two attractions shown at the benefit given by the American Women's Legion in Washington a few days ago.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding headed the list of patronesses for the benefit, which was given by the Lafayette Unit in the Knickerbocker Theatre. The proceeds are to be used for sick and disabled soldiers in nearby hospitals, and for educational work in which the Lafayette Unit is engaged.

SYMPHONY CONCERTS FOR HOLLYWOOD

Following the initial symphony concert at the New Apollo Theatre, Messrs. Swope, Young and Grant of the Hollywood Theatres, Inc., offer a new departure for suburban motion picture houses with the establishment of regular Sunday Symphony recitals preceding the regular motion picture presentations.

AGAINST GERMAN FILMS

Representatives of the Actors' Association are touring the country making speeches against the importation of German films. A loyal film league has been formed and a representative sent to Congress to introduce a bill for tariff levy on the foreign pictures.

Sarah Kernan plays a part in "The Butterfly Girl."

Fox states that additional stories are being prepared for William Farnum.

Goldwyn announces the purchase of "Grand Larceny," an Albert Payson Terhune story.

The heaviest California rainfall in years has marooned Tom Santschi and his company in the High Sierras.

Lule Warrenton is cast in an important role with Hobart Bosworth in his forthcoming production, "Renunciation."

Willard Lee Hall will present "Rexardo" (East Indian seer) at the Actors' Fund Festival, June 4th, at the Beverly Hills Speedway.

Mme. Marie Curie, the famous French scientist who is to visit Los Angeles on June 7th, has been invited by Lois Weber to visit her studio during her stay in Los Angeles.

Having practically recovered from his recent illness, Theodore Roberts has returned to the Ince Studios, and will complete his work in "Hail the Woman," the Ince special now in production.

Shirley Mason and her husband, Bernard Durning, stood sponsors for Edith Hallor, film star, at her wedding to Jack Dillon, Fox director, recently. The nuptials took place in the Durning apartments with Viola Dana and Alice Lake as guests.

Harry "Snub" Pollard will be the guest of honor soon at Tate's, San Francisco. His dinner hosts will be the directors of the San Francisco office of Pathe Exchange, Inc. Charles Parrott, director of the Pollard Comedies, will also be present.

HARLAN HELPS WOUNDED EX-SOLDIERS

Kenneth Harlan has donated his collection of books and accumulated files of back numbers of magazines to the wounded ex-soldier boys of the Fox Hill Hospital in Staten Island, New York.

RANDOLPH LEWIS TO CONFER WITH KIPLING

While sets for the next Pathe-Kipling picture are being built on the Brunton lot, it is understood that Randolph Lewis, scenario and technical expert for Pathe, will make a short visit to England to show the author the film of "Without Benefit to Clergy" and confer with him on special points involved in the production of its successors.

SISTERS INTERESTED IN FOREIGN RELIEF WORK

Constance and Norma Talmadge have been appointed members of the National Theatrical Committee which has been formed with John Drew as chairman to further the interests of the Near East relief. The committee is at present conducting a drive for cast-off clothing which is to be shipped to the Near East for distribution among the destitute Armenians and other peoples of the famine-stricken land.

NEW STARS FOR UNIVERSAL FEATURES

Carl Laemmle announces that Marie Prevost and Hoot Gibson will be starred in Universal special attractions.

It is rumored that Jimmie Aubrey will write and direct his own comedies for Vitagraph.

GRACE DARMOND TO APPEAR IN CANADIAN THEATRES

Grace Darmond, featured star of the new Rockett picture, "Handle With Care," contemplates a tour of Canada to make personal appearances at the motion picture theaters.

Miss Darmond's mother will accompany her on the trip, which will begin at Toronto, extend into the eastern provinces and thence westward and northwestward, ending at Winnipeg.

LINDER VISITS GEORGES CARPENTIER

While in New York Max Linder with his personal representative, Clark Irvine, spent an afternoon with Georges Carpentier, the French pugilist, at his Long Island training camp.

GOLDWYN'S THIRD

It is understood that Goldwyn's third Italian production for distribution in the United States and Canada, will be "Madame Sans Gene."

The first two, as previously announced, will be "Theodora" and "The Ship."

Gladys George has fully recovered from her recent accident.

Francis McDonald is playing Gabriel Palombra in "Puppets of Fate" at Tally's.

Harold Lloyd has purchased a lot next to his home on South Hoover street, and will use the space for a swimming pool and tennis courts.

"Where's the Fire?" is the title of the new Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard, which Pathe has scheduled for release June 12th.

"Shifting Sands" is the fourteenth spisode of the new Pathe serial, "The Avenging Arrow," starring Ruth Roland, about to be released.

Pathe Exchange announces the distribu tion of the new animated cartoon series by Paul Terry, "Aesop's Fables Modernized," produced by the Fables Pictures, Inc.

WHARTON WITH ZENITH FEATURES

Zenith Features, Inc., with leased space at the Louis B. Mayer Studios, has engaged Theodore Wharton to direct its first feature, "The Besetting Sin," from an original story by Leota Morgan. The present plans of the company include the making of four productions a year. They will be story adaptations, and will be filmed with all-star casts.

AT UNIVERSAL

Priscilla Dean is at work on "Conflict," her forthcoming super-feature, in which she is being directed by Stuart Paton.

Erich von Stroheim, directing "Foolish Wives," is ill at his residence, and upon his return to the studio the concluding scenes will be filmed for the big production and it will be rushed to the screen.

Mary Philbin is progressing with her featured role in "The Harbor," directed by Rollin Sturgeon.

Frank Mayo is still at Catalina where the principal scenes for "The Shark Master," his forthcoming drama, are being filmed. Fred LeRoy Granville is directing.

The last scenes for "The White Horseman," Art Acord's forthcoming serial, are now being filmed under the direction of Albert Russell.

When Gladys Walton finishes her current feature, "Christine of the Young Heart," she will begin work on "The Girl Who Knew All About Men," by Roy Clements. Miss Walton will interpret the part of a modern flapper.

Edith Roberts has finished the concluding scenes of "The Gossamer Web," under the direction of King Baggot, and will soon begin work on "Storm Tossed," an original story of the Brittany coast, by John Hohenwest.

AT REALART

Wanda Hawley is at work upon the opening scenes of her newest feature, "Her Face Value," by Percy Heath, based on a Saturday Evening Post story by Earl Derr Biggers, "The Girl Who Paid Dividends." T. Roy Barnes is playing opposite the star.

Bebe Daniels is completing the closing scenes of "One Wild Week," by Frances Harmer. Maurice Campbell is directing this production with the supervision of Elmer Harris.

KERN TO DO "LAST DAYS OF POMPEII"

Harry Ellis Dean is collaborating with George H. Kern in adapting Bulwer Lytton's great story, "The Last Days of Pompeii," for the screen. When not shooting his final scenes for "The Unfoldment," Kern keeps busily engaged in drafting continuity.

Paul Hosier has just completed the production of a one-reel comedy, "The Mysterious Card," in which he has featured Marion Comer. Palmer Schlegel was cameraman and Hosier played in support of the star.

"The Empty Gun," a two reel western drama featuring Lon Chaney, is being released by Universal.

EXPORT CORPORATION TO HANDLE A. E. PRODUCTIONS ABROAD

The Inter-Globe Export Corporation, recently organized by Sidney Garrett, has signed contracts with the Associated Exhibitors, Inc., for the distribution of Associated product in all parts of the world with the exception of the United States and Canada.

Through the Inter-Globe Export Corporation, "The Rider of the King Log," the Associated special now being released; Bryant Washburn in "The Road to London;" the Associated Lloyd comedies; the coming productions of Mae Murray and Florence Vidor, and the whole schedule for the fall will be available to other countries.

AT VITAGRAPH

Earle Williams has started production of his next feature, co-directing with Robert Ensminger. The story is by H. H. Van Loan and is temporarily called "The Man from Calgary." It is an out-of-door story and many exteriors will be filmed at Lake Tahoe.

Antonio Moreno and Director Chester Bennett have completed their newest feature, "The Secret of the Hills," and it is being edited preparatory to shipment east. Final scenes were taken at La Jolla, from which location the company has just returned.

FIRST FEATURE SHOWN

"The Contrast," the first feature of the Labor Film Service, was given a showing recently in the Simplex Projection Rooms in New York City. Labor Film Service was formed some time ago with the moral backing of the Central Federated Union and the financial support of some of its members. Its avowed purpose was to make pictures depicting the true side of labor's battle and with a number of angles eliminated, which, it was claimed, put the labor world in an unfair light.

GILLSTROM TO MAKE TWO-REEL COMEDIES

Arvid E. Gillstrom, who directed Constance Binney in "Such a Little Queen," for Realart, will be here presently to make a series of eight two-reel specials for Educational release.

E. J. Smith, former general manager for Jesse D. Hampton, is now production manager of Inspiration Pictures, Inc.

"Tol'ble David" has been purchased from D. W. Griffith for Richard Barthelmess' first starring vehicle.

Gertrude Olmsted and Tiny Sanford are supporting Billy Fletcher in his new comedy "Tamale Mine," now in production at Universal.

Edith Roberts will enjoy a short vacation at Coronado Beach before starting her forthcoming picture, "Storm Tossed," a Brittany story from the pen of John Hohenwest.

SALIENT'S SECOND

The second production to be made by Salient Pictures, Inc., will be temporarily named "The Call of the Open," and will be directed by J. Charles Davis, 2nd., who wrote and directed "The Shadow."

LOOKING FOR RELEASE

Blanche Sweet is still convalescing. It is understood that her contract with Jesse D. Hampton has been completed and that she is seeking a new affiliation.

NEW PRODUCING CO.

The South and West Comedies, a new company, has started work at Culver City on a series of one-reel western comedies. J. T. Skinner is head of the organization.

CULLISON COMEDY FINISHED

Webster Cullison, of Clever Comedies, has completed production on "The Stolen Umbrella," the second of the series of Ellis Parker Butler stories of "Philo Gubb," with Victor Potel in the title role.

ITALIAN "BEN HUR"

An Italian version of "Ben Hur" is being produced by the Ultra Company with studios in Rome, Italy.

PHILIP CARLE AFFILIATED WITH HOLMAN DAY

Philip Carle, recently assistant director with Robert G. Vignola of Cosmopolitan Productions, has resigned to become a full-fledged director on his own account. He has been engaged to direct the Holman Day stories which are being filmed in the Maine woods.

Anna Maude Kimberly has been chosen as head of the Kinema Bureau Scenario Department.

Robert Badel has finished an important part in "The Mysterious Card," directed by Paul Hosier.

PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

Chapter IV.

We arrived at the point in our last chapter where we had brought the girl and our prospector together in the story. It is unnecessary to remark that there is going to be a chance for some good acting on the part of the prospector when he picks up the unconscious form of the girl. Bear in mind that he has not seen the face of a woman for a couple of years, and when he beholds the unconscious form of a beautiful girl, in the wreckage of the aeroplane, and as he picks her up tenderly and takes her to his cabin —sees that she is still breathing—he is going to portray a number of interesting emotions. We will assume that she remains unconscious for a time. One of his first inclinations will be to protect her from the villain across the river. Consequently, it is necessary for him to conceal the evidence of her arrival. Therefore, he would cover the wreckage of the aeroplane with some boughs. It would also be good stuff if he heard the drone of another aeroplane overhead and we established the fact that it was the plane of the young aviator, in search of the girl.

Now we can further build up the character of our prospector and at the same time establish some suspense by having the girl remain unconscious for several days, or at least over night. We can show the prospector as he ministers to the girl and then, as bolting the cabin door, he takes his rifle and sleeps outside while he guards her. We have a thread of suspense here, because our audience is going to wonder what the girl will do when she awakes and finds herself at the mercy of a rugged man of the wilds. We can strengthen our suspense and add another thread by having the villain discover the wrecked aeroplane which has been covered up by the hero, as we establish the fact that he resolves to keep an eye on future developments. We can enlighten him to the fact that there was a woman in the plane by having him pick up a hairpin that has fallen from her head when she was removed from the wreckage by our prospector. The close-up of the villain as he studies this hairpin and registers his resolve to investigate, would make an interesting scene, and establish a wonderful thread of suspense.

Now, as before stated, we must have our aviator fall into the hands of the prospector, in order for the prospector to learn of the dramatic situation that exists between the aviator and the girl's father—and to make possible the situation which later develops into our climax. Let us therefore assume that the young aviator, after failing to locate the wreckage of the aeroplane from above, makes a landing in the mountains and starts out afoot. He might get lost in a snow-drift, or slide down a precipice and be picked up unconscious by our hero.

But wait a minute! We must not take the young aviator to the cabin while the girl is there. That would spoil everything. Let us therefore assume that this is some time after the girl has landed in the canyon, and that the villain has already met her, without the knowledge of the prospector. It is logical to assume that the villain would try to win the girl, and he might offer to take her back to civilization. Let us say then, that the girl is across the river at the cabin of the villain when the prospector returns with the injured aviator. The aviator, in the meantime, has described the threat which has been made by the old man, and right here is where a very strong thread of suspense begins, because we can establish the fact that the prospector is immediately tempted to remain silent. He does not know that the girl is not in the cabin, and we might have him leave the young aviator at some distance from the cabin. Of course he is greatly surprised when he arrives and finds the girl gone.

Now we have gotten ourselves into an awkward situation. tI is certain that as soon as the young aviator sufficiently recovers he is going to discover the girl. Therefore, we must do something to avoid that, at this time. This can be accomplished by having the girl's father come into the mountains with a searching party and arrive on the scene. Suppose that he gives the aviator just twenty-four hours to restore the girl, and tells the young chap that at the end of that time, the party is going to return to civilization, and that either he or the aviator will remain behind. Now we have the girl across the river and the rest of the party on the prospector's side. We must figure out some way to hold tension and prevent our story coming to an end too quickly, by developing a means of keeping the girl across the river for a time. This we will figure out in our next chapter.

STORIES WANTED

We haven't landed that "waif" story yet, despite the fact that one or two very good ones have been submitted. Remember this is a story for a girl of the Bessie Love type, and that the character portrayal should be very strong. There is very little or no melodrama wanted and the romance should be of a sweet and innocent nature.

There is another market for a story of the Norma Talmadge type.

Still another company has requested that some five-reel comedy-dramas, featuring an ingenue, be submitted to it. I should say that something of the Bebe Daniels or Mabel Normand type is what they are looking for.

A director, who is going to produce for himself, is looking for a strong dramatic story featuring a female star, in which she has a chance to do some emotional work. He prefers stories of the outdoors.

There is one concern that wants a five-reel vehicle for an eccentric character juvenile. This actor is in a class by himself. He is not like Charles Ray, Douglas McLean or Johnnie Walker, but might be said to be a composite of the three.

(Before going any further with the development of this plot, I wish to announce that all rights on the same are reserved.)

WYCLIFFE A. HILL.

Bradley J. Smollen, publicity director of Western Vitagraph, is responsible for the continuity for William Duncan's next special production.

Fritzi Ridgeway, recently featured in a series of Western productions, will play opposite Earle Williams at Vitagraph. The story will be "The Man from Calgary."

WILLIAM D. TAYLOR TO VACATION

William D. Taylor, motion picture director, is sailing for Europe on June 9th at the recommendation of his physician. He will remain abroad four weeks.

A NEW INDEPENDENT PRODUCER?

Reginald Barker's contract with Goldwyn expires in a few days and it is expected that he will seriously consider producing independently.

GOLDWYN TO PICTURIZE SWEDISH PLAY

The world's motion picture rights to Henning Berger's drama, "Syndafloden," have just been bought by Goldwyn. Contracts effecting the purchase were signed in Stockholm. An adaptation of this play was produced in New York by Arthur Hopkins in 1917 under the name of "The Deluge."

SENNETT MAKING CHANGES

Charlie Murray has ended his long term of service under the Sennett banner. Sennett in the future will give his attention to the making of serious photoplays with the exception of two comedy units, featuring Ben Turpin and Billy Bevan in two-reel typical Sennett comedies.

LUCITA SQUIER TO ADAPT NEW NEILAN STORY

Lucita Squier, who has been affiliated with the Marshall Neilan scenario department for three years, has been recently promoted and placed in charge of the adaptation of the new Neilan story, "Bits of Life."

RUSSIAN PROGRAM AT MUMMER'S WORKSHOP

The Mummer's Workship will have a Russian evening on Tuesday at 8 o'clock. Roumanova will play and sing Russian folk songs and Madam Baronovsky will speak on the Moscow theater, with which institution she was connected many years. The hostesses for the evening will be Miriam Meredith, Mrs. Charles Meredith, Mrs. Clarence Thomas, Isabel Percival and Helen Yoder.

STRONG WILL STAR IN COMEDIES

Porter Strong, who went east with the D. W. Griffith Company two years ago, is to be starred in a series of comedies, for which distributing arrangements are about to be completed.

The comedies will be made in the Griffith Studios at Mamaroneck, and will represent one of four production units in that organization.

NEW COMPANY STARTS

Bob Horner, author-director, formerly connected with Vitagraph, Lasky, and Universal, is the latest to enter the independent field. Backed by the Prairie Film Company, of Chicago, Horner is now organizing the company's new producing unit. A series of twenty-four two-reel western dramas will be produced. Isabell Winans, a well-known writer from Nebraska, has already prepared her first continuity, "Hell's Valley," from an original story by Mr. Horner.

MARSHALL NEILAN HAS NOVEL STORY

Neilan has started his next production for Associated First National Pictures. This picture is said to present a novel form of story in that it offers the combined efforts of four noted writers, namely: Hugh Wiley, Walter Trumbull, Thomas McMarrow and Marshall Neilan. It is titled "Bits of Life," and those heading the cast are Fred Burton, Rockliffe Fellows and James Bradbury, Jr. A short trip will be made to San Francisco for a number of exteriors and the balance of the story will be made here.

SPECIAL SHOWINGS OF PHOTOPLAYS FOR DENMARK

Jean Hersholt, actor and director with Benjamin B. Hampton, and former actor of the Scandinavian stage, is responsible for the showing to the theatrical profession in the capital cities of Denmark, Sweden and Norway Metro's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and Benjamin B. Hampton's "A Certain Rich Man."

GUNNARD BACK FROM SWEDEN

Andrew Gunnard, former New York and Los Angeles film promoter and director, who for the last six months has been in Norway, Sweden and Denmark getting scenics and engineering an international film exchange project there, has returned to his Los Angeles office at Brunton Studios.

On account of a slight accident to Marguerite de la Motte work is progressing at only half speed on Douglas Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers."

Charlie Chaplin expects to complete his present production, "Vanity Fair," around the middle of June.

HOWE ON CONTRACT

Eliot Howe, who co-directed Benjamin B. Hampton's photoplay, "A Certain Rich Man," with Howard Hickman, is now on contract with Mr. Hampton to co-direct with Jean Hersholt in forthcoming Hampton productions. Mr. Howe, who was formerly Frank Keenan's director, co-directed "The Lure of Egypt," "A Certain Rich Man," "The Man of the Forest," "The Mysterious Rider," and "Heart's Haven," with the Hampton company.

STURGEON WITH F. P.-L.

Rollin Sturgeon has been signed by Famous Players-Lasky to direct. He will work in the East. Sturgeon of late has been with Universal.

SENNETT SIGNS LOWELL SHERMAN

Lowell Sherman has been signed by Mack Sennett to appear in a number of dramatic productions.

Bobbie Mack has recently finished "Onion Jones" in "The Son of Wallingford."

Fred J. Butler has chosen Carl Stockdale to play an important role in David Butler's next starring picture, "Bing-Bang-Boom."

William Walling will be seen in the forthcoming David Butler production, "Bing-Bang-Boom," being directed by Fred J. Butler.

Texas Guinan has left the western film colony, and is in New York. She has recently completed eight Western pictures.

Ruth Stonehouse is playing opposite Tom Santschi in his series of out-door plays being made for Pathe.

ATHLETIC SERIES

The Donald Mack Co., a new unit, is in the process of cutting its first production, "In the Water," an educational series consisting of swimming, life-saving, resuscitation, etc. It features Elsie Hanneman.

MORE COMEDIES

Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., have arranged with W. S. Campbell to produce a series of animal comedies, 13 in all, for release during the coming season.

"SANDS O' DEE" AGAIN

D. W. Griffith will make a second version of "Sands o' Dee," with Mae Marsh in the principal role. In all likelihood it will follow "The Two Orphans," upon which actual work starts this week at the Mamaroneck studios.

"Sands o' Dee" was made by Griffith some years ago with Mary Pickford. It was an old Biograph release.

Miss Marsh's return to Griffith follows that of Dorothy and Lillian Gish, who have been cast for "The Two Orphans."

Katherine MacDonald's next starring vehicle will be an original comedy drama by George Marion, Jr., written especially for the star and prepared for the screen by Ruth Wightman.

The Border Feature Film Corporation is producing its third Western two-reeler and expects to complete its schedule of twenty-four two-reel Westerns during the coming year.

Lilliam Guenther is at present with the Douglas Fairbanks company.

NEW STORY FOR BETTY COMPSON

Betty Compson's next starring vehical will be "The Woman in the Case" adapted from the play by Clyde Fitch and scenarioized by Albert Shelby Le Vino.

HARMONY FILMS RELEASED

Paul F. Magenheimer and George Edwards-Hall, of the Harmony Film Company, have returned from New York where they succeeded in releasing their recent pictures "Judge Her Not" and "Wolves of the Range," starring Jack Livingston and Pauline Curley.

The Harmony Film Company will make six more pictures of five reels each, based on stories of the West and Northwest.

Production will be resumed around the middle of July when the continuities will be finished.

NOT ASSOCIATED WITH CLARA SMITH HAMON

Owing to the fact that a persistent rumor is being circulated to the effect that Al Ira Smith is associated with Clara Smith Hamon, he wishes to announce that this report is unfounded. That he is not identified with her, or any motion picture enterprise with which she is connected.

CECIL B. DeMILLE FINISHING

On completion of his present special production for Paramount, Cecil B. DeMille will leave June 8th, for New York, where he will confere with the executives of the company concerning his future productions.

JEANIE MACPHERSON ON JOB AGAIN

Jeanie Macpherson, scenarist of Cecil B. DeMille's offerings, has returned to the Lasky Studio after a trip abroad, during which time she gathered information and data for her future screen writing.

nature, we couldn't help observing to ourselves, when reviewing this play, that a course of exercise such as she indulges in during her action as Cora, would be a great thing for Miss Hawley to "stick to" generally, if she expects to remain physically in the ingenue class. Her fast increasing size is a little incongruous when her roles are considered.

Forrest Stanley makes Frank Rodham, the determined young husband, very interesting. He rather walks away with the sympathy in several sequences.

Gladys George hasn't been better cast than she is as the lily-like Lila Drake, who captivates Rodham with her supple grace. That very grace is a bit detrimental to the star at such close proximity, by the way.

Robert Bolder is "there" with a few spirited scenes as Mr. Foster, a railroad president with domestic ideas.

Helen Dunbar, Clarence Geldart and Helen Lynch all play small parts well.

ANITA STEWART BACK FROM LOCATION

After two weeks of location work at the Lake Elmanor dam of the Stone & Webster Construction Company, Anita Stewart has returned to the Louis B. Mayer Studio to make interior scenes for "A Question of Honor," her present Mayer-First National picture. Accompanying Miss Stewart on her return journey were Rudolph W. B. Cameron, her husband and business manager, and Virginia Norden, assistant to Mr. Mayer. Director Edwin Carewe and his staff, a portion of the cast including Edward Hearne, Ed Brady, Walt Whitman and Bert Sprotte, and Robert B. Kurrle, cameraman, are still on location filming scenes in which the star does not appear. They are expected back within a few days when they will resume work at the studio.

Charles Clary has been engaged to play in the current Ince all star special.

Willie Collier and Mrs. Collier and their son "Buster" recently visited the Ince Studios, as the guests of Thomas H. Ince.

sheets" and withholding their absolute support, they are only illustrating their own short-sightedness and lack of understanding and appreciation.

It is so often true that real merit has to go away from home to win recognition that it is almost pathetic, and would be sad were it not for the humor aroused in witnessing the hasty scramble the "home folks" always make to claim the "ugly duckling" after the real judges have pronounced it a "beautiful swan."

Of course it is not for me to comment on these members of the industry or upon their mental astigmatism in failing to see the treasure so close to their eyes, but I know that they need you and I want them to get the benefit of your ability in any way they can, to the end that the whole profession can be built up to a stronger and prouder basis and I know that it is only necessary to show them that other interests appreciate your work in order to wake them up. So on a purely impersonal and unselfish basis I'm making this suggestion that you come "clean" and sign your articles in full.

Yours for the PUBLICITY and RECOGNITION that REAL MERIT DESERVES.

GORDON EXPECTED

Robert Gordon will be in Los Angeles presently to play the leading role in "The Rosary," which Jerome Storm is to make for Selig-Rork.

KING TO DIRECT BARTHELMESS

Henry King has been selected to direct Richard Barthelmess in his first Associated First National production.

Bessie Love recently won a dancing contest between various film stars and was awarded a large silver cup by Louis J. Gasnier.

John H. Elliott, who played the part of the priest in the stage version of "Slippy McGee," will enact the role in the screen version.

Robert Badger, son of Clarence Badger, Goldwyn director, has just finished a part with Marion Fairfax at the Hollywood Studio.

Eugene Pouyet has been engaged to enact a part in the Rex Ingram-Metro picture, "The Conquering Power," from Balzac's "Eugenie Grandet."

Jack Curtis will play the principal heavy role with William Duncan and Edith Johnson, at Vitagraph, in their new feature, temporarily called "The Super Man."

Dorothy Orth plays the leading girl part in a new Vanity Comedy being made by Scott Sidney. The picture has been called "Chicken-Hearted."

The season's queen of Princeton University is Betty Blythe, according to the college election just closed. She succeeds Maude Adams and Norma Talmadge.

It is said that Bert Lytell has been elected as the most popular film star in the eyes of Japanese picture-goers by a nation-wide contest just completed by a Tokyo newspaper.

Alfred Hollingsworth has accepted an offer to take charge of the sales department of the Photoplaywrights League, which work he will combine with his picture activities.

Miriam Cooper has just completed the leading female role opposite George Walsh in "Serenade," the Associated First National production just completed by R. A. Walsh.

Henry Murdock will be absent from the screen several weeks, due to a broken nose, after which director Frederic Sullivan will cast him in "Cyrano de Bergerac," soon to go into production at the Christie Studios.

For his principal feminine support in "Fightin' Mad," William Desmond has engaged Virginia Brown Faire, who recently completed the leading role in the first of the Rudyard Kipling stories, "Without Benefit of Clergy." Other important feminine portrayals have been assigned to Rosemary Theby and Doris Pawn.

Virginia Norden, assistant to Louis B. Mayer, and Josephine Quirk, scenario writer, have left for the northern part of the state where Anita Stewart and her company are filming location scenes for "A Question of Honor" under Edwin Carewe's direction.

John M. Stahl is completing arrangements for his next picture for Louis B. Mayer, and expects to start presently. Neither the title of the production nor the cast have yet been given out but it has been announced that Bess Meredyth is preparing the story and continuity from an original theme by Mr. Stahl. The director's last picture, "Retribution," is now in New York and will shortly be presented by Mr. Mayer through First National channels.

To Finance Independents

Seemingly in direct refutation of a recent speech by a well known representative of the industry to the effect that Wall Street will soon launch another freezeout of the independent producer, comes the announcement that Thomas H. Ince has associated himself with a group of local financiers, including executives of the First National and Los Angeles Trust and Savings Banks, for the purpose of developing the junior financing of motion picture production and to bridge the gap existing between the inception of the picture and the period when bank loans can be safely made upon it.

This organization may be successfully approached by the Independent who, with a meritorious story, cast and director, has not the financial wherewithal to go ahead. By providing capital upon a strictly fair basis, this new enterprise, headed by Mr. Ince, will eliminate the necessity of the tragic custom heretofore followed by thus handicapped producers, of signing away anywhere from thirty to sixty per cent of their pictures' profits in order to obtain a comparatively small amount of money.

A financing concern of this sort may well be expected to both assist to expression the art in our profession and discourage the murderous assaults upon it of Wall Street and Europe which, it seems reasonable to presume, are linked hand in hand in their merciless hunt for the desperately needed or much coveted shekels (as the case may be). Anything that encourages the independent producr at this time, saves the American Cinema.

—F. R.

"Cupid" and Publicity

R. S. Sparks, better known as "Cupid" Sparks, Los Angeles' ex-marriage license clerk, has been "very much elected" for the city council. Personally this information, facing us in our favorite morning newspaper a few days since, provided us with more to deliberate upon than to be amused about. Why, it seems reasonable to ask, was this particular individual given the particular (and let us add tremendous) support which he received at the late election? In other words, what exceptionally brilliant or even markedly intelligent act or thought of his has gone to improve, or even promises to improve, our community? True, political machines have oftentimes placed "anybody" chosen by them in office. It is, however, entirely safe to leave out that angle in the consideration of this circumstance.

Then what won Cupid's popularity contest? The answer isn't hard to discover or rather recollect. Remember back a few months, a couple of years. Did any of you readers who were then local residents manage to miss this gentleman's advertising campaign? It would be impossible not to recall the dozens of press stories following upon the heels of each other, in which he played the leading, or at least, a principal role. Scarcely a week passed during which time the latest romantic adventure of a man who was certainly occupying only an ordinary public job, was published in either a serious or a jocular vein. It might be suggested that all of this spoke well for someone's persistence and ability to "get away with it," although we don't know just who deserves credit for these talents. The importance of such knowledge is scarcely worth the conjecture, anyway. The point remains—Cupid even out-publicized the much mentioned picture stars.

Further, he placed himself upon familiar terms with every peruser of the Los Angeles dailies, and he has ended up "city counciling" the lot of us. This is all remarked not disparagingly of the individual in question, but as another striking proof of P. T. Barnum's favorite quotation concerning the results of advertising. If Mr. Sparks has starred himself politically with publicity—more power to him. He has at least sold an idea to a great city through a worthy medium. Pretty profitable business?

A Dream Materializing

It is always exceedingly pleasant to accomplish one's dreams. It is even gratifying to learn that the other fellow has discovered that one's suggestions are worthy enough for him to adopt as his own and carry out. Consequently we are glad to be able to report so soon that the World's Film Exposition, one of our oldest visions and one which caused much comment when it was set forth in this magazine in a comparatively recent issue, is to be realized next year, upon the favorable development of present plans.

If all those now interested in the proposition treat it wisely we repeat that it can be made the greatest event in the history of our industry. In any case, Camera! will be squarely behind those who are proving the feasibility of its pet idea.

Film Capital Production Notes

ROACH WILL STAR MILDRED DAVIS

Mildred Davis has signed a long term contract with Hal E. Roach, which includes her appearance as leading lady in a few more Harold Lloyd Comedies, and following this, She will be starred in five reel dramatic productions sponsored by Hal E. Roach.

AT GOLDWYN

Tom Moore has started work under the direction of E. Mason Hopper on "From the Ground Up," an original screen story by Rupert Hughes.

Director Frank Lloyd and company expect to be on location about six weeks at Huntington Lake, making both exterior and interior scenes for Katherine Newlin Burt's original screen story, "The Man from Lost River," for which Arthur F. Statter and Lambert Hillyer prepared the screen version.

Reginald Barker has arrived at the halfway mark in his current production, "The Poverty of Riches," in which Richard Dix and Leatrice Joy portray the leading roles.

AT UNIVERSAL

Marie Prevost has begun work on her first starring vehicle, "The Butterfly," written by Percival Wilder and directed by King Baggot.

Tod Browning is busy on "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story with Mabel Julienne Scott interpreting the name role.

Hoot Gibson is on the home stretch of "The Mascotte of the Three Star," his forthcoming feature in which Jack Ford is directing him.

Eddie Polo is in the midst of another two-reeler in which he perpetuates his characterization of "Cyclone Smith," the cowboy. Jay Marchant is directing the star.

Six directors are collaborating with Frank Lawrence, film editor-in-chief, in cutting their recently finished productions.

Work will begin presently on two new pictures. Harry Carey will start "Partners," a story which Lucien Hubbard wrote for him and in which he will be directed by Robert Thornby, and Edith Roberts will begin work on "Storm Tossed," a light-house story, in which she will be directed by Reaves Eason.

Eileen Sedgwick, after a protracted illness, is at work on "The Terror Trail," her latest serial production, being filmed under the direction of Edward Kull.

AT VITAGRAPH

Another week at the studio and William Duncan and his unit filming his new production, "The Super Man," will leave for a distant northern location. The final title of the production has not yet been announced.

Larry Semon will resume work at the studio this week after three weeks recovering from injuries sustained in his last picture. Several airplane stunts will feature his next special comedy.

AT METRO

Bert Lytell's new Metro starring vehicle will be "Junk," a Saturday Evening Post story by Kenneth Harris, for which June Mathis is preparing the scenario. "Junk" will be a Maxwell Karger production and the actual filming is expected to start within ten days.

"The Infamous Miss Revell," a story from the pen of W. Carey Wonderly, has been selected as Alice Lake's new starring picture. Arthur J. Zellner prepared the screen adaptation and Dallas M. Fitzgerald will direct Miss Lake in this production. Cullen Landis will play opposite the star.

Madame Nazimova is cutting and editing her production of "Camille," which will be released in the near future.

Gareth Hughes has completed his work in "The Hunch," and will star in two more

Current Reviews

"THE WILD GOOSE"

Grauman's

It is not often that a novel is improved in its scenario, but such is sometimes the case, as it is with Gouverneur Morris' "The Wild Goose," which appeared several years ago in the Cosmopolitan magazine. Through his various works and personal statements the world knows Mr. Morris as an enemy of the very popular, modern divorce, and because "The Wild Goose" treats of this theme, it caused much comment upon its original publication. As we said before, the author's theory and points are rendered even more lucid when seen through the lens. There is no question but that this all star cast production is a great story. Whether its theme is in anyway practical as applicable to American ideals is an arbitrary matter. Such a consideration means little, anyway. If it is a good picturized novel with big situations and a worthwhile trend that the public wants, and it is apparent that this sort of thing is desired, then here it is.

Albert Capellani has handled the almost dangerous action artistically and with great care. The photography and technical effects of the production are excellent. Further, the characters are beautifully filled.

Holmes E. Herbert gives us one of his best pieces of work in the title role. He plays Frank Manners, that rare type of twentieth century family man who desires nothing but the presence and devotion of his loved ones and demands nothing but their loyalty. Herbert's subtle interpretation of the wounded husband who remains true to himself through all the heartbreak and frenzy of losing his mate to another, typifies the wild goose whose ideals and plan of life he so closely follows. Quite fittingly this role is the outstanding one of the story.

Mary MacLaren is better placed than we have ever seen her in the part of Diana Manners, a spoiled young wife, whose hunting instincts still demand expression, after ten years of seemingly ideal matrimony. There is something in Miss MacLaren's personality that particularly suits her to unsympathetic roles. This one she manages amply.

Dorothy Bernard, well remembered from other days, is seen as Mary Hastings, a "dutiful" wife who, despite her lifelong love for Frank Manners, has remained true in word and deed to her elderly husband. She expresses her devotion by expending every effort to further the happiness of Manners with another woman and that woman's child. Frequently is the spiritual role of philosopher and friend assumed in fiction by a male character. A strong sacrifice part like this when done by a woman is interesting, partly on account of its rarity.

The fascinating "other man" in Diana's life is gracefully accomplished by Norman Kerry. Ogden Fenn's best characteristic is his ability to "take in" a situation, which Kerry. Ogden Fenn's best characteristic is Joseph Smiley is good as Mr. Hastings, a man who dares and sacrifices and Rita Rogan is sufficient as little Tam Manners. Her resemblance to Miss MacLaren is striking.

This picture is offered by Cosmopolitan Productions through Paramount.

"MADE IN HEAVEN"

California

A farce that compares in almost every way unfavorably with Tom Moore's last Goldwyn offering, "Hold Your Horses," is "Made In Heaven," that star's current showing. It is a forced comedy with badly cut-in subtitles and much meaningless business. The direction, which was by Victor Schertzinger, is uneven and, in several places, he allows his supporting cast to disregard its tempo. We might add that the story is a bit foolish.

The star himself is both as delightful and as technically correct as usual with his work as William Lowry, a genial Irish fireman with an amusing line of philosophy. Fortunately he is allowed much footage for pantomime with which he almost, but not quite, makes good the inferior picture.

Helene Chadwick jerks through the role of Claudia Royce, the annoyingly hysterical and inconsistent feminine lead with quite obviously no basic understanding of what she is attempting. We have enjoyed much superior work by this actress but in this effort she falls down. Partly we blame the direction and cutting.

Rene Adoree (the new Mrs. Moore), we see in an interesting minor role which she handles promisingly although her action is poorly timed for the camera.

A cast of clever players fills the other more or less unimportant roles. It includes Molly Malone, Kate Lester, Al Filson, Freeman Wood, Charles Eldridge, Herbert Prior, Fronzie Gunn and John Cossar.

Goldwyn stars should have better story material to work with.

"SHELTERED DAUGHTERS"

Clune's Broadway

A fairly entertaining program picture entitled "Sheltered Daughters" and containing a worthy point or so, is released locally by Realart. The story, by George Bronson Howard, deals with an almost incredibly gullible girl whose "sheltered" life nevertheless allows her to stray pretty far from the family fireside in her perfectly natural quest for a little adventure. The facts that both the plot and theory are quite dishwatery in places, won't affect the average audience unfavorably, we think, and then "Sheltered Daughters" is a perfectly safe picture for the blue law agitators to let the children see Saturday afternoons. Surely that is something!

There is nothing to remark adversely about the scenario or direction, which were by Clara Beranger and Edward Dillon respectively.

Justine Johnstone, the star of the story, is seen as Jenny Dark, a protected daughter of an American "detectuve" and a dead French mother whose country she worships. Mayhap because nothing but the simplest of action is required, Miss Johnstone gets on surprisingly well. At certain angles she is certainly beautiful.

Charles Gerard gives the most attractive performance in the picture. He does French Pete with his almost proverbial poise. It is indeed necessary that as the impostor who poses as a French major to obtain money from New York society presumably for war orphans, he have just that aplomb.

Warner Baxter in the male lead, Pep Mullins, either through lack of opportunity or screen experience, means little.

Riley Hatch is good as Jim Dark, Jenny's father.

Helen Holland, James Laffey, Jimmie Lapsley and Don Charles complete the list of players.

"THE LAST CARD"

Tally's

A clever mystery story of crime and intrigue, is Metro's "The Last Card," a retitled screen version for May Allison of Maxwell Smith's "Dated." It holds the attention throughout and rivets it in spots. The scenario by Molly Parro is lucid and the cast, for the most part, is more than satisfactory.

The lighting of the sets may be mentioned as being very bad now and again rendering the technical standard, at least in that respect, considerably below standard.

Miss Allison lends the role of Elsie Kirkwood, a resourceful wife, much of interest. This is better material than this actress has had to work with for some time.

The masculine lead, Ralph Kirkwood, is competently managed by Albert Roscoe who plays a man unjustly accused of murder.

Little Stanley Goethals does some happy little work on his own account as the Kirkwood baby.

Frank Elliott and Irene Hunt compose the opposition, which is constructed along the regular old time, melodramatic lines. They are both sufficient.

Dana Todd and Wilton Taylor play minor parts.

"The Last Card" is Bayard Veller's first personally directed Metro Screen Classic.

ITALA FIRST RELEASE READY

The Itala Photo Play Corp. of America is ready to release its first production, "Faith, or Should a Man Have Faith in a Woman's Love." Fred Meyer is general manager of the company.

The first Warner-Federated Comedy, starring Monty Banks, has just been completed. It is "Peaceful Alley."

It is reported that Marion Davies is to leave the Hearst organization, Cosmopolitan Productions, to produce independently.

DeWitt Jennings has been engaged to appear in Viola Dana's new picture, a Bayard Veiller production, "There Are No Villains."

The first Jimmy Callahan comedy to be released by the Film Market, Inc., will be "Jimmy's Last Night Out." It will be followed by "Props," "The Stowaway" and "Wild Women."

The Italian American Film Co. has finished cutting its first picture and has started on its second production.

Sessue Hayakawa is expecting to spend a short time in the mountains recuperating from his recent operation for appendicitis before beginning work on his forthcoming picture for Robertson-Cole.

"Sham," starring Ethel Clayton, Harold Lloyd's three-reel super comedy, "Among Those Present," and novelty presentations by Sid Grauman, are the offerings at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre, beginning Monday.

U. S. FIGURES SHOW INDUSTRY FLOURISHING

The following statistics collected by the Exhibitors Herald show the motion picture industry to be more prosperous than ever:

"Collections from the film tax for April showed a huge increase over the same period of last year. For April, 1920, the collections amounted to $296,800. The total of $419,177 was reached for April, 1921.

"As would be expected from the season of the year a substantial decrease in admission taxes is reported for last month. Total receipts from this tax—in which motion picture admissions are repreesnted at the ratio of about four to one against all other amusement admissions—was $7,415,568 for April as compared with $7,863,785 for the preceding month, showing a decrease of $448,217.

"However, April collections were approximately $382,000 in excess of those of the same month last year, when $7,033,006 was reported.

"These figures indicate very definitely that while the usual seasonal slump has arrived the industry is still in a more flourishing condition than a year ago.

"The seating tax for April amounted to $29,274 as compared with $18,805 in March and $22,704 in April of last year."

Houdini has completed the first picture made by his own independent company under the direction of Burton King.

"AVE MARIE" RE-TITLED "THE JOURNEY'S END"

Hugo Ballin announces that "Ave Marie," his third independent production, has been re-named "The Journey's End."

This picture, which is released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, features Mabel Ballin, Wyndham Standing and George Bancroft.

FIRST DESMOND PICTURE FINISHING

Bill Desmond has completed production on H. H. Van Loan's "Fightin' Mad," and is proceeding with the editing and cutting of the picture. It is the first product of his own starring unit and is a modernization, with a Western setting, of "The Three Musketeers."

Joseph J. Franz directed the production, which was under the personal supervision of Robert Brunton. Desmond will continue making a series of Western pictures and will commence production on the second when the editing of "Fightin' Mad" has been completed.

DIRECTOR BADGER ON HIS TWELFTH WILL ROGERS PICTURE

Will Rogers and his director, Clarence Badger, have established a Goldwyn record. "A Poor Relation," the picture on which they are now working at the Goldwyn Studios, is their twelfth consecutive production together.

THE PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

Chapter V.

In our last chapter we found ourselves "stuck," as frequently happens to every one who starts out to build a dramatic plot.

We know what the climax in our story is going to be. It will have our young prospector, who is the hero of the story, sacrifice his chance of winning the girl, because he will not take an unfair advantage. In other words he is going to make a sacrifice for an ideal, which is his honor.

We are approaching that climax in the construction of our rough plot or "first draft," right now, and we must be very careful that we do not bungle the job. The girl is across the river, where she has been lured by the villain. The young aviator is on the other side with the prospector. The girl's father—wait a minute! We had better not bring him on the scene just yet. He might cross the river and find the girl too soon. The young aviator is exhausted, and we can leave him without fear.

Our prospector goes across the river and arrives just in time to save the girl from the brutal attacks of the villain. The two men engage in a fight, and battle all over the place. Now while this fight is going on, we can bring the father and his party to a point near the prospector's camp on the other side of the river. In order to build up some suspense, we might have him almost discover the wreck of the airplane in which the girl arrived.

Suspense is a very important ingredient that must always be introduced into our plots. By the introduction of suspense, I mean the jockeying of characters into positions that create situations which promise dire complications. This produces a condition of anxiety and intense interest in the minds of an audience. Did you ever stop to think how very uninteresting is a baseball or a football game—or any other kind of a contest in which one side scores so far ahead of the other that there is no question as to the ultimate outcome? That is because the element of suspense, the thread which holds the photoplay story, or any other story together, is lacking.

Now back to our fight: The prospector is getting the worst of it. The villain has him down and is about to take his life. The girl is cringing in one corner of the cabin. Just as the villain is about to kill the prospector she seizes a rifle from the wall and—No! No! No!!! that won't do. We can't have the girl take the villain's life. That would spoil all the wonderful sympathy which we have built up for her with the audience.

Let's try another idea: There is a hunting knife sticking in the cabin wall. As the villain sends the prospector reeling across the room, the hand of our hero accidentally comes in contact with the knife. He withdraws it from the wall and makes a rush for the villain! Hold on! That won't do either. We cannot have our prospector stain his hands with the blood of the other man. We must kill the villain, but how in the world are we going to do it? Of course, we could bring on a storm and have a streak of lightning finish him just at the proper moment, but that would not do, for the reason that it is illogical and machine-made. A forced situation is always unconvincing. There seems to be only one way to do it, and that is to introduce another character at this time.

Ah! We have it. Suppose that the villain is a squaw man. In other words he has a young Indian woman, who both loves and fears him. It is logical that she would be insanely jealous of his attentions to our white girl. Perhaps they have had some trouble over the matter before, and he has brutally beaten up the Indian girl. She, therefore, is awaiting an opportunity to avenge herself. Here is her chance.

FERDINAND EARL
Whose production of "The Rubaiyat" is under way.

When it seems to our audience that the villain will surely kill the prospector, and suspense has reached a terrific pitch, the Indian girl slips up to the side of the cabin and fires through the window. The villain falls, mortally wounded. A pretty piece of "action" right here, would then be to have the Indian girl immediately suffer from remorse over her hasty action. She could fall on her knees beside the mortally wounded villain and weep hysterically, while the prospector places his arm about the other girl and leads her from the scene.

It is frequently necessary in plot building to introduce an additional character after the first draft is well under way, as we have done here. In such cases one must then go back over the plot and "plant" the new character early in the story, so as to give him, or her, a sufficient amount of other action to justify existence in the plot. In our next chapter we will retrace our steps and see in just what way we can introduce the Indian girl earlier in the story, so that she will have a worth-while role.

STORIES WANTED

Priscilla Dean is going to have some competition. I will have to admit that she is in a class all by herself—but another company thinks that it has found a rival for her and is looking for a story. Something like "Reputation," which will give its star a chance to both do some real acting and also appear in a "dressed" role.

Hey! How about that "waif" story? We haven't had one submitted that hits the bull's eye yet.

D'je ever see a Bebe Daniels' picture? Well, I am looking for several stories of the kind that she does. Go and see her in "She Couldn't Help It," if you don't know what I am talking about.

One company is looking for a society drama for a woman lead who is an emotional actress. Think of Gladys Brockwell, Pauline Frederick, Clara Kimball Young, or Norma Talmadge, when you are deciding on what to submit.

HUGH WILEY HERE

Hugh Wiely, Saturday Evening Post writer, has arrived in Los Angeles to confer with Marshall Neilan on the Chinese episode in "Bits of Life," now being produced at Culver City.

The story "Hop"—which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post—will be incorporated in the new Neilan production for First National and the chief characterization will be interpreted by Lon Chaney. Upon completion of the interiors for "Bits of Life," Mr. Wiley will accompany Mr. Neilan and his staff on a trip to San Francisco where a number of scenes in the Frisco-Chinatown will be staged.

REINACH HOLDING RIGHTS ON QUEEN OF ROUMANIA STORIES

We are informed by Edward Reinach that the article recently published under the following heading, "Names of Queen of Roumania Stories Given Out," in which it was stated that Lois Weber had acquired the rights of photoplay production of "Pilgrim Sorrow," is incorrect. The rights of the disposal of this story are in the hands of Mr. Reinach who also holds such rights on the Roumanian Queen Elizabeth's novel, "The Prayer."

CHANEY WITH NEILAN

Lou Chaney has been engaged to play an import Chinese role in Marshall Neilan's forthcoming production, "Bits of Life."

Elizabeth DuBarry Gill has finished her part as Miss Hetty in "Hearts' Haven," a B. B. Hampton production.

The special titles written by George Ade for "The Lotus Eater," Marshall Neilan's latest producting, have been received and the picture is now ready for release.

After several weeks of delay, Mary Pickford Company has completed the cast for "Little Lord Fauntleroy." One of the principal parts of this production is to be played by James A. Marcus, loaned by Mr. R. A. Walsh to Miss Pickford to play the character part of Hobbs, the groceryman.

Oil Collects Under Domes

Geology teaches that oil collects under domes—experience proves this to be actual fact.

At Huntington Beach there are three great oil domes that distinctly mark the Huntington Beach anticline.

Standard drilled on Bolsa Chica, the first dome, and got a 2,000-barrel well. Next on Reservoir Hill, the second dome, Texcal No. 2 came in for 2,000 barrels.

Then all eyes turned to the third and last dome—Golden Dome. Mr. Ward, the owner of the land received many tempting offers from various companies.

He consulted his friend, Frank O. Wakeley, with the result that the dome property now belongs to the Golden Dome Oil Company with Frank O. Wakeley as superintendent.

The derrick on Golden Dome has been completed and is ready for rigging. We are to lose not one hour in tapping the vast reservoir of liquid gold geologists are so sure lies beneath the Golden Dome. If you want to become active in oil with a company that is not only after oil, but oil profits as well, see Mr. E. G. Miller, the studio representative of the Golden Dome Oil Company, and get all the facts about our company.

AT LASKY'S

Thomas Meighan will start around August 1st on a new picture which Tom Forman will direct.

Wallace Reid is expected at the studio on the completion of "Peter Ibbetson," in which he is co-starring with Elsie Ferguson, and is scheduled to begin work on a new picture soon after his return.

Gloria Swanson, under the direction of Sam Wood, has been on location for several days doing exterior scenes representing South Africa for "The Shulamite." This is the photoplay by J. E. Nash adapted from the novel by Alice and Claud Askew and the play by Edward Knoblock and Claud Askew. Mahlon Hamilton is the leading man and Russell Simpson is a prominent member of the cast.

Betty Compson is scheduled to begin around June 27th on her second Paramount star picture, adapted from Clyde Fitch's play "The Woman in the Case." Penrhyn Stanlaws will again direct.

MARSHALL NEILAN APPEARS BEFORE CAMERA

Marshall Neilan deserted the directorial chair recently and appeared before the camera in "Bits of Life," his new First National Production.

In this picture Mr. Neilan appears as himself in a novel handling of a story which is expected to introduce something new under the sun in picture presentation.

CASTING "TOL'BLE DAVID"

A cast is being chosen by Director Henry King to support Richard Barthelmess in his forthcoming starring picture, "Tol'ble David."

KYNE STORY IN PRODUCTION

The script of the Peter B. Kyne story, "Kindred of the Dust," is being completed by Jack O'Brien and production will start presently under the direction of R. A. Walsh.

John Emerson and Anita Loos have completed the synopsis of their new original photoplay, "Good for Nothing," for Constance Talmadge, and are working on the continuity. Victor Fleming will handle the direction.

The Foreign Invasion and "Gypsy Blood"

Many of us who have been fighting the showing of the tariffless foreign film in this country as a detriment to our own industry, have done so with a perhaps unexpressed idea in mind that there might some day be more danger attached to the presentation of such material than that much-mentioned and most vital menace of keeping unemployed our American picture producing staffs. In other words, we all saw "Passion," and, despite its deplorable technique, we recognized with something of dread, the many superior qualities which it possessed. In view of its dramatic value, for instance, we felt it reasonable to presume that a few years of unhampered progression in the cinema line on the other side, might bring foreign production to a point where it would prove unpleasantly comparable to our own efforts, so that, even if the work of our foreign contemporaries never excelled American screen accomplishments, still it might threaten us as a rival to be reckoned with.

This attitude, however, which we had found to be held in the most unexpected places, we now recognize to be absolutely unjustified. Consequently the agitation which was and still is making itself felt concerning this particular phase of the situation is, in our best estimation, unwarranted.

A foreign film invasion we will not tolerate at even the temporary expense of our profession's welfare, but it isn't sensible to fear the eventual effects of these films when pitted against our own. You ask what is responsible for our suddenly acquired sense of security? Just this: We have witnessed the running of "Gypsy Blood," First National's second Pola Negri starring release, and having reviewed it and found it to be, from every standpoint, an inferior attempt, to be classed with all other pictures from over there which have come to our attention since the war, save, perhaps, the previously mentioned spectacle, "Passion," we have come to the conclusion that the merit of this last was more an accidental exception than anything else.

The same director and star who made "Passion" a success co-operated to produce "Gypsy Blood." For some reason or other the cleverness of the former, one Ernest Lubitsch, which we joined the chorus in lauding some months back, cannot be detected in this, his adaptation of the French version of "Carmen," while Negri, the actress with whom he works, although undoubtedly a dramatist, gives way quite noticeably to the European tendency to overact as Carmencita in this picture. These striking contrasts prove that the picture ability of these supposedly foremost continental artists has not matured in the modern sense. It is not to be depended upon.

Moreover, the well-known theme of the play is made incomparably more morbid and blatantly sensuous than we have ever known "Carmen" in this country, daringly as have the vices and indiscretions of its title role been portrayed. The list of characters is made up of exaggerated weaklings and degenerates whose unpleasant antics fail to lead up to any real point, which progression is a recognized essential of the 1921 photoplay. Nor is the depressing yarn relieved by the human interest touches which might have done so much to tone it down to normal. These unwholesome themes in the drama and literature have long been of Europe, but they are set aside from our optimistic western outlook, and they are not for us.

From every possible technical standpoint, "Gypsy Blood" is an unspeakable fizzle. The continuity jumps bewilderingly, in a fashion that would be put to shame by even the pioneering attempts at play celluloiding made twenty years ago; while the lack of anything like unto the "close-up" often confuses the identities of the players on the screen. All that can be said for the photography and lighting is that they are annoyingly poor; and the sub-titles, which we take to be straight translations from the German on account of their terming, are a bit foolish and contain much repetition.

Outside the star, whose inexpressably unnatural action may be in part responsible for our disappointment in her characterization (this last, however, must in fairness be given credit for being as colorful and picturesque in places as it is repulsive in others), and the actor who was really quite human as Jose, Carmencita's badly used lover, we can't hand the cast a thing. Possibly three or four laughs may be forthcoming, at that, at the ludicrous effects presented by the square-headed Spaniards who are introduced, with their Teutonic features and builds, quite confidently.

Taken in the whole this production won't get by generally, due largely to the promising fact that having educated the public to a point where it expects the best in film art and technique, our big picture interests are going to find that they cannot insult the minds and morals of that public with such tommyrot. We might add that if the producer-distributor who has gone in for this stuff does not wish his purse hit by immediate censorship, he will sacrifice a few coins now and shelve all of this material which he has unwisely accumulated.

But as for the justification of any fear that our screen drama is to be crowded out by such, there is none. In our best judgment there will be none. We are a nation apart, and there lives not the man who can persuade us to accept as entertainment the filthy dregs that apparently amuse a continent whose ideals have little in common with ours. On the other hand, an American can always provide recreation for an American. There is no question but that he will continue to do so. F. R.

We have at hand a copy of Ted Le Berthon's very complete and instructive scenario magazine, "The Photodramatist," issued once monthly.

Its new editor has a wide field ahead of him, and no one appreciates his competency to cope with that field more than the editorial department of this publication. Keep it up, Teddy!

Film Capital Production Notes

H. B. WARNER TO MAKE STAGE PLAY

The stage has again claimed H. B. Warner and his wife, Rita Stanwood, who have been making pictures for J. D. Hampton. Both have returned to New York, and Warner is rehearsing a new play.

"THE VIRGINIAN" TO BE FAIRBANKS' NEXT VEHICLE

It is expected that "The Three Musketeers," Douglas Fairbanks current picture, will be completed around the middle of July, following which, plans will be laid by Fairbanks for the production of "The Virginian," most of which will be filmed in Wyoming, where the story is laid.

ETHEL CLAYTON TO PLAY WESTERN HEROINE

The well-known stage play, "The Girl of the Golden West," will be Ethel Clayton's next production.

SECOND TEARLE PICTURE IN PRODUCTION

Another Conway Tearle starring picture has been completed at the Selznick studios in Fort Lee, and Mr. Tearle is already filming a production to follow it. The one finishing is temporarily entitled "Ye Shall Pay;" and the one in production is "Love's Masquerade."

CHILD STAR IN INDEPENDENT PRODUCTIONS

Jackie Coogan, who has arrived in Los Angeles from his eastern trip, is prepared to commence work July 15 in a series of five feature photoplays, at the Robert Brunton Studios, starring himself.

The West Coast Theatres, Inc., controlled by Gore Brothers, Adolph Ramish and Sol Lesser, have made an arrangement with Jack Coogan, father of the boy, to finance the entire series of Coogan special productions.

ANOTHER "HALLROOM BOYS" COMEDY RELEASED

"A Chili Romance" of the Federated Hallroom Boys Comedies, featuring Sid Smith, was revised this week by the Federated Board of Review and turned over to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for release to their exchanges.

THREE CLEVER COMEDIES TO BE RELEASED

Webster Cullison, of Clever Comedies, will leave for New York around July 1st, to make arrangements for the distribution of his series of two-reel satirical farce-comedy adaptations of the Ellis Parker Butler "Philo Gubb" stories.

Mr. Cullison will take East with him the first three pictures of this series, entitled "The Hound of the Tankervilles," "The Stolen Umbrella," and "The Disappearance of Ma'y Jane."

NEW EDWARD HATTON WESTERN

A new C. Edward Hatton two-reel Western, "Tangle Trails," has been completed recently, and sent to the New York offices of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. After editing, it will be released by that company on the Star Ranch Western program of two-reel Westerns.

SENNETT TWO-REEL COMEDY RELEASED

Marie Prevost, John Henry, Jr. (the Sennett baby), and George O'Hara comprise the trio of players in Mack Sennett's newest two-reel feature, "Call a Cop," to be released shortly by Associated Producers.

AT GOLDWYN

Director Frank Lloyd and company are on location at Huntington Lake, Calif., making "The Man from Lost River."

Charles Kenyon, playwright and cintinuity writer, is finishing the screen version of Hall Caine's "The Christian," which will go into production soon.

The cast of "From the Ground Up," a starring vehicle for Tom Moore, has been completed and the story will shortly go into production. Helene Chadwick will again play opposite the star.

The photography on "The Poverty of Riches," an original screen story by Leroy Scott, was finished last week under the direction of Reginald Barker.

AT UNIVERSAL

Edward Laemmle, who has been specializing on dramas of the out-of-doors, will resume work this week on "The Cowpuncher's Comeback," a short reeler in which Art Acord will be featured.

Frank Mayo is on the last sequence of "The Shark Master," his forthcoming photodrama. Fred LeRoy Granville is directing the story which he wrote from his experiences as a camera-explorer in the South Seas. The star is supported by May Collins.

Allan Curtis is directing "The Mystic M," a one-reel comedy.

Additional stories are being put into continuity for Eddie Polo, who will continue to characterize "Cyclone Smith," the western hero. Jay Marchant is directing.

AT REALART

Locations are being sought by Director Maurice Campbell for "The Speed Girl," in which Bebe Daniels will soon commence the portrayal of a motion-picture actress.

May McAvoy has been in Arcadia for a week, where she has been making scenes for "A Virginia Courtship," under the direction of Frank O'Connor.

AT VITAGRAPH

"Bring Him In" is the title selected for Earle Williams' forthcoming feature, the working title of which has been "The Man from Caigary." Mr. Williams, together with his co-director Robert Ensminger and a supporting company is now at Lake Tahoe, making exteriors.

William Duncan and company are making exteriors at Bakersfield for his special proproduction entitled "The Superman."

Larry Semon has resumed work on his latest comedy, "The Bell Hop."

Arthur D. Ripley has completed the cutting and editing of "Life's Darn Funny," a Dana special produced by Dallas Fitzgerald.

Theodore Wharton is still casting his forthcoming production, "The Besetting Sin," which is his first picture for Zenith Features, Inc.

"Nobody," starring Jewel Carmen, is the title of a Roland West production soon to be released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Geo. H. Kern is going ahead with the preliminary arrangements for staging his next production, which will be based on Bulwer Lytton's "The Last Days of Pompeii," and entitled "The Scarlet Avalanche."

Current Reviews

"MAN—WOMAN—MARRIAGE"

Kinema

Allen Holubar as author-director of "Man-Woman-Marriage," which he offers as his first independent production for First National, has achieved great heights, not only for himself, but we may safely say, for the profession to which he belongs. In it, he artistically frames a tremendous sex problem of the ages with a simply-told story of the unfoldment of a maiden's romance and the development of a wife's loving sacrifice and faith, only to background the subject matter with a spectacular pageant of Woman in History. The combination is technically a triumph; humanly—a thriller. Having chosen as a theme the struggle of woman toward the light in her connubial and maternal loves, and then having dedicated his delicately handled work to her, this producer cleverly insured universal feminine interest for his play. Then, because in his story preparation, he eliminated the conventional slush that usually accompanies the sentimental efforts of even our best scenarists, Holubar cinched an equal amount of masculine sympathy for his drama. Admittedly such is an attainment which certainly merits the vision it required.

"Man-Woman-Marriage" contains, moreover, a lesson which the world is even now striving to master against seemingly overwhelming odds; a lesson which, since it has never been apparently comprehended by ordinary intelligence or even our highest scientific education, has been finally left for realization to the spiritual understanding of humanity. It seems to us that it was a problem of just such proportions as the one here treated, that Mr. Griffith meant to set forth in his "Intolerance." At the time of its release unfortunately, or seemingly so, the picture-going public had not been sufficiently trained to appreciate or even digest its significance. Today conditions are different, and there is psychology in the showing of this type of photoplay.

The exquisite subtitles on the suggestive Earle art titles add much of subtle value to the scenario, than which there was rarely one more consistent. Photographically this picture excels. Beautifully proportioned long shots of massive sets, filled with effectively managed mobs and lovely portraits, abound in it.

We witness the best work of Dorothy Phillips to date in the role of the girl, Victoria, an impulsive creature of romance, who becomes that which is noblest in womanhood for the love of her mate and his children. Then, because of the very power of him to hold her, she nearly loses what she has won over the rapids of his selfish cynicism. Only does she gain everything back for right when Faith takes her hand. A more emotional opportunity could not have been provided this type of actress. Let it be said that all of its points are artistically regarded, and particularly graceful is her interpretation of Victoria as the resourceful, fair-minded child previous to her marriage. Miss Phillips always gives a striking impression of open-eyed wholesomeness coupled with real mentality which fits her naturally into such roles as this unusually appealing one.

James Kirkwood does, carefully and well, David Courney, the man she loves, but without gaining much sympathy for the character. This is, of course, largely due to the nature of his action as the ordinary, ambitious man of this century. Neither the material given him, nor his treatment of it, is ever illogical or overdone.

Robert Cain makes Schuyler, the heavy, who, for a time, threatens to become quite dreadful, as obnoxious as possible in view of the part's near-comedy finish. Cain is typically placed. His work has always been good and it is yet improving.

Ralph Lewis and Margaret Mann give excellently characteristic portrayals. They do, respectively, Victoria's domineering father and her dully unhappy mother whom marriage has cheated of romance.

GERTRUDE ASTOR

J. Barney Sherry and Shannon Day enact satisfactorily, yes, more than satisfactorily, Henshaw and Bodo, representatives of the fast-living set that Courney, the ambitious politician, finds agreeable.

Frances Parks and Emily Chichester do attractive bits as Victoria's flapper friends. Particularly spirited are Frances' "different" little mannerisms. Yes, we know her well enough to call her by her first name.

Again we judge that Holubar has correctly handled a huge question. His production deserves long runs the country over. F. R.

"THE WOMAN GOD CHANGED"

Grauman's Rialto

A Cosmopolitan production entitled "The Woman God Changed" is indefinitely booked here by Paramount. It is a rather slimsy Donn Byrne story, possessing a few inconsistent details, which is probably saved by colorful settings and technical excellencies. Doty Hobart deserves much credit for his lucid manipulation of the plot into a scenario, especially in view of the fact that the former unfolds after the once-so-largely-employed but awkward fashion, in a courtroom, where it is gathered for the audience from the testimony of witnesses. It is something to keep the action untangled in such instances. The story deals with a murderess, who, shipwrecked with the officer who has captured her, in the South Seas, spends several years on a deserted island awaiting an opportunity to return to justice. The fact that, in this solitude and her growing love for the detective whom she finally "marries in the sight of God," a loose moraled woman sees the light, is beautiful and scarcely impossible. As it stands, however, it hardly creates the suspense that a murder trial drama demands. Nor are there present the human interest touches which have often redeemed weak screen plays.

The camera work on the play is exceptional.

The title role of Anna Janssen is filled by Seena Owen, whose work varies throughout the piece. In other terms, she is quite as one would have her when playing Janssen, the unmoral and notorious, both in her whimsical and unpleasant moods. Someway, however, she doesn't satisfy to any marked degree when Janssen becomes the "pure and unsophisticated." On the other hand nothing is strikingly wrong with any of her performance. It simply fails to carry absolute conviction.

E. K. Lincoln portrays "honest Thomas McCarthy," the plain clothesman who arrests and then loves the woman whom he has sworn to "bring in." Lincoln isn't quite the romantic hero whom one would imagine in the part, but he cares for it adequately enough.

H. Cooper Cliff adds a realistic touch to the courtroom atmosphere as "the attorney for the defense."

Henry Sedley, Lillian Walker, Paul Nicholson, Templar Saxe and Joseph Smiley all fill minor roles competently.

Robert Vignola directed the picture in the East.

"SHAM"

Grauman's

Paramount's screen adaptation by Douglas Doty for Ethel Clayton of Elmer Harris' and Geraldine Bonner's comedy-drama, "Sham," provides an evening of sprightly entertainment in the superior comedy line.

The far-from-heavy theme treats that type of New York society grafter who gets away with much on an amazingly inconsequential income and an equally startling amount of credit. A pretty thread of real romance runs through the laughable situations, leaving one with an impression of worth-whileness which greatly increases the story's value.

Attractive sets, good photography and careful direction also prove of assistance to the general effect.

Miss Clayton is ideally cast as Katherine Van Riper, an expensive parasite with good intentions. This is one of her most enjoyable recent roles.

Clyde Fillmore also fills adequately the role of the big, genial and unquestionably western Tom Jaffery, with whom Katherine falls in love despite his lack of wealth. He makes an excellent opposite for the star.

Certainly a Lasky comedy of this sort would be incomplete without Walter Hiers and Theodore Roberts, who are seen this time as the rotund Monte Buck (in love with Katherine), and his genuine but somewhat unrefined father, who happens to be a millionaire cattleman.

Sylvia Ashton, Helen Dunbar and Tom Ricketts form a stately trio as Katherine's disapproving relatives. It always seems good to see any of their screened faces.

Arthur Carewe is seen in the role of Bolton, a fashionable jeweler, which he fills as dignifiedly as is his custom. Unhappily he is allotted none of the complicated action which he has proven himself so equal to manage.

Carrie Clark Ward is screamingly funny with her comedy as Rosie, the Van Riper cook, who perhaps carries her loyalty to that family past reason and even conscience.

Blanch Grey as Clem, the poor relation, is a good touch and, together with Eunice Burnham, completes the cast.

Thomas Heffron directed the production.

Where to Find People You Know

STEPPLING IN NEW METRO COMEDY

John Steppling, who just has completed an important role in George D. Baker's production of "The Hunch," in which Gareth Hughes is starred, has been re-engaged by Mr. Baker for one of the parts in his new production, "Garments of Truth," in which Mr. Hughes again is starring.

STROHM RETURNS TO METRO

Lew Strohm has returned to the Metro studios in the capacity of location manager. Mr. Strohm has been studio representative for Willis and Inglis for some time.

HUGHIE MACK IN FEMININE ROLE

Hughie Mack has been engaged by Webster Cullison of Clever Comedies for the principal "feminine" role in "The Disappearance of Mary Jane," the third of the series of "Philo Gubb" stories.

WALTHALL RETURNS

Henry B. Walthall and Mary Charleson, his wife, who have been touring the country in a stage play, will return to pictures in the near future.

R. D. Saunders is now casting director at the Hollywood Studios.

Alma Bennett is at present engaged with the Hamilton-White comedies.

Charles Force will play "Big Jan" in Oliver Morosco's "Slippy McGee."

Catherine Craig plays opposite C. Edward Hatton in his latest two-reel western, "Tangled Trails," about to be released.

Una Trevelyan has given up picture work and will become the leading lady of the Alcazar Theater in San Francisco.

Harry Allen, Warren Cook and Macy Harlan are among the supporting players in "Ye Shall Pay," a new Conway Tearle picture.

Al Lowenthal has been engaged by Walter Futter to re-title thirty one-reel comedies starring Bebe Daniels, Roy Stewart and Dot Farley.

After an absence from the screen, during which time he wrote and directed comedies, Jay Belasco is again playing in Christie comedies.

Stark Patterson has been cast for the juvenile lead in Tom Santchi's forthcoming picture, and is on location with the company.

Elsie Janis, now appearing in Paris in a revue, will sail for the States in August, according to a cable just received in New York by Charles B. Dillingham.

Lillian Walker, the screen star who has been offering a monologue in vaudeville, recently has accepted a stock engagement during the summer. She expects to return to vaudeville in the fall.

Montagu Love will play Colonel Ibbetson, the role played by Lionel Barrymore on the stage, in the screen version of Du Maurier's "Peter Ibbetson," in which Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid are co-starring in New York.

LAEMMLE SIGNS DU PONT

Carl Laemmle announces an engagement of Miss Du Pont, which will make her a Universal Special attraction star. The lady in question has an important part in Erich Von Stroheim's forthcoming production, "Foolish Wives," about to be released.

Dear Everyone Who

WRAY DIRECTING STOCK

John Griffith Wray, Thomas H. Ince director, will spend his summer vacation managing and directing stock companies in Western cities. He recently visited several towns in California and Arizona securing theaters, and he intends to personally operate his circuit. Wray was formerly a stage director.

CHINESE ACTORS IN CONWAY TEARLE PICTURE

Two of the important roles in the new eastern-made Conway Tearle picture, temporarily entitled "Ye Shall Pay," are interpreted by Celestials, namely Charles Fan and Emily Lee.

Ralph Lewis is playing one of the principles in "A Private Scandal."

Frank Holland is cast as Dr. Pickney Forbes in "The Blazing Trail."

Elaine Hammerstein will presently be seen in "Remorseless Love," her next Selznick feature.

Billy and Florence O'Rourke will play in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" with Mary Pickford.

Theodore Von Eltz is leading man with Bebe Daniels in her next Realart picture, "The Speed Girl."

Teddy Sampson has been added to the cast of "Bits of Life," Marshall Neilan's next picture.

Mary Land will have a part in the next Anita Stewart picture, entitled "A Question of Honor."

George H. Kern has engaged Gilbert J. Hayfrom to do the art work for the titles for "The Unfoldment."

Anna May Wong will interpret an important Chinese character part in Marshall Nielan's forthcoming "Bits of Life."

Betty Ross Clark will play opposite Harry Carey in his first Universal-Jewel feature, "Partners," work on which will begin presently.

Alfred Hollingsworth has been selected by Dallas Fitzgerald for a part in "The Infamous Miss Revell," Alice Lake's new Metro picture.

Zena Keefe will have the leading feminine role in Conway Tearle's "Ye Shall Pay," which is just finishing production in the East.

Jack Cosgrave will appear in support of Viola Dana in "There Are No Villains," her new Metro starring picture, a Bayard Veiller production.

The name of Herbert Standing has been added to the list of players who will make up the cast for the Metro production of "The Infamous Miss Revell," in which Alice Lake will star.

Players who have enacted various important parts in the New York episodes of Marshall Neilan's forthcoming production, "Bits of Life," include Rockliffe Fellows, Fred Burton and James Bradbury, Jr.

Pickups By the Staff

UNIVERSAL REWARDS EFFICIENT EMPLOYEES

As a reward for efficiency and good service, the Universal Film Mfg. Company of New York is sending two of its factory employees on a thirty-day trip to Universal City. The workers are Mrs. Charlotte Marcus, private secretary of the factory superintendent, and Irving Stolzer, one of Universal's film printing timers. Both have been with the company since it was organized. This is said to be one of the steps Universal is taking to build up employer-employees relationship and to increase factory efficiency.

SELZNICK BUYS STORIES

Myron Selznick has announced the purchase of two new screen plays which will soon be put in production. One is an original script by Leonard Praskins and Theodore R. Masters, entitled "Borrowed Wings." The other is Dorothy Donnell Calhoun's story called "The Thing He Loves."

DAVID BUTLER—AUTHOR

David Butler has written a story for himself which will go into production after "Bing-Bang-Boom," and "In Walked Jimmy" are filmed.

ORIGINAL SCREEN STORY FOR TOM MOORE

Alice Duer Miller, author and suffrage worker, is writing an original screen story to be used as a starring vehicle for Tom Moore. The tentative title of Mrs. Miller's story will be "The Man with Two Mothers."

RAWLINSON NEW UNIVERSAL STAR

Herbert Rawlinson, who is playing opposite Priscilla Dean in her current Universal-Jewel production, "Conflict," has been signed to star under the Universal banner as soon as he finishes the Dean feature.

PUBLICITY HEAD RESIGNS

Charles L. Hertzman, for two years director of publicity for Universal, has resigned his position with that organization, and Malcolm S. Boylan, assistant director of publicity, will assume the duties of the department.

COLLEGE "PALS" VISIT DIRECTOR

A gathering of alumni of Throop College were honor guests of Eliot Howe at the Brunton Studios recently. Throop is Mr. Howe's alma mater.

ANITA STEWART TO VACATION

Following the completion of her current picture, "A Question of Honor," Anita Stewart will leave for New York for a protracted vacation. No announcement has yet been made concerning Miss Stewart's future production activities.

DANCER IN PROLOGUE

Derelys Perdue, dancing pupil of Ernest Belcher, may be seen at the Kinema in "Man-Woman-Marriage." She also appears in the prologue to the feature.

Fred Stone has completely recovered from the injury which forced him to close "Tip Top," his extravaganza, and he is re-opening it at once.

WILLIAM FARNUM STARTS FOR THE STATES

William Farnum, who is now in Italy, is planning to celebrate his birthday, which is July 4th, at his Sag Harbor home.

LILLIAN RICH
Playing Carroll Brown in
"The Blazing Trail"

PAULINE BUSH WRITES OF CHINESE LIFE

A series of colorful stories by Pauline Bush, dealing with contemporary Chinese life, has been accepted for magazine publication. Miss Bush is still in China, but will proceed shortly to India, thence to England.

Gaylord Lloyd will leave presently for Big Bear where he will enjoy a short vacation.

Sessue Hayakawa will be seen at the California, Sunday, June 19th, in his latest Robertson-Cole offering, "Black Roses." Tsuru Aoki (Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa) will appear opposite the star.

William D. Taylor is making a trip to Europe on the advice of his physicians. However, he will survey the film situation in Europe for several Los Angeles organizations.

Frederick Warde, Shakespearian actor, recently visited Douglas Fairbanks at his Los Angeles studio to renew old associations.

Earl Metcalf, playing opposite Ruth Roland in her serial under production at the Roach Studios, has purchased a bungalow in Hollywood.

William S. Smith, General Manager of Vitagraph, Incorporated, is taking a few days' vacation from studio work.

Metro Studio possesses its own private fire department, including a captain, company of twelve men, paraphernalia and alarm system.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

LYNWOOD CRYSTAL RAPP

Little four-and-a-half-year-old Lynwood Crystal Rapp is in our midst, and she has come to stay and conquer, or so it appears. Born in Memphis, Tennessee, the child early displayed histrionic ability and before her third birthday filled her first stage engagement in that city. After her arrival in Los Angeles some time later, Lynwood worked in several screen plays, including Mary Pickford's "Pollyanna," before leaving for New York, where she went to pose for Harrison Fisher, Earl Christy, and Charles Dana Gibson.

Now little Miss Rapp has returned to Hollywood, where she will continue her short but interesting career in the studios. We are expecting to hear more of her.

JACKSON GREGORY STORY FOR CAREY

The Universal scenario department announces the purchase of the screen rights of Jackson Gregory's novel, "Man to Man," which will be a forthcoming vehicle for Harry Carey. It will probably follow his first Jewel picture, "Partners," by Lucien Hubbard, which is now in production.

ANOTHER PROSPECTIVE PHOTO-PLAYWRIGHT

Denning Miller, whose play, "Wetwood Ho," was recently presented at the annual show of the Harvard Hasty Pudding Club at the Waldorf Hotel, New York, is the nineteen year old son of Alice Duer Miller. Mrs. Miller is at the Goldwyn studios working on the continuity of her first screen play, "The Woman Who Hated Politics."

LASKY SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE HERE

Victor H. Clarke, special representative of the Production Department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has arrived in Hollywood and will spend several months in the West.

ARBUCKLE ON SHORT VACATION

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, having completed work on his newest Paramount picture, is making a brief visit in San Francisco.

Mickey Moore is playing Mickey in "The Mask" at New Pantages.

Pauline Curley will presently move into her new home in Hollywood.

"Clay Dollars" will be Eugene O'Brien's forthcoming Selznick production.

Jean O'Rourke is at the Children's Hospital recovering from a serious operation.

Penrhyn Stanlaws will make a trip to San Francisco presently to address the Fine Arts Society.

Cecil B. DeMille wil arrive Saturday from his brief trip to New York where he was in conference with other executives at the home office.

Winifred Westover will appear opposite Conway Tearle in his second starring vehicle, "Love's Masquerade," under the direction of William P. S. Earle in New York.

GEORGE LARKIN IN WESTERN DRAMAS

Universal has engaged George Larkin and Josephine Hill to appear in a series of Northwest Mounted Police series which are being written for them at Universal City. Larkin will take the place of Hoot Gibson on the western drama schedule, which calls for a two-reel western each week.

The series will be directed by Edward Kull.

TO PRODUCE GALSWORTHY'S "JUSTICE"

Comes the announcement that Myron Selznick has bought the John Galsworthy drama, "Justice," for picture production, and Mr. Selznick states that the part of William Falder, made famous on the stage by John Barrymore, will be interpreted by one if the stars now under contract with the Selznick organization.

"UP THE ROAD WITH SALLIE" IS RE-ISSUED

The Selznick Corporation has prepared for re-release the Constance Talmadge picture, "Up the Road with Sallie," which has been re-edited and retitled.

William D. Taylor directed the production from a scenario by Julia Crawford Ivers. Norman Kerry, Kate Toncray, and Thomas H. Lersee appear in support of the star.

"PEACHIE" ON LOCATION

Director Wallace Worsley, who is directing Katherine MacDinald in "Peachie," an Ambassador Picture Corporation film for Associated First National release, has taken the star, players and technical men to Santa Barbara on location.

The company will be gone a week. George Marion, Jr., who wrote "Peachie," will also make the trip.

BARKER'S GOLDWYN CONTRACT TERMINATES

Reginald Barker's contract with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is legally terminated, and as yet Mr. Barker has made no statement concerning his future production plans.

NEW BOLAND COMEDY

"SLIPPY M'GEE" ON LOCATION

Director Wesley Ruggles and company left recently for New Orleans, and Natchez, Miss., to make exteriors of the production, "Slippy McGee," in which Wheeler Oakman and Colleen Moore will play the leads.

Frank Gereghty, assistant director, and Miss Lanice Morrell, continuity assistant, accompanied the party.

CHILD WILL STAR IN METAPHYSICAL DRAMA

The Italian-American Film Company will feature Theodore Repay in the metaphysical drama, "Power of Faith," written by J. Habif.

FREDERICK VROOM

AT LASKY'S

Cecil B. DeMille will begin work on a new production around August 1st.

It is expected that Penrhyn Stanlaws will begin production on "The Woman in the Case," by Clyde Fitch, around June 27th. The scenario for this play was written by A. S. LeVino and Betty Compson will be the star.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle is scheduled to begin work upon a picture called "Via Fast Freight," concerning which no details are as yet available.

Gloria Swanson, under the direction of Sam Wood, is making progress with "The Shulamite," a story of South Africa.

George Melford's next picture will be "The Sheik," by S. M. Hull, scenario by Monte M. Katterjohn, which will go into production presently.

ANOTHER "MOHICANS"

Adolphe N. DuMahaut and Edward L. Klein, 1664 Broadway, announce the completion and early release of two productions based upon the "Leather Stocking Tales," by J. Fenimore Cooper.

"The Deerslayer" in seven reels and "The Last of the Mohicans," also in seven reels, constitute the first two of the series of film versions of the Cooper stories. Announcement of distribution will be forthcoming shortly.

Maurice Tourneur made a version of "The Last of the Mohicans" for Associated Producers, Inc.

CROSLAND WITH TEARLE

Alan Crosland is back at Selznick's in Fort Lee, having finished a Constance Binney picture for Famous Players-Lasky. He will direct Conway Tearle in "Shadows of the Sea."

FRANKLIN DIRECTING BINNEY

Chester Franklin is here from the coast directing Constance Binney in "The Case of Becky." Montagu Love is in the cast.

FOX PRODUCTIONS AT FULL SPEED

Summer has not slowed up the Fox program of production. In addition to the regular star programs, three specials are under way in California, with another trio being started in New York.

FOUR A YEAR

Thomas de Vassey, vice-president of Wistaria Prod., Inc., states that a contract has been signed with Associated Exhibitors, Inc., for a minimum of four productions a year from his company for release through Pathe.

The first production, "Harbor Light," with Creighton Hale, George MacQuarrie and Marguerite Clayton, will be ready for release early in July.

Pauline Frederick is about to start production on the first picture under her new contract with Robertson-Cole.

THE PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

Chapter VI

In chapter five we found that it was necessary to introduce a new character in the shape of the Indian girl. As I stated some time ago, I always follow this rule: Never introduce any extra characters excepting such as are necessary to place the hero or heroine, and the villain, in situations in which they cannot place themselves, or one another. The only possible exception to this is, of course, the introduction of a small part, or a "bit" which is used either to supply comedy relief, additional pathos, or heart interest. For instance, I refer to such characters as an old Irish washerwoman, a gardener, a cockney English butler, an old negro mammy, a bow-legged cowpuncher, or others, which will afford comedy relief. Usually the comedy introduced by these characters is gotten over by subtitles and a wry expression here and there. A blind or crippled child, a ragged urchin, a very old and decrepit man or woman, an abused and neglected person, or some individual or dumb brute whose unfortunate circumstances arouse pity in the hearts of the audience, are the characters to which I refer as being introduced for pathos.

We brought in the Indian girl in the last chapter for the double purpose of saving the life of our hero, and eliminating the villain—because we did not want either our hero or heroine to do the job. There is another reason why her introduction was necessary. We are going to have to carry our prospector back across the river, where he will meet both the girl's father and the aviator, and be subjected to the test which will determine whether or not he divulges the whereabouts of the girl.

There are two things that are paramount at this time. It would not do for the girl to accompany the prospector back across the river, for that would spoil the nice climax for which we are working; nor is our prospector going to leave the girl in the hands of the villain. With the latter disposed of, however, it is an easy matter for the prospector to leave the girl, for the time being, in the company of the Indian maid, while he goes back across the river.

As suggested in chapter five, we will go back over our plot and introduce the Indian girl and heavy at the same time. This solves a detail which we temporarily overlooked. We had not provided a convincing reason for the fight between the friend of the prospector and the villain, which resulted in the death of the former—when he was thrown over the cliff. Before we thought of introducing the Indian girl, it was my intention to bring about a dispute over the ownership of one of the mining claims. What would be more logical, however, than to make the Indian girl herself, the object of the conflict? Suppose that the friend is observed in what the villain concludes a compromising situation with his Indian girl. That would give us an excellent cause for the action, which would result in the fight.

Let's see if there are not some other places where we can work in the Indian girl. Ah! A thought comes to me. During the fight between the prospector and the villain, which takes place on the cliff, let us assume that as they struggle backward and forward, that they alternately clinch and then break away. We can give our audience quite a thrill by having the Indian girl observe the fight from across the chasm.

MARGARET CULLINGTON

Every time the two men break away, she draws a bead on the prospector. Just when we think she is going to kill him, the two men clinch again, and her opportunity is lost.

We can use the Indian girl again as she spies on the villain when he first meets and talks with the white girl. We can establish the fact that she is exceedingly jealous. Additional suspense may be introduced by having her take a dagger from her bosom and register a resolve to kill the white girl.

Wait, just a minute! We have just established the fact that the Indian girl is jealous and hates the white girl. Then why would she shoot the villain to save the lover of the white girl, later on? There is only one answer. We must give the white girl an opportunity to win the love of the Indian maiden, and we must intensify the feeling of the Indian girl against the villain. Here is how we can do that: Just before the prospector arrives at the villain's cabin, we can have the villain knock the Indian down and repulse her, expressing at the same time his preference for the white girl. This will give our heroine an opportunity to launch into a tirade against the villain, in defense of the Indian girl, in which she can call his attention to his duty toward the dusky maiden, who has given up everything in the world for him.

Now, without actually writing the continuity, we have developed a means of keeping the Indian girl pretty well before the camera and in the eyes of the audience throughout the story. In other words, we have given her a sufficiently worth-while part to justify her introduction into the plot.

In the next chapter, we are going to work right up to the big climax.

STORIES WANTED

A couple of calls for Western stories came in this week, the first that we have had for some little time. One of them was for a handsome juvenile, of the Jack Kerrigan type, and in which a considerable amount of clean comedy and athletic features may be included. The other is for a regulation cowpuncher story, which could be produced cheaply. It must necessitate only a small cast and be mostly exteriors.

Milton Hoffman, the new production manager at Metro, says that it will be useless to submit stories out there for sixty days.

Several writers have asked why we did not supply the names of the producers and stars, who are in the market for the stories mentioned in this column each week. My reason is that these tips which are set forth here are of "red hot" calls from the different studios, who do not desire their reading departments swamped with a lot of undesirable material. That is why their names are not given. They are nevertheless in the market for the stuff described.

Neither a satisfactory "waif" story, or one for the "madcap" girl, have been received as yet.

GERAGHTY TO VISIT LONDON STUDIO

Tom Geraghty, supervising director of the Long Island studio of Famous Players, will go to London the first week in September and after a week or two at the British studio of the company will return to New York and thence to Los Angeles.

ENDORSES AMERICAN PICTURES

In his address before the annual meeting of the Actors' Equity, John Emerson stated that the organization was fighting for American pictures and referred to the proposed ad valorem duty the Ways and Means Committee approved on foreign films. Emerson was re-elected president.

TEARLE IN ACTION

Conway Tearle ended "Love's Masquerade" three days before he started work on "Shadows of the Sea." "Ye Shall Pay" was finished early in May and in the preceding month Tearle developed "The Fighter" and "Bucking the Tiger."

SANTSCHI ON THIRD PICTURE

Tom Santschi, star of the Cyrus J. Williams Co., has completed "The Home Trail" and is at present in the San Jacinto mountains securing exterior scenes for his third picture, "The Wolver."

LEWIS IN "TWO ORPHANS"

Sheldon Lewis has signed a contract with D. W. Griffith to play the part of Jacques in "The Two Orphans."

Beginning with this week's issue, Camera! The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry, will be published and owned exclusively by Raymond Cannon, a prominent local actor, whose vision assisted in the origination of this, the profession's one representative paper, several years ago, and whose general guidance of it has proven indispensable through the industry's intervening good days and bad.

The position of Managing Editor will continue to be filled by Fanchon Royer, who has devoted her efforts for many months to the country's various film circles, and particularly the Hollywood Colony, through the medium of this sheet, the popularity of which we cannot but recognize to have been enjoyed rather individually by itself.

Practically the same staff will be retained, and it will continue to serve you as of old besides extending its efforts to include even larger scopes than heretofore treated, an advance which the new organization will undoubtedly facilitate.

Camera! is proud to admit that the loyal endorsement of its readers has alone made possible its many progressions.

"SNOWBLIND"

California

Katherine Newlin Burt's singular story, "Snowblind," is released by Goldwyn at this time. It contains much highly entertaining screen material, which has been utilized to excellent advantage by J. G. Hawks in the scenario. Several surprising twists and odd situations hold the interest straight through the really simple romance. Laid in the far north, the tale has to do with a fugitive criminal who, although a brutual monster, has in his nature enough of the child to endear himself to the three lonely souls who share his seclusion. His lies and unfair advantage-taking of these people bring about his almost simultaneous downfall and redemption. The direction keeps the action clear always, while the subtitles are refreshingly uncomplicated and to the point. Artistic camera work on rare, snow-clad stretches adds an effective note.

Hugh Garth, the blustering but cowardly murderer, whose solitary home provides the picture's background, is characterized as, we have come to believe, only Russell Simpson can or does characterize this kind of role. Through all Garth's bestiality we find in his helpless pretense of romance a pathetic something that it takes keen understanding of both dramatic proportion, and the lights and shades of human nature, to translate to the celluloid. Simpson's work is quite wonderful.

Pauline Starke appeals, as she has the habit of doing, with her sincere portrayal of Sylvie, the little vaudeville soubrette, who falls into Garth's hands after a wandering day which has lost her and left her snowblind in the glaring northern spaces. Miss Starke progresses easily through her emotional scenes, which we appreciate are rendered very difficult to accomplish, due to her inability to employ the eyes. Here is a clever feminine performer whom it is impossible to classify. She should be congratulated on this last, which certainly proclaims her as versatile.

Cullen Landis is altogether the boy in his interpretation of Pete Garth, with youth's inevitable tenderness and impressionability combined appealingly with the loyalty and resourceful hardiness taught by his rugged home. He is Hugh's younger brother, whom the former uses badly to his own selfish ends, even though a real affection exists between the two.

Mary Alden, as Pete's stoical old nurse, who has remained far from civilization to be near the lad whom she mothers passionately and his brother whose cruelty cannot kill her almost unreasonable love for him, maintains her customary high standard of work.

"Snowblind" is a Reginald Barker production.

"CHEATED LOVE"

Superba

A simply pleasing Universal program picture is "Cheated Love," a Hubbard-Schroeder story for Carmel Myers. It tells happily or plaintively, as the case may be, of life in New York's ghetto, and of a faithful little sweetheart who sings in a theatre. The picture is blessed by the absence in it of the blatant peculiarities of the cheap picture to which class it belongs. To explain, it contains no morbidity, stiltedness or badly mispelled high-brow subtitles. True, there is little which may be pointed as new in its plot; again, it doesn't bore with time-worn remarks and twists. The climax is a little thin, but taken all in all, it will prove entertaining to those who see it.

Technically it is average for its type.

Miss Myers has a much more enjoyable part as Sonya, the little Jewess, who loves for a time the wrong man, than she had as the Greenwich Village girl in her last. In it she is more natural and deliberate by far, which results in an added appeal for the role.

George B. Williams does probably the most interesting and certainly the most amusing work in the picture. He plays Abraham, Sonya's financially conscientious yet kind-hearted old father, whose sun rises and sets in his "little angel." His characterization never drops for an instant.

Allan Forrest's leading male part is unimportant save for the sympathy it gathers for the "happy ever after" finish.

John Davidson, in the selfish but not-too-villainous heavy, is well placed, although we dislike to see real talent such as is his, spent fruitlessly on nothing.

Mme. Rose Dione majestically accomplishes Mme. Yazurska, the temperamental prima donna, while Laura Pollard, "Snitz" Edwards, and "Smoke" Turner provide some effective local color comedy.

Ed Brady, Virginia Harris and Inez Gomez complete the cast.

King Baggot directed the film.

ALLER IN NEW PLANT

The Rothacker-Aller Laboratory on Melrose avenue has been completed, and is in full swing. It is said to be the most complete and up-to-the-minute institution of its kind.

Joe Aller formerly of the D. W. Griffith organization and later heading his own establishment will personally supervise all developing and other activities.

MUMMERS ENTERTAIN AGAIN

The next Mummers' Workshop offering will commence on Monday evening, June 27, and continue for a week. A satire and a harlequinade directed by Clarence Thomas, comprise a unique bill.

"Plots and Playwrights," by Edward Massey, is the satire, in two parts and a prologue. This play was first produced by Professor George P. Baker of Workshop 47 and was one of the Washington Square Players' successes when they produced it in New York.

Milton Monroe has charge of the settings and the players include Charles Meredith, Peggy O'Neill, Paul Vickers, George Meredith, Fred Bauersfeld, Melba Melsing, Miriam Meredith, Helen Yoder, Harrie Wilbur, Philo McCullough, Earl Grant, Kenneth Miller, George Gramlich, K. Arbath, and Wyn Ritchie.

"The Wonder Hat" is the harlequinade in one act for which Eli Benneche is designing the set and costumes. The characters will be interpreted by Ann May, Lillian Leighton, Charles Meredith, Michael Dark, and Kenneth Miller.

SHIPMAN HAS CONTRACT WITH ITALIAN PRODUCING ORGANIZATION

Ernest Shipman has returned to New York after a two months' trip abroad. While there he secured a five years contract with the Ultra Film Co. for American film production in Rome, Italy. This organization controls the output of the Nova, Bernini, Italia and other producing units.

Directors, continuity writers, authors, technical staffs, cameramen and artists will be chosen through Mr. Shipman's Los Angeles representative for production in Italy. The first company will leave early in August and the second will follow early in September. A number of film men in New York city are identified with Mr. Shipman in this enterprise.

NOVO SIGNS GLADYS BROCKWELL

The Novo Film Syndicate, which is headed by R. A. Glasgow and Martin L. Anderson, both of St. Louis, will start production on or about the first of July, and have signed Gladys Brockwell as their star.

They will produce five reel society dramas. Three stories have been purchased through the Photoplaywrights League. Adele Buffington is the author of the first and the second is a mystery melodrama, by Wycliffe A. Hill. Jack Atkins, vaudeville actor, is the author of the third story.

Phil Rosen will direct for Novo, and it is understood that the new company will rent space at Universal City.

CENTURY COMEDY CUTTING

Director Wm. H. Watson has finished cutting the comedy entitled "Where is My Husband?" It features Charles Dorety, supported by Viola Dolan, Inez MacDonald and Bert Roach.

Bert Longnecker has been added to the cast of "The Wolver," starring Tom Santschi.

J. F. Rice and Al Clark are cast in the forthcoming Tom Santschi picture entitled "The Wolver."

Jay Morely will have a part in "The Wolver," the third Tom Santschi picture which Bob Bradbury is directing.

The Director and His Organization

Throughout our review of "Dream Street," an evening or so ago, we were repeatedly struck with the fact that, good picture though it is, speaking by and large, it misses sadly when put forth as a Griffith production.

Without being able to lay the blame for its inferiority as compared with the famous producer's foregoing offerings (several of which, by the way, have been the industry's greatest triumphs) entirely to any particular phase of the picture, such as the cast, continuity or general technique, we were constantly aware of errors in each and every department, so to speak, of the production. For instance, we continually sensed the absence of the Walthall, Harron and Gish interpretations of other days, not to mention a total lack of the exquisite sub-titles flawless photography and smoothly running scenario, which the name Griffith has heretofore insured.

Casting about for an explanation of the change, we found ourselves repeatedly returning to our starting point, the idea which had presented itself before the first reel had unwound before us. The master director is in his picture as before, but the incomparable minds with which his art has formerly been supported, the at-one-time well nigh infallible Griffith organization, was not present to smooth off the rough edges and tone down the noticeable exaggerations in this production.

There doesn't exist in our profession the man who is sufficient to meet all of the requirements of the perfect drama, any more than there exists such a one in any other line of endeavor. However, the co-operation of a staff like the one which for so long expended its best efforts under the Griffith banner, is capable of anything it attempts.

It is an admitted fact that we rarely appreciate the superior until its absence is made known. In a hundred little ways we recognize this difference in "Dream Street." It is to be greatly regretted. F. R.

A Different Exchange

We understand that a two million dollar organization has been incorporated in New York for the distribution of films to those schools and churches who utilize the cinema as a part of their working programs. This opens a new field, and a consequent train of thought for our industry. Naturally those companies and individuals who turn out educational and religious subjects will welcome as a personal benefit the arrival of any concern that will facilitate the disposal of their products, and increase the returns on those products by distributing them through a channel which is in a position to reach, in all probability, a larger and certainly a more appropriate audience than can be found in the ordinary theatre.

So far, so good! But there is another angle of the affair also deserving of consideration. Will not many of our foremost producers of big, non-sectarian but spiritual dramas perceive possibilities for their own work if handled through a releasing organization of this kind? When one computes the number of religious and educational institutions today employing the bona fide photoplay in their progression, it is discovered that, strange as it may seem, there is an opportunity open for someone or many to make legitimate fortunes attending to the wants and needs of these circles in the picture line.

Even the general statistics which we have collected on the subject are staggering, and we have scarcely scratched the crust. It gives us, as a rapidly developing industry, something to think about, anyway.

Youth and Us

Lule Warrenton, whom we understand to have been the first woman director of motion pictures, blew into the office a few days ago as peppily as ever with the gay announcement that her 58th birthday was in the process of celebration. Frankly, we could scarcely believe her figures, in view of the almost proverbial energy and capability which have marked her with unwiltable youth.

We were still meditating upon the marvels of our profession and the Golden State atmosphere when we bumped into California Truman on the boulevard. As everyone, at least every picture one knows, Miss Truman is another wonder of the ages. The first white girl child ever born in California more than seventy years ago, she displays in both her daily and screen life vitality that would be a credit to a high school girl. Verily, the members of our industry have in their art discovered the fount of youth eternal.

Film Capital Production Notes

NEW SINGLE REELERS

Comes the announcement by the Hollycraft Motion Picture Corporation of this city, of their intention to produce a series of single-reelers. These productions, the company states, will be produced in a way that will make them censor-proof. The company is now assembling its staff for the making of these productions. When completed, its personnel will be announced.

Several releasing agencies are negotiating for the output of this organization, but as yet no contracts have been signed, and its manager states that, pending final and complete details, no contracts will be signed looking to the distribution of the pictures.

The productions will be released at the rate of one each week. Practically all the stories have been put into continuity form for the first few months of production.

EMERSON-LOOS-CONSTANCE TALMADGE COMEDY SOON IN PRODUCTION

John Emerson and Anita Loos have completed the synopsis of their new original photoplay, "Good for Nothing," for Constance Talmadge's Eastern consumption, and are now working on the continuity.

It is expected that the finished scenario will be ready in about a fortnight, when it will be produced under the direction of Victor Fleming.

"U" DIRECTORS ON CONTRACT

Among the directors who are under contract to direct special attractions for Universal for the coming year are King Baggot, Fred LeRoy Granville, Jack Conway, Reaves Eason, Jack Ford, William Worthington, and Robert Thornby.

NEW LYTELL PICTURE

Bert Lytell will next be seen in "Lady Fingers," a story by Jackson Gregory, which is being prepared for the screen by Miss Lenore Coffey, of the Metro scenario department. This new picture will start as soon as Mr. Lytell completes work in "Junk," now nearing completion.

SECOND RUN STEWART PICTURE

The Quality Film Corporation is starting on its second production, with Roy Stewart as the star, assisted by Louise Lovely. Harry Revier is the director and the story is a Northwestern, as yet unnamed.

The Quality Film Corporation is backed by San Francisco capital, and has contracted to make five features at the Montague studios in that city.

R-D PRODUCTION ACTIVITIES

The R-D Film Corporation has secured the services of Alvin J. Neitz as director, who with his company is at Big Bear Lake shooting scenes for the forthcoming picture, which is in its second week of production.

This will be the first of a series of six stories in which Jack Drum will play the lead, supported by Josie Sedgwick, J. B. Warner and Lew Meehan.

Releasing will be through the Richard Kipling Enterprises.

BARKER PICTURES SHORTLY

It is expected that within the next five weeks the Reginald Barker Productions will be launched in Hollywood.

Distributing facilities will be announced shortly.

LATEST CHAPLIN COMEDY TITLED

"The Idle Class" has been chosen as the title for Charlie Chaplin's newest comedy, which is in its twentieth week of production.

Mr. Ingraham plans to start his own productions next month.

KYNE CONFERS WITH R. A. WALSH

Peter B. Kyne, author of "Kindred of the Dust," the next story to be filmed by Producer R. A. Walsh for First National, has been spending a few days in consultation with the latter regarding the filming of the story, in which Miriam Cooper will play the role of heroine.

WATCH CAMERA!

AT UNIVERSAL

Edward Kull is on location filming episodes for "The Terror Trail," the serial in which Eileen Sedgwick is featured.

Harry Carey has started work on "Partners," with Robert Thornby directing and Betty Ross Clark playing opposite the star.

Gladys Walton has finished "Christine of the Young Heart" and will soon begin work on "The Girl Who Knew All About Men."

Production has started on "The Butterfly," the feature which serves Marie Prevost as her first starring vehicle. King Baggot is directing from A. P. Younger's screen adaptation of the story by Percival Wilder.

Edna Ferber's "Fanny Herself" is nearing completion and will be released.

Production has started on "The Sheriff of Cinnebar," Peter B. Kyne's story of the west, which will be used by Hoot Gibson as a starring vehicle. Reeves Eason is directing.

Stuart Paton is rapidly concluding an interior sequence for "Conflict" before he goes to the Canadian woods to film outdoor scenes for Priscilla Dean's forthcoming super-feature.

Margaret Armstrong will start work presently on her first starring vehicle, "The White Peacock Feather," written by Du Vernet Rabel and adapted to the screen by Lucien Hubbard. Jack Conway will direct.

AT VITAGRAPH

Earle Williams and company are still at Lake Tahoe, where the timber section and water views are affording material required for "Bring Him In," the production upon which Williams is working.

Nine Vitagraph pictures are announced for September-October release. These include "The Son of Wallingford," made on the Western Vitagraph lot and now being titled and edited at Vitagraph eastern studios; "The Superman," with William Duncan as star; Alice Joyce in "The Inner Chamber;" Earle Williams in "Bring Him In;" Larry Semon in "The Bell Hop;" Corinne Griffith in "Moral Fibre;" Alice Calhoun in "Peggy Puts It Over;" "The Secret of the Hills," with Antonio Moreno; Jimmy Aubrey in "The Riot."

AT GOLDWYN

Tom Moore and his director, E. Mason Hopper, are using Will Rogers' riding ring at his Beverly Hills estate, to get equestrian scenes for "From the Ground Up," by Rupert Hughes.

Director Frank Lloyd and company, making "The Man from Lost River," will return presently from Huntington Lake, Calif., where they have been for the last month filming exteriors. House Peters and Fritzi Brunette are the principal members of the cast.

AT REALART

The Wanda Hawley company, under the direction of Thomas N. Heffron, will go to Victorville for several days this week to make some of the concluding scenes for "Her Face Value," by Percy Heath, based on the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Girls Who Paid Dividends," by Earl Derr Biggers.

"A Virginia Courtship," starring May McAvoy, under the direction of Frank O'Connor, is nearing completion.

Current Reviews

"BLACK ROSES"
California

"Black Roses," Robertson-Cole's latest Sessue Hayakawa starring release, is easily the most absorbing crook mystery drama that we have reviewed for some time.

In the first place, the story contains, happily proportioned and pertinently introduced, all of the elements required to produce the interest, sympathy, opposition, motives, etc., which alone justify a complicated plot and exaggerated action. Our foremost scenarists have long known that when these fundamentals are combined with cleverly timed suspense and a half dozen unexpected plot turns, as is the case in this production, the resulting photoplay can scarcely escape proving fascinating to any audience, and we need only ask the thriving producer to learn that the cinema capable of fascinating today's sophistication is invariably proclaimed a success through that most significant of channels, the box office.

Treating an honest Jap gardener who is "framed" with the murder of his employer and railroaded to prison after his bride has been stolen to safeguard the real criminals, the picture's action progresses through the gardener's escape, and his resultant battle of wits to regain his wife and bring his torturers to justice.

Colin Campbell's direction is excellent, as is the cutting, while we believe that E. Richard Schayer deserves credit for the already commended story and the highly intelligible scenario. The photography varies rather noticeably, however. Several soft focus effects employed by the cinematographer are admirable works of art, while at other times the camera work is only ordinary.

In his customary fine form Hayakawa interprets Yoda, the gentle-hearted servant whom circumstances mold into a keen manipulator of criminals, an outwitter of daring plotters. Well as we know the rural American, we cannot lay claim to having ever before witnessed the portrayal of an Oriental "boob," but he is accomplished beautifully in the first reels of this story by this very popular Japanese actor. Besides being a novelty, this part of the starred character provides the original heart interest, which starts the story off and keeps it going. Hayakawa is equally good throughout and the change in the spirit of his role only enhances its appeal.

Tsuri Aoki could not have improved her work as Blossom, Yoda's adoring, demure little bride. The love scenes of these two are the utmost in refinement.

Myrtle Stedman offers us one of her always vivid and intelligent heavies in Blanche de Vore, a ruthless adventuress, whose "conscience finally gives her up." It is always a joy to watch Miss Stedman get about a set, which reminds us that some of the profession's newer acquisitions would do well to pattern the older screen generations for grace.

De Vore's partner in crime, "Monocle" Harry, is convincingly done by Henry Hebert, whose work in this line has been attracting much approving mention of late. Herbert's tempo is beautifully even and his transitions are excellent.

Toyo Fujita is also exceptionally good as the third conspirator, Wong Fu, which part he handles with obvious understanding.

Andrew Robson, Harold Holland, Carrie Clark Ward and Charlie McHugh complete the cast, save for the actor who does the striking but minor role of Friday Fred, a convict friend of Yoda. The name of this latter is omitted in the press sheet.

This is one type of drama which the producer can depend upon to prove successful, if it is competently handled. This one is.

"A PRIVATE SCANDAL"
Clune's Broadway

Well, we knew they'd do it, which is just another way of saying "we told you so!"

STARKE PATTERSON
This week at the Superba.

To one of the cleverest little dramatic actresses upon the screen today, a girl whose excellent supporting work has left her in a class by herself, the Realart company says, "be another of our ingenues, Miss McAvoy, for we admire your prospects," and forthwith that organization hands her for her starring introduction a sleasy, program story containing an antiquated theme that does its level darndest to diminish the interest which the fan world has come to feel in the art of May McAvoy, best known for her flawless interpretation of Grizel in "Sentimental Tommy." It is unthinkable that real individuality should be provided with nothing better in the story line than the same old "bunk," endured by all of the others apparently for the sake of a few blankly pretty and asininely skittish, little bleached babies who are capable of nothing more. The public, from constant watching, has almost begun to look upon these last as representative of the best in American girlhood. Enough! To proceed:

The picture in question, "A Private Scandal," by Hector Turnbull, is just about the average in its line. Outside of a somewhat hackneyed plot, decorated with the usual number of conventional remarks, etc., there is little about it to be objected to. We have in mind several young actresses whom it would suit to a tee, but its star deserved better material.

Taken altogether, the cast is the best thing about it. Technically the production is standard.

Jeanne Millette, a little war orphan, who takes the blame of her foster mother's wrong doing to save the latter's home, is the role assigned to Miss McAvoy. She takes every possible advantage of her action and succeeds in making her character live in spite of the odds.

Bruce Gordon does very little with Jerry Hayes, the stable boy with whom Jeanne falls in love. He loses someway the sympathy which he should have had.

Ralph Lewis and Kathlyn Williams accomplish some clever team work as Mr. and Mrs. Philip Lawton. Always as the self-satisfied, negligent husband, which he here enacts, Lewis has it over most of his contemporaries, and Miss Williams is excellent as the erring wife.

Lloyd Whitlock is quite interesting in the role of Crosby, the "friend" who carries on a liason with Mrs. Lawton.

Chester Franklin directed "A Private Scandal."

"DREAM STREET"
Mission

D. W. Griffith's latest production, "Dream Street," had its Los Angeles premiere Wednesday, when it opened at the Mission for an indefinite run. The drama was suggested by two of Thomas Burke's "Limehouse Nights" stories, which have been poetically combined, with considerable original material, into a thriller of the slums. As we have mentioned elsewhere in this issue, "Dream Street," although comparing more than favorably with the average picture of the day, is not up to the Griffith standard either artistically or technically. Its characterizations, save for that of Swan Wan, the Chinese heavy, and Billie McFadden, a sympathetic weakling, are oftentimes exaggerated and inconsitent. Billy Bitzer's photography backslides noticeably, and the cutting is incomprehensibly jumpy. At that, however, the play is at all times absorbing, largely due to its producer's well handled suspense, and, in all probability, it will be unreservedly accepted by the ordinary audience, due to its high entertainment value.

Carol Dempster heads the cast in the role of Gypsy Fair, a child of the slums, who supports her father by dancing in a third rate theater, and lives a life of fanciful dreaming. Miss Dempster has combined the famous mannerisms of Lillian and Dorothy Gish in this part with an incongruous effect. That a sophisticated, almost blase, street urchin should jump about, toe in, startle like a wild animal at the most unexpected moments, and playfully cavort otherwise, is scarcely reasonable. Her bewildering gestures, which would hardly be excusable in a wild thing, are really detrimental to the nerves of those "out front."

Ralph Graves, as "Spike" McFadden, also comes forth with mad abandon, of which, by-the-way, we never judged him capable from his past work, which has been, we believe, without exception, of a dignified nature. "Spike" is primarily an earthy soul, radiating with conceit and striving to cover his appealing youth with a ridiculously "hard boiled" attitude, which Graves exaggerates to the limit. Only when the lad sees the true light and discards his more violent mannerisms does his action become natural. The part might have proven the opportunity of a lifetime had its interpreter held himself a little more in hand, but even so he proves his versatility by it. We can't help marveling that the direction did not tone down this particular piece of work.

If Edward Peil were a Chinaman, he would have been responsible for a beautifully complete role in Sway Wan, the diabolic heavy, whose dreams had become evil in the sordid street; but Mr. Peil is not Oriental, which makes his characterization all the more remarkable.

Another exceptionally well cast and played part is accomplished by Charles Mack, who enacts Billy, "Spike's" cowardly but devoted brother. The plot hinges up this character's development. If, as we have

SCREEN NEST OF ORIOLES

What They Are Doing and Where to Find Them

By Ernest Butterworth

Harry Coleman, Joe Miller and L. P. Bogardus are with Bill Duncan at Vitagraph.

Mrs. Rhodes has just finished with Hamilton-White at the Gooden Studios.

Laura Mock has been engaged to play an important part with Priscilla Dean at Universal.

Milla Davenport is on her fourth week at Goldwyn with Frank Lloyd in "The Man from Lost River."

Harry Smith has been re-engaged for Jimmy Aubrey's next picture at Vitagraph.

Lule Warrenton is with Hobart Bosworth, playing a Russian character.

Harry Edmondson has just finished a part with Bill Russell at Fox.

Kelly Frey is in her third week with Stuart Paton in "Conflict," at the "U."

Clyde McCoy has just completed work with Douglas Fairbanks, and has been signed to play a prominent part in the Pilgrimage Play.

Vera Jewell has been appearing with Bert Lytell in his latest Metro picture.

Jack Cosgrave is playing a minister for Metro.

Ferdinand Galvez recently completed a part for Director Granville at Laguna Beach.

Lydia Yeamans Titus has just finished a part with Tom Moore in "The Desperate Chance," and has been engaged to play an important role with Shirley Mason at Fox. Doing the Irish again, Lydia?

C. L. Davidson has returned from Keen's Camp, where he has been locationing with Tom Santschi.

Irene Gedeman, an old timer from New York, is going into pictures.

Janet M. Sully was married on June 1st to Charles J. Maguire. Mr. Maguire was formerly manager of the Hip in New York. Lots of good luck is the wish of Screen Nest 112.

Dick Cummings is "judging um" for Breezy Eason at the "U." Don't rub it in, Dick!

Eva Thatcher has just returned from the East, where she visited her mother, who has suffered a stroke of paralysis.

Olah Norman recently finished a part with Gladys Walton in "Christine of the Young Heart," and has been signed to play a part with Priscilla Dean.

Ernest Butterworth and Harry DeVere, who were co-directing House and Carson for Blazon Film Company, have both severed their connections with that firm and are soon to commence a series of five-reel Mounted Police stories. The continuity of the first will be completed in a few days.

Margaret Cullington and the Women's Auxiliary are working very hard on preparations for the approaching carnival. All Orioles are expected to get in touch with Miss Cullington in an attempt to make this big task lighter.

Screen Nest 112 meets on Monday next, when the usual concert and dance will take place. The Amusement Committee has promised to go one better, and several good acts are promised. All Orioles are expected to get busy to find a new member for next initiation.

Tote Ducrow has just finished another Indian part in "the White Horseman" at Universal.

Bill O'Brien, Blacky Roberts and Fred Gamble have just finished with Douglas Fairbanks.

Monty Collings has returned from Hunt-

BULLETIN ACTORS EQUITY ASSOCIATION

The office has collected $695.00 for Equity members since April 1st, 1921.

The Executive Committee, as well as the members of the Actors' Equity Association present at the meeting June 1st, are on record as being opposed to a motion picture production starring or featuring Clara Smith Hamon.

On June 1st it was announced at the meeting that until further notice, no commission for the pictures would be charged on daily salary under $20.00 or on weekly salary under $100.00. On all other engagements, Equity charges 5%—in no case for a period over five weeks.

The State Executive Committee of the American Legion, on Saturday, June 11th, passed a resolution which will go a long way toward getting the National Committee to endorse similar resolutions that will cover the entire country. Meanwhile the Actors' Equity Association is handling a bill in Congress advocating a 60% ad valorem duty at port of entry on American cost of production, which will place imported films on a fair competitive basis with our American production.

The "Building of an Empire" will be staged for the Burbank Memorial Association Sunday, July 3rd. An arena with seats for 25,000 has been erected. A whole town is being built to house this spectacle. All Equity members, particularly men, are requested to help, as Equity will participate in the proceeds of this day. Phone Mr. Jack Connelly or Mr. Frank Newberg at this office.

All former members of the Actors' Association who have not as yet signed A. E. A. application blanks, should do so before July 1st, in order to take advantage of the $5.00 initiation that has already been paid for them by the Actors' Association.

We, this month, are able to announce the first one of the stores to come into the 10% fold. In New York, Sterns Bros. and others have for a long time allowed Equity members a 10% discount on all goods bought at their stores. Now for Los Angeles. The Peggy-Rose Shop at 6647 Hollywood boulevard, will allow all Equity members in good standing, a discount of 10%; simply show your Equity card or receipt.

Two performances of the Equity Show in New York, played to $49,000.

Do you know that the total membership of Equity is close to 20,000? Do you know that Equity maintains a legal department for its members? If you haven't received your copy of Equity, you can get one at the office.

INGRAM IN NEW YORK

Rex Ingram, having completed the filming of "The Conquering Power," his newest Metro production, has departed for New York, where he expects to remain for several weeks.

BEBE DANIELS HOSTESS

Bebe Daniels, Realart star, recently entertained Fannie Heaslip Lea, well-known magazine writer, at the Studio.

SANTSCHI TO WRITE OWN STORY

The next of Tom Santschi's outdoor stories will be one written by himself. The star has recently completed three scenarios, one of which is a sea story.

GUY BATES POST SCREEN STAR

The famous play, "Omar, the Tent-maker," is to be screened with its original star, Guy Bates Post, in the title role. James Young will direct and the author, Richard Walton Tully, will supervise production.

HELEN KESLER
Playing leads with Jimmy Aubrey.

STUDIO EXECUTIVE ON VACATION

H. E. Edington, assistant to Abraham Lehr, Goldwyn vice-president in charge of production, and Mrs. Edington, are taking a vacation, motoring through the northern part of California. They will be gone two weeks.

CONTRACTS EXPIRE FOR TWO UNIVERSAL STARS

Carmel Myers' contract with Universal has expired and she is expected shortly to affiliate with another concern. The same is true of Edith Roberts, who has completed her contract with the same company.

MILDRED DAVIS, HOSTESS TO WRITER

Perley Poore Sheehan, the author, and Mrs. Sheehan, were luncheon guests this week of Mildred Davis at the Roach Studios.

Mr. Sheehan's latest story, "The Curse," will be produced presently by Lon Chaney.

PROJECTION ROOM SHOWING OF MORENO PICTURE

Antonio Moreno and his director Chester Bennett entertained recently in the Vitagraph projection room, where Moreno's latest picture, "The Secret of the Hills," was shown for professional inspection.

Mildred Davis has presented a new home in Hollywood to her parents as a wedding anniversary gift.

The cast of the forthcoming Oliver Morosco production, "Slippy McGee," is still locationing at Natchez, Miss.

COMEDY HEAD HERE

Jack Cohn, originator of the Hallroom Boys characters on the screen, will arrive in California presently to confer with his brother, Harry Cohn, who produces the comedies, on several of the forthcoming stories of the series.

He will also, while here, superintend with Louis Lewyn the making of special feature subjects for Screen Snapshots, of which he and Mr. Lewyn are co-producers.

CLAYTON HAMILTON RE-SIGNS

Clayton Hamilton, former Columbia University professor, has renewed his contract with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for another year.

DOCKSTADER GUEST AT ROACH STUDIO

Jean Havez, recently added to Harold Lloyd's scenario staff, was studio host recently to Lew Dockstader, who is here at the Orpheum. Mr. Havez was previously associated with the minstrel, writing his librettos.

CHANGES IN UNIVERSAL PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT

With the appointment by Irving G. Thalberg, general manager of Universal City, of Malcolm S. Boylan as director of publicity, the department is being reorganized to function along the lines of a metropolitan newspaper.

Boylan fills the vacancy caused by the resignation of Charles L. Hertzman, while Harold H. Hurley and Lester Levy have been engaged as assistants in the department.

ACTORS VACATIONING AT CATALINA

Richard Dix and David Winter, having recently finished their parts in "The Poverty of Riches," a Reginald Barker production, have departed for a vacation at Catalina.

TO MAKE EDUCATIONAL FILMS HERE

Benjamin B. Hampton advocated, in a recent address before the Los Angeles Commercial Board, that commercial and industrial organizations of Los Angeles collaborate in a campaign for bringing here the makers of films for schools, colleges and churches.

FILM STAR IN RENO RODEO

Viola Dana has been chosen queen of a forthcoming rodeo to be held in Reno, Nev. While there, she will be the guest of the Chamber of Commerce.

Vivian Martin will be seen at the California Theater the week of June 26th in her second Messmore Kendall production, "Pardon My French."

James A. Marcus is keeping busy these days with his duties as business manager for R. A. Walsh Productions, besides which he plays "Hobbs" in Mary Pickford's "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Sylvia Breamer, appearing in "A Poor Relation," Will Rogers' last picture for Goldwyn, has left for New York for a visit.

William S. Smith, General Manager of Western Vitagraph, has returned to the Hollywood lot after a brief vacation.

IRVING M. LESSER DUE HOME

Having spent three months in New York City, Irving M. Lesser will return to Los Angeles within a few days and will make the trip via the important xxchange centers throughout the East and middle West. While in the East Mr. Lesser arranged the season's business for the Western Pictures Exploitation Company, of which he is general manager.

Among film products that Mr. Lesser has arranged distribution for, is David Butler's series of feature pictures.

THIRD PICTURE FINISHED

Tom Santschi and his company have returned from San Jacinto Mountain locations and have shot the remaining interiors at the Williams Studio for "Mother O'Dreams," the third picture of the new series, while Cyrus J. Williams is producing for Pathe. The fourth, as yet unnamed, will be started this week.

NEW HOLUBAR PICTURE

Allen Holubar, producer of "Man, Woman, Marriage," has completed the script for his second independent production for First National release and will soon start shooting.

The story is Holubar's adaptation of a well-known magazine story and will be a six reeler.

Dorothy Phillips, star of Allen Holubar productions, will play the stellar role.

NEILAN SHOOTING BOAT SCENES

Marshall Neilan recently used the steamer Yale, running between Los Angeles and San Francisco, as a floating studio for scenes in the production of his new First National picture, "Bits of Life."

Among those who made the trip were Mr. Neilan, Hugh Wiley, Lon Chaney, Anna May Wong, Teddy Sampson, Lucita Squier, David Kesson, William Linahan, Bob Landers, James Flood and Ray June.

CHILD PICTURE FINISHED

Milburn Morante has completed his latest five-reel production, "One Empty Shell," a drama featuring Baby Virginia Morante, and is now preparing for the production of the second of the series of eight which he is to make under a contract arranged by his business representatives, White and Goodman.

FIRST NATIONAL HEAD HERE

Robert Lieber, president of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., accompanied by his wife and two daughters, has arrived in Los Angeles.

Mr. Lieber will spend the succeeding week in conference with John E. McCormick, western representative of First National, and independent producers releasing through Associated First National.

Harry Burns is busy cutting "The Monkey Bell Hop" and "The Monkey Schoolmaster," his recent animal comedies.

NICE, FRANCE, TO BE PRODUCING CENTER

A film-producing center is being constructed outside of Nice, France, by Rene Navarre, Paris film star, who is behind the project.

VIOLETTA VON BACH

Formerly of the Wein and Zagreb Imperial Theatres, who has recently arrived here from Jugo-Slavia to enter pictures

HER OWN PRODUCTIONS

Irene Tams has finished her starring vehicle, "Determination," and expects ere long to have her own producing company here in Los Angeles.

JULY PREVIEW OF KERN'S "UNFOLDMENT"

George H. Kern expects to have his "Unfoldment" cut, titled and ready for its Los Angeles preview July 4th.

"The Girl from Nowhere," with Elaine Hammerstein, will soon be presented by Selznick pictures. Bradley King, author of "Lying Lips," provided the story.

Katherine MacDonald, starring in "Peachie," and her company have returned from Santa Barbara and Montecito, where exteriors have been filmed for her new production.

The Border Feature Film Corporation of Bisbee, Arizona, has just completed a sunlight stage which will accommodate four companies.

WATCH CAMERA!

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is progressing on his forthcoming comedy, "The Sky Is the Limit."

Harry "Snub" Pollard is at work on his nineteenth, entitled "Fifteen Minutes," which Charles Parrott is directing. Marie Mosquini plays opposite the star.

AT LASKY'S

Jack Holt, recently elevated to stardom, is to begin work approximately the middle of July on his first stellar vehicle, which it is understood will be "Tall Timber," by James A. B. Scherer.

Agnes Ayres will shortly return to Hollywood and it is planned to start her first star picture about the first of August.

Thomas Meighan will arrive in July and will probably start in August some time on "A Prince There Was," George Cohan's dramatic success.

Wallace Reid is completing his work as co-star with Elsie Ferguson in "Peter Ibbetson," a George Fitzmaurice production, in New York.

Penrhyn Stanlaws starts presently on Betty Compson's second star picture, "The Woman in the Case," by Clyde Fitch. Will Carleton has been signed as leading man.

Ethel Clayton is completing "Her Own Money," under the direction of Joseph Henabery, and when this is finished, she will begin work upon Clare Beranger's original picture "Exit the Vamp."

Nellie Peck Saunders is cast in Oliver Morosco's "Slippy McGee."

Les Bates is playing the father in "By Right of Birth" at Trinity Auditorium.

Lawrence Underwood has been engaged by the Sunflower Pictures Corp. to direct their first production.

A. Bodo and Tom Regan have finished directing their second comedy for the Italian-American Film Corporation, and will start presently on their third production.

Chas. Force, who has been locationing at Natchez, Miss., with the "Slippy McGee" company, under the direction of Mr. Wharton, expects to return to Los Angeles in a few days.

PAULINE FREDERICK GIVES BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

Pauline Frederick will give a benefit performance for a local orthopedic hospital for crippled children. Will Rogers and other screen star will participate.

Clark Comstock has been re-engaged to play another character heavy with Tom Santschi.

Bessie Love and her mother are on a vacation trip to Miss Love's father's ranch near Bakersfield.

Charles Ray and Norma Talmadge were the winners of a popularity contest just held by a Duluth, Minn., newspaper.

PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

Chapter VI

We have now come to the point in the construction of our skeleton plot, where it is necessary to consider the manner in which we are going to handle the climax. The girl's father has arrived on the scene with a rescue party. Just as the prospector returns from across the river we might discover that the old man has already located the young aviator, and has again threatened his life if the girl is not found. Naturally the young aviator, not being the hero of our story, will show a cowardly nature and cringe at the threats of the old man. Just now the prospector comes on the scene.

Wait just a minute! How are we going to keep the white girl and the Indian maiden from following the prospector across the river? There is one way in which we can accomplish this, and that is to assume that there is only one canoe, and that the prospector uses that in crossing.

Now we are going to have to do some thinking to prevent our story from losing speed here, and to avoid a weak climax. Let us assume that the old man is persuaded by the prospector to give the boy twelve hours in which to search for the girl. As a matter of fact, it might be that he wishes to have this length of time in which to battle his own selfish inclination and to bring himself to the point of making the sacrifice.

We must have something happen during the twelve hours which will afford some interesting and exciting action. We must also bring about a situation of some kind in which we can give both the prospector and the aviator a chance to demonstrate their comparative merits and to give the girl a chance to decide in favor of the prospector, if we are going to have him sacrifice the girl and then win her back. There are two ways of ending this story. One of them is to have the prospector sacrifice the girl and to remain in the isolated canyon in communion with nature. This is the way we would finish it if we were writing it for Mitchell Lewis or Sessue Hayakawa, in which case, of course, we would play our prospector as an East Indian or a half-breed. The other way is to have him make the sacrifice and then to have the girl capitulate to him. It would, of course, be fatal to have him win the girl in any other way. The reason for this is that it would weaken his character, and make a villain of him.

We have decided to have him sacrifice the girl and then win her back by fair means, and possibly by further sacrifice. How are we going to do this?

Let us assume that as night comes on, a storm blows up. We must bear in mind that our whole party is camping in a very narrow canyon, and that a cloud-burst might swell the already rapid current of the river to the point where there is danger of drowning some of them—at least the girls. This storm will give us a chance for some good photographic effects. We can assume that the entire party of men are camped in the prospector's cabin, and as the wind blows, and lightning flashes are followed by a terrific downpour of water, we can get some good shots through the cabin window.

We can also heighten the dramatic interest here, by having our prospector register his concern for the safety of the girl across the river, and resolve to immediately restore her to her father. By this time the entire company of men are aroused and leave the cabin.

AUDREY CHAPMAN

Who is playing the lead in Ollie Sellers' forthcoming production

In the meantime we are going to get ourselves into an awkward position, if we simply have them cross the river and find the girl. We must keep the story moving here at the rate of an express train. Therefore, we will have the two girls routed from the cabin in which they are sleeping, by the flood, and have both of them attempt to cross the river in some way. We have already decided that there was only one canoe. We can heighten suspense somewhat by showing that the swift current of the river breaks the canoe from its moorings and crashes it against the rocks below. We might have the body of an old tree fall across the river, which has been blown down by the wind. The girl starts across. As she reaches the center of the stream the current washes the log from under her, and she is left holding, either to the boughs of a tree, or to some very slippery rocks. If we want to get rid of the Indian girl in this scene, we can take her back and show that she refused to leave the dead body of the villain, whom she has both loved and feared.

Now, here's the big chance for the test between the prospector and the aviator. The girl must be rescued. The prospector has already disclosed her whereabouts, with an explanation to the old man that he desired to learn more of the intentions of the aviator toward the girl, as a reason for not having told of her presence before. We will assume that the old man is so old and crippled that an attempt on his part to save the girl, would result in sure death. The aviator proves to be a craven coward. The prospector dives in and saves the girl, at the great risk of his life.

After having been delivered into the arms of her father and returning with the party to the prospector's cabin, we can have a pretty scene in which the girl shows her gratitude to the brave prospector, for the risk of his life in saving her.

We can have a few more scenes which presumably occur the next morning in which the girl plainly shows her preference for the brave young prospector, and it is decided that he shall accompany the party back to civilization.

In the next chapter, we are going to pick up one or two angles of the plot which we have constructed here, and see if we cannot knit it together a little more closely and build it up somewhat.

STORIES WANTED

We have a very urgent call for a half-dozen North Western Mounted Police stories, for Irving Cummings, as well as one or two five reelers of the same description.

Another out of town company is in the market for several five-reel stories of the North Woods. These last do not need to be of the Mounted Police.

The Novo Syndicate, which has just bought three stories through the League for Gladys Brockwell, and which is going to start work shortly at the Louis Mayer Studios, will be in the market for three more society dramas.

The Moranti Productions, producing at the Balboa Studios, at Long Beach, will shortly be in the market for another five reel western, featuring George Chesboro.

We are looking for a strong plot in five reels for the Priscilla Dean type. This story is not for Miss Dean, however.

Willis and Inglis have called on us for a big society drama, containing an all-star cast, with a terrific punch and one which will make a six or seven reel special feature. Please mention this department of Camera when submitting this material.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Henry J. Hebert

The well-known screen heavy, Henry J. Hebert, has not spent his entire dramatic career upon the silver sheet. Before he became a screen favorite he spent several years on the legitimate stage supporting Robert Hilliard, Cyril Scott, Jane Cowl, and David Belasco. With the latter he spent three consecutive seasons. His last engagement was with Edwin Breeze in "The Master Mind."

Staring his film career with the Reliance in New York City, Hebert later came West with William Farnum to establish the Fox studio on the Pacific Coast, and thereafter played all of Mr. Farnum's heavies for two years. Later he returned East for six pictures with Paramount, but the beautiful West called him back, and he returned for another year with Fox, appearing with Farnum once more in "Bad Men."

Last week he was seen as "Monocle" Harry in "Black Roses" at the California, a somewhat different heavy.

This very active artist is at present playing in "Renunciation," supporting Hobart Bosworth.

COOGAN AT CATALINA

Jackie Coogan is enjoying a vacation. Mr. and Mrs. Coogan have taken the youngster to Catalina Island for a few days prior to beginning work on his first starring picture for Associated First National.

TO APPEAR IN OHIO THEATRES

Hope Hampton, star of "Star Dust," the Fannie Hurst story now being filmed at Fort Lee, N. J., under the direction of Hobart Henley, will make a series of personal appearances before motion picture audiences in Ohio this month.

John Harron has an important role in "Partners," the next Harry Carey picture.

Alan Hale has been added to the cast of "Partners," starring Harry Carey.

Frank Borzage has purchased a home on Long Island Sound, New York.

"Sonny Boy" Warde is playing a part in the Leong But Jung production, "Lotus Blossom."

Gertrude Claire and Gertrude Olmsted will have important parts in Harry Carey's forthcoming Universal-Jewel production, "Partners."

The wife and daughter of Eddy Polo have started on a tour of Europe, Egypt and Africa. The latter, Malvine Polo, recently played a part in "Foolish Wives."

Alice Duer Miller, who for the past several months has been with the Goldwyn scenario department, is on her way to New York, in answer to a telegram reporting that her husband had met with a severe automobile accident.

INTRODUCING BOB EVANS

In early days Bob served his time along juvenile lines in stock. He left the stage for a while then, and bought a ranch up north, where he played at ranching for over five years.

The call of the lights has brought him back, only to find all things have changed; so Bob gets busy, and after a year's study and preparation in advanced dramatic and screen acting technique under one of our best up-to-date actors and instructors in this line, Mr. Howard Gaye, who by the way was one of D. W. Griffith's right hand men in stock for more than four years, as well as having ten years of stage experience to back him, he is with us again.

Bob has a pretty complete training along all lines, and has brushed up considerably in the last year, having acquired a $20,000 outfit, anything from a walking stick to autos or tractors, which he will be glad to use in his work if called on. He not ohly can act, but is a good mechanic, driver, tractor operator, and in aeronautics his best sport is airplane stunting of all kinds. The rougher they make it the more he enjoys it. If there is anything Bob has missed in his past experiences and training he has not heard of it yet.

He has had camera experience, working on the quiet in small bits as an extra, while completing his studies. Bob shows to good advantage along sympathetic juvenile lines, but his past experience and training have put him in a position where he shows up well whatever part he is given to do, no matter how small.

So for anyone who happens to take a hold of Bob in the near future and handles him properly, there are great possibilities ahead.

Here is hoping for his success in the near future. Let everybody boost. With such training and hard effort to get ahead and make good, we cannot afford to knock or ignore.

Anyone wishing to get in touch with him can reach him at the Y. M. C. A., Box No. 276.

heard, Billy is his first screen role, Mack is indeed an unusual find.

We would have enjoyed Tyrone Powers as the preacher of the streets to a greater extent had he been allowed any real action.

Porter Strong does a comedy "coon" to everyone's extreme mirth; while W. J. Ferguson, Charles Slattery, George Neville and Morgan Wallace complete the cast.

"WHITE AND UNMARRIED"

Grauman's

When one has said of "White and Unmarried," Thomas Meighan's latest comedy drama for Paramount, that it is entertaining, the tale is told in its entirety. Outside of some sprightly comedy action, snappy subtitles and a generally happy outlook, there is no particular theme, plot or sympathetic character developed by it, and its introductory title to the contrary, there is certainly no "moral pointed." However, it is something to have accomplished an attractive cinema play even if it be a bit aimless, and we can recommend no current release that will beguile an hour so pleasantly or pass it with such rapidity as this John Swain story.

A capital cast, surrounded by the customary Lasky-special luxury in sets, costumes, etc., make the most of the opportunities provided in the Will Ritchey scenario, which last depends upon swift and constant action for its success.

The story, which makes up in novelty what it lacks in consistency, deals with a burglar who deserts his profession, not because he reforms but on account of the fact that his uncle's demise leaves him a leisurely millionaire, and he scorns to labor for his bread when it is no longer necessary. All of which is at least logical.

The photography and technical effects are good throughout.

Meighan, a retired second-story worker, uses all of the well-remembered boyish charm, which has lately been lost sight of somewhat in his heavier vehicles. His personality wins sympathy for the part rather than the action given him. As the romantic wanderer, this star is truly fitted to deliver the goods.

The feminine lead, a comparatively unimportant role, is satisfactorily handled by Jacqueline Logan, whose jazz dancing as Andree, the Parisian cabareter, is mayhap a little more "the real thing" than her French mannerism. However, she is a pretty, happy child, and the part requires just such.

Grace Darmond is in her element when called upon to glide languidly through the boredom of overfed, underdone and overcome aristocracy. She plays Dorthea Welter, a daughter of wealth, whose appearance in the story exceeds, perhaps, her importance to the plot. Personally we were delighted that such was the case, for we find her always interesting in this type of thing.

Walter Long and Lloyd Whitlock combine forces to provide some almost appalling opposition. The former plays Chicoq, an exaggerated Apache, in that rare way of his, while Whitlock is seen in the part of Count Marechel, an unscrupulous impostor.

Frederick Vroom and Marion Skinner are very good as Dorthea's parents and together with Georgie Stone and Jack Herbert, end the list of players.

Tom Forman's guidance of the imaginative and almost facetious subject was very wise. The fact that he "kidded" it a little prepared it for easy digestion.

If relief is what one craves, "White and Unmarried" is it.

George Nichols will be seen in Harry Carey's forthcoming picture, "Partners," which Robert Thornby is directing.

"OVER THE WIRE"

Tally's

Metro releases an Alice Lake production locally this week. It is entitled "Over the Wire," and is the story of a woman whose love is divided between her dead brother and her husband whom she believes, for a time, to have been the indirect cause of the former's suicide. The whole is quite entertaining, although draggy places put in their appearance now and again. Photographically the picture is only fair.

Miss Lake has considerable appeal in the featured role. She plays the daughter of an aristocratic but no longer wealthy family, whose one interest in life is her younger brother. The effect of his suicide upon her and her determination to make his supposed persecutor pay, form fairly solid business upon which to lay a plot. Considering that she is no particular type, Miss Lake gets along remarkably.

Albert Roscoe is seen in the masculine lead. He plays the stern, just, competent millionaire who marries the sister of the impulsive lad for whom he had planned salvation rather than death. Roscoe is always well cast in straight parts such as this.

George Stewart surprised us with his unusual character delineation as the lovable but spoiled weakling who causes all of the trouble. He really accomplishes much sympathy for an inadmirable part, and we thoroughly enjoyed all of his work.

The heavy in this piece is the work of Alan Hale who, we took it, was merely present to provide more story complications. He does Twyford, a Wall Street speculator. Hale is an excellent type.

Wesley Ruggles directed this drama.

The Ampico Spreads Itself

The greatest advertising genius of the world has proclaimed the motion picture to be the most effectively known medium by which to sell the public an idea, whether it be commercial or sentimental, and this statement is proven daily, probably a thousand times over, wherever the film is shown; which brings us down to a consideration of advertising in the theatre, its uses and abuses. Personally, we believe that if it is handled subtly, screen publicizing can accomplish great good for both those who employ it to extend their scope and to the exhibitors who encourage it in their houses, without offending the average audience, or giving it the idea that its entertainment is being "sold at both ends."

However, to accomplish anything like satisfaction in this line, extreme care, or rather the rare art of delicate suggestion, must be utilized alone. When material of this kind becomes obvious, takes on, for instance, bill board proportions, nothing but disaster ensues. Quite naturally, the advertiser is blamed by the public for infringing upon its recreation ground, but the harm done him is as nothing compared to the avalanche of resentment and disgust which descends upon the head of the unwise showman who has permitted the occurrence. Such a mistake needs only to be recognized once to ruin his rating and the popularity of his house.

And the people are right! Having paid their admissions (the legitimate earnings of the theatre owner), why should they be forced to sit through thirty minutes or more of foolishness such as Mr. T. L. Tally presented last week for the financial improvement of the Knabe-Ampico Player-Piano Company and himself? Why should a miserably put together storyette, ridiculously played and with each subtitle smacking of a newspaper advertisement, be thrown down the throats of a company whose money has been handed out that it might obtain an hour's bona fide amusement?

We are willing to wager that, had an interesting little split reel containing, in a scene or two, an unheralded Ampico with the trade mark in view, been tucked into the program, real good would have been derived by the manufacturers of the instrument; and the thought that Tally's Theatre was betraying its confidence would never have presented itself to the audience. Truly it isn't always so much the principle of a thing that counts as it is that principle's application. Mr. Tally was not long ago Los Angeles' foremost exhibitor. We repeat, it doesn't pay to annoy one's patrons even for thirty minutes.—F. R.

Retaliation?

We read the following in England's "The Kinematograph Weekly," which we credit with being able to veil its threats quite subtly. Our own views on this subject do not require another rehearsal at this time, but it is interesting to note that since, according to Robert Brunton, the foreign market only brings on an average of from ten to twelve per cent of a picture's profits anyway, it would decidedly pay us to risk all of the European taxation that can be handed us while protecting our own product and its creators.

"America—or certain sections of the Trade in that country—is very actively concerned with difficulties arising from the import of European films, and a clamour for Protection is going up which finds some support in Congress. The probability of this move was foreshadowed in the Kine. more than six months ago; it is now taking very definite shape and will have to be reckoned with by European producers who hope to get into the American market regularly.

"Marshall Neilan, Marion Fairfax and Al Christie are among those actively engaged in the propaganda for a high duty, which they declare is not intended to exclude the European product but to protect the American maker against price-cutting. They base their case chiefly on the difference in the cost of production in America and Europe, stating that a film can be made in certain countries for one-tenth of what it costs in the States.

"In this attitude they have the weighty support of Herbert Hoover, now the American Secretary of Commerce, who bases his approval of the suggested taxation on the state of the exchange, and who, apparently, would not support any tax beyond that which will automatically reduce the importer's advantage on this head. But this, in itself, is a sufficiently important matter, the relative cheapness of the European film being its biggest asset in America under present conditions.

"Samuel Goldwyn has come out with a protest against the proposed taxation, and although, as a large importer, nowadays, of European films, he is not impartial, his influence is probably considerable—as is that of Famous-Lasky, which is also, in view of its German affiliations, interested in the maintenance of an open market. But the tendency of America towards high duties and the present political complexion of Congress are ominous.

"One fact which the European producer will not easily forget, in view of the fact that the Americans are basing their campaign on comparative costs of production, is that

Film Capital Production Notes

NEILAN TO PRODUCE FIRST ANTI-CENSORSHIP PICTURE

Marshall Neilan, upon completion of his present First National picture, "Bits of Life," will write and produce a picture for the Public Rights League of America, presenting a screen reply to the reformers and censorship agitators. An all-star cast will portray the different characters and the negative will be turned over to the League free of all charges, it is asserted.

The plan has been welcomed by the League and has received the endorsement of Associated First National Exhibitors, distributors of Mr. Neilan's product. Plans are now under way to facilitate this film's presentation in some 10,000 theatres throughout the country without charge to the exhibitor.

WILLIS AND INGLIS, PRODUCERS

Enlarging the scope of their work in the motion picture industry, the firm of Willis and Inglis announce that, beginning July 1st, they will discontinue their agency and booking department, to confine their activities to production, the management, the financing of companies, and to film exploitation.

They will continue, however, to act in an advisory capacity between producers and distributors, and intend to retain and enlarge their present book-and-play department.

SECOND STAHL PICTURE MAKING

John M. Stahl this week began the filming of his second independent unit offering at the Louis B. Mayer studios. Like its predecessor, "Retribution," it will be presented by Mr. Mayer through Associated First National.

NORMA TALMADGE IN NEW PICTURE

Norma Talmadge, who has been vacationing at Bayside, L. I., will begin Allen Langdon Martin's "Smilin' Through," sometime in July.

In this next picture, which Herbert Brenon will direct, Miss Talmadge will be seen in the part which Jane Cowl interpreted recently on the speaking stage.

"GOOD FOR NOTHING" IN PRODUCTION

Constance Talmadge has started work on her newest First National picture, "Good for Nothing," an original John Emerson-Anita Loos story.

Kenneth Harlan will be Miss Talmadge's leading man, and John Emerson will personally direct this picture.

EPISODE THREE RELEASED

"The Strange Disappearance" is the title of episode three of the Pathe serial, "The Yellow Arm," produced by George B. Seitz, starring Juanita Hansen, with Warner Oland and Marguerite Courtot prominent in the cast. It has been scheduled for release by Pathe July 3d.

TOM MOORE BUSY

Tom Moore, Goldwyn comedian, will finish this week "From the Ground Up," an original screen story by Rupert Hughes, under the direction of E. Mason Hopper, and will immediately start production on "The Man with Two Mothers," an original story by Alice Duer Miller, which Paul Bern will direct.

GOLDWYN TO PICTURIZE "GRAND LARCENY"

MORANTI IN WESTERNS

Milburn Moranti, formerly leading man for Gale Henry, is starting work on a contract of eight five-reel westerns. "The Recoil," a story bought through the Photoplaywrights League of America and written by Inman Kane, is the first to go into production.

Moranti, who is working at the Balboa Studios in Long Beach, is in the market for seven more original stories.

TO DISTRIBUTE FROM LOS ANGELES

Jack Coogan, father of Jackie Coogan, will not only produce features in which his son will star, but has created a new policy of distribution that will give Los Angeles an equal chance with New York City, in so far as arranging exhibition channels for the new Coogan series is concerned.

Mr. Coogan will distribute his finished products from Los Angeles and will have executive distribution offices located in this city.

READY FOR RELEASE

"Fightin' Mad," Bill Desmond's latest starring picture, is in the process of cutting and editing and will be released shortly.

WATCH CAMERA!

AT UNIVERSAL

Frank Mayo is appearing as a two-fisted circuit rider in his newest starring picture, "The Reverend Meddler," a story of the Southern mountains which William Worthington is directing.

Lee Moran is progressing in his forthcoming "laughograph," a short reel comedy called "A Mile a Minute," in which he is being directed by Billy Watson from the story of Scott Darling.

"Miss" DuPont has started work on her first feature picture, "The White Peacock Feather," in which she will be directed by Jack Conway. Will someone kindly inform us concerning this lady's front name? Jack Perrin has been engaged as the leading masculine character.

Production has started on Gladys Walton's forthcoming feature, "The Ark Angel," with Major David Kirkland directing. The unit is now at San Pedro. Jack Mower is playing opposite the ingenue.

AT VITAGRAPH

Earle Williams and his co-director, Robert Ensminger, have returned to the studio from Lake Tahoe after an absence of several weeks devoted to shooting exteriors for "Bring Him In," the current Williams feature.

Henry B. Walthall is to head an all-star cast in David Smith's next special production from one of James Oliver Curwood's novels. The scenario has been written by Bradley J. Smollen.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is nearing the completion of his thirteenth two-reeler, at present titled "The Sky Is the Limit." The script was written by Hal Roach and Sam Taylor, with Fred Newmeyer directing.

The Ruth Roland company leaves next week for Balboa where shots will be taken for a sequence of "White Eagle," Miss Roland's serial now under production.

AT REALART

"The Happy Ending," by Hector Turnbull, will be May McAvoy's next picture and her fourth starring production.

The title of the Harvey O'Higgins' original story for Mary Miles Minter has been changed from "The Wall Flower" to "The Love Charm."

MACDONALD TO PRODUCE AT WARNER'S

The Foremost Pictures Corporation, a comparatively new organization, has leased space at the Warner Bros. Studios, and will start work July 5th upon its first production, "A Western Princess," starring Juanita Hansen under the direction of Wallace MacDonald, who will vacation a time from acting to fill this engagement.

Bert Cann, who has spent the last four years at the Thos. H. Ince Studios, will photograph the picture for the new company.

MESTAYER FEATURED

After completing his present western tour on the legitimate stage in various Ibsen dramas, Harry Mestayer will proceed to New York to be featured there in pictures and a new play.

Current Reviews

"THE FOOLISH MATRONS"

Symphony

"The Foolish Matrons" is, in our estimation, the best production turned out by Maurice Tourneur in at least two years. We may also state that the story, which treats a fundamental sex problem from three angles, is the most worth while recent effort of Don Byrne. Whether or not one agrees with its basic idea, that a woman's career and ambition inevitably jeopardize her husband's happiness, the unselfishness it teaches is still a beautiful thought which has been extraordinarily handled by Mr. Tourneur and his associate director, Clarence Brown. One of their best touches is brought about by their clever judgment of the respective values of the close-up and the long shot. Most direction ignores the possibilities of the latter. Good photography and subtitles containing some rare philosophy assist the cast, the weak spots in which are unusually infrequent.

We were amused somewhat at the cool manner in which Mr. Tourneur pages Jacksonville, Florida, as a desolate country waste. However, such may prove beneficial to the film capital, in which case, none of us will register a "kick."

Wallace MacDonald in the picturesque role of Tony, the poet, just about runs off bodily with the picture's sympathy, in spite of the rather weak character which he plays. As the drunkard whose wife's ambition indirectly kills him, MacDonald does his best work and presents one of the most pitiful pictures ever screened. Fortunately he is allowed plenty of footage to "get over" his action.

Mildred Manning is well cast and has some good work to her credit in the role of Sheila, Tony's ultra-modern, flinty-hearted, "careering" wife.

Hobart Bosworth departs from his customary strenuous type of characterization to enact the quiet, even romantic, part of the great surgeon in whose way Fate throws an actress who makes a wise wife. There is much appeal in Bosworth's role.

The famous artist whom he marries is the exceptional work of Kathleen Kirkham, who takes canny advantage of the opportunity to contrast her role with the unsympathetic ones assumed by the other "matrons" in the piece. Miss Kirkham is a finished performer.

Charles Meredith's rendition of the enthusiastic young lawyer from Jacksonville varies rather decidedly. In its lighter places he uses his eyes to great advantage and is altogether more than refreshing. However, much is amiss in this actor's big dramatic moments. He fails to convince throughout the sequence in which he orders his erring wife from his home. It is sometimes hard to know just where the blame for an inconsistent performance should be placed. The direction has much to do with it.

Doris May is better placed than we have ever seen her and gives the impression of being "perfectly at home" as Georgia, the kittenish, weak-minded wife, whose desire for gayety causes her to overreach herself. The superficial expressions and self-conscious little mannerisms which we have always criticized in Miss May's work are utilized fittingly here.

Michael Dark does some clever suave villain stuff as Chester King, a "chicken chaser," while a good touch is provided the opposition by Betty Brice.

Nearly every moment of "The Foolish Matrons" excels in entertainment value.

"TOO MUCH SPEED"

Grauman's

The current Wallie Reid-Paramount comedy just about accomplishes in entertainment value, the regular Reid standard for good interpretations, a fast moving scenario, pleasing photography and amusing subtitles.

FRITZIE BRUNETT

Perhaps to some of us who distinctly recollect "The Roaring Road" and "Double Speed," this Byron Morgan story from the Saturday Evening Post entitled "Too Much Speed" may suffer from a sameness when compared with the old releases first mentioned, but everything considered any sort of speed will pass muster in 1921, which inevitability is taken advantage of in this production.

Mr. Reid once again makes a picturesque and romantic demon of the road in this race track story. He enacts Dusty Rhodes, a driver who almost gives up his career for a wife and—trucks. We take it that Wallie will please the ladies as usual.

Opposite the star appears Agnes Ayres, as have appeared nearly everyone of the newer Paramount feminine stars at one time or another. She does prettily, and with spirit, Virginia MacMurran, daughter of a motor truck magnate who objects to racing sons-in-law.

Daddy MacMurran, as might be easily guessed, is played by no other than Theodore Roberts, whose present role almost duplicates one which he filled with Reid in a former automobile story. However, Roberts in any sort of business never ceases to delight us—and the world.

Jack Richardson and Guy Oliver provide all the trouble in the roles of Hellis, MacMurran's business rival and Zeeker, a crooked racer. They are both dependable.

Lucien Littlefield does well the minor role of Jimmy Rodman, a crippled "has been" of the track. This actor has shown considerable versatility of late. His work is reminiscent of the material handled for Lasky by Raymond Hatton in the old days.

Frank Urson used admirable judgment in his handling of this picture.

"PARDON MY FRENCH"

California

Taken all in all, perhaps the poorest excuse for an entertaining screen play that we have reviewed in six months is "Pardon My French," Messmore Kendall's latest offering through Goldwyn. A miserably constructed story by Edward Childs Carpenter which contains, annoyingly combined, drama, burlesque and straight slapstick in apparently an attempt at farce, starts the picture off toward the rocks to which it is hastily escorted by exceedingly poor technique and terrible performances.

The theme of the story, if there be one worthy of the name, is a continual insult to the theatrical profession. Ridiculous "take-offs" on the road show and motion picture outfit cannot escape proving detrimental in some quarters to the esteem in which we are held, no matter how obviously overdrawn they have been made for comedy. They are always mistakes and should be discouraged.

The direction by Sidney Olcott is far from satisfactory, and the subtitles, which are credited to Irvin Cobb, rarely provoke a laugh, although several of them "fish" quite obviously for such. Subtitle writing is an art in itself, requiring more than a humorous outlook and literary cleverness to master.

Vivian Martin is featured or starred or something in this photoplay. She plays Polly, a stranded road show performer who becomes a maid that she may eat, and quite novelly falls in love with the billboarded name of an actor whom she has never seen. Possibly Miss Martin's failure to impress favorably in this role is largely due to her action; but she certainly is no success as a slapstick artist and the release of this picture is bound to injure both her popularity with the public and her professional standing.

There doesn't seem to be a leading man in this story. However, the inspiring "name" of Millicuddy, with which Polly is infatuated, materializes in the last reel in time to marry the heroine for no reason at all except that the whole weary affair has to end someway. Wallace Ray is cast in this mere bit, which any extra man might have done with equal grace.

Nadine Beresford and Ralph Yearsly accomplish the exaggerated and disgusting parts of Mrs. Hawker and her son Zeke, newly rich inhabitants of Tar Harbor. Nothing about their work is true either to life or to farce.

Grace Studiford and Walter McEwen as the heavies, Countes Carstairs and Marquis de Void, might be said to be so "rotten, they are good." This last is more expressive than elegant, but the Countess and the Marquis are far from elegant themselves.

George Spink and Thomas Meeghan complete the cast in inconsistent roles.

If the Christie Comedy plant couldn't turn out better pictures than this so-called "feature," and display players with more ability than we see in it, the Christie films coluld exist no longer on a paying basis. Here's hoping for no repetition, Mr. Kendall!

ANOTHER MUMMER PERFORMANCE

Another delightful week of performances has just closed at the Mummers' Workshop on Morgan Place, where very clever plays and playettes are offered now and again for the organization and its friends by the dramatic department.

The featured work of this last entertain-

BOBBY VERNON RE-ENGAGED

Bobby Vernon is back in the Christie fold and is already finishing his second picture, made since his return. It is as yet untitled, but will be released in two reels.

THREE NEW PLAYERS FOR "BITS OF LIFE"

Marshall Neilan recently signed three more players for the final episode in his "Bits of Life." The latest acquisitions are Harriet Hammond, Noah Beery and John Bowers.

Eddie Sutherland will play the masculine lead opposite Juanita Hansen in "A Western Princess."

Lillian Rich has the leading feminine role in "The Reverend Meddler," the current Frank Mayo production.

Hedwiga Reicher has one of the stellar roles in Ferdinand Earle's production of "The Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam.

Glen Lambert, formerly director of Sunbeam Comedies, has been added to the scenario staff of the C. L. Chester Studio.

Edward Jobson has been selected for a part in Bert Lytell's new Metro picture, "Junk," a Maxwell Karger production.

Joe Mitchell, actor and author, has been placed in charge of the scenario department at the Buster Keaton studios.

Ernest Palmer wil be in charge of the camera work of Stahl's second independent offering, to start production at the Louis B. Mayer studio.

George Fawcett has been chosen for an important role in the next Constance Talmadge production, "Good for Nothing," an original story by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

Bert Offord has closed with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers," and has been added to the cast of "Gas, Oil and Water," Charles Ray's latest starring vehicle.

Frank Norcross has signed with Ernest Shipman's Italian Company, and will leave for Italy at once. Mr. Norcross has just finished an important part with Geo. Baker in "Garments of Truth."

It is understood that Charlotte Pierce will play the most important feminine role in Charles Ray's next and tenth production for First National release, the title of which has not yet been decided upon.

FREDERICK WARDE CELEBRATES HIS GOLDEN WEDDING

Frederick Warde has just celebrated his golden wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Warde, after nearly half a century of "trouping" from town to town and from state to state with leading theatrical productions, have settled down to make their home in Los Angeles.

Mr. Warde will divide his time between The Mission Play and pictures. He is now playing Omar in Ferdinand Earle's screen production of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

Four children and seven grandchildren are monuments to the Warde's extended term of domestic felicity, and scores of telegrams and letters of congratulations have poured in from all parts of the world.

IRENE RICH HOUSES ORPHANS

The farm, which Irene Rich purchased in the San Fernando Valley near Burbank some two years ago, will serve hereafter as a home, agricultural school and health resort for four Los Angeles orphans. A roomy building has been erected, and an athletic field and plunge will constitute part of the equipment. Miss Rich will add to the population of her "farm" gradually, as its development permits.

NEILAN FILM AT BIG CUSTER ANNIVERSARY

Marshall Neilan's "Bob Hampton of Placer," in which Custer's last stand serves as the climax, will be shown at the anniversary of the Custer battle, to be held soon at Hardin, Montana.

The showing of a specially dedicated print of the Neilan film will be one of the features of the evening's entertainment, to be staged outdoors.

HARRY BEAUMONT TO DIRECT VIOLA DANA

Harry Beaumont has signed a contract to head a Metro unit that will film special productions in which Miss Dana will be starred. "The Fourteenth Lover," a story by Alice Duer Miller, will be the first of Miss Dana's productions under the new arrangement.

Miss Edith Kennedy, previously with Lasky's scenario department, will furnish scripts for the Beaumont unit, and is now at work on the first of the new series. Actual filming of the picture will be started immediately on Miss Dana's return to the studio.

KERN ACTIVITIES

"The Unfoldment" is now completely edited and titled. It will be released as a George H. Kern special production in seven reels, after a forthcoming preview.

Two continuities are being made of "The Last Days of Pompeii," Kern's next picture. Harry Ellis Dean is drafting one with Phil De Esco collaborating, while Kern is working on the other with Henry Knollmiller assisting. The most effective version will be shot, after a selection has been made by a vote of the entire organization.

Phil De Esco, technical expert, has recently returned from Catalina with a supply of photographs showing locations which he has selected for the new picture which has been re-titled "The Scarlet Avalanche," owing to the protest of the Italian Film Corporation of Rome, Italy, which has just started a European production on "The Last Days of Pompeii," and that there would be no confliction when negotiating with exhibitors.

Edward S. Curtiss, the noted Indian photographer, whose "Vanishing Race" is considered one of the art classics, is creating an entirely new type of still photo in connection with "The Rubaiyat," which Ferdinand Earle is filming at the Hollywood Studios.

AT LASKY'S

When Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle starts his new picture, under the direction of James Cruze, temporarily called "Via Fast Freight," he will go immediately to Chicago for big scenes in the metropolis. On securing these the company will return to the studio to make the interior scenes.

Betty Compson has begun work on her second star picture under the direction of Penrhyn Stanlaws. This is Clyde Fitch's play, "The Woman in the Case," adapted to the screen by A. S. LeVino.

Tom Forman will direct Thomas Meighan in his new picture, "A Prince There Was," which is scheduled to start production around August 1st.

William deMille has completed the shooting of "After the Show," adapted by Hazel Macdonald and Vianna Knowlton from Rita Weiman's story, "The Stage Door." The picture is now in the cutting room and in the meantime the producer is preparing for his next picture, as yet unnamed.

Immediately on the return of Wallace Reid from New York and the completion by Gloria Swanson of her second star picture, "Under the Lash," the two stars, together with Elliott Dexter, will begin work on a special feature entitled, "Rainbow's End," written by Lorna Moon, which Sam Wood will direct.

FLATHEAD PRODUCTIONS

Art Staton, well known western player, has been signed by Flathead Productions to star in a five-reeler which will be filmed in and around the Flathead and Blackfoot Indian reservations of Montana. P. Dempsey Tabler will direct and Hazel Hart has been selected by T. E. Linden, production manager, to play opposite the star, according to C. O. D. Blanchfield, who will supervise the distribution, the first vehicle being a tale of the Northwest timber lands.

Leonard Wheeler has been engaged by the Italian-American Film Co. as film editor.

Gilbert Warrenton has been transferred by Famous-Players to the West Coast and is photographing Betty Compson at the Lasky studios.

Frank Grandon is approaching the half way mark on his newest production, "Lotus Blossom," which is in work at the Boyle Heights studio.

Steve Roberts, formerly associated with the William S. Hart Productions, is now associated with Lambert Hillyer, in the direction of Ince productions.

PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

Chapter VIII

We practically finished the construction of the first rough draft of our plot in our last installment. As promised, we are now going to take up one or two angles and follow them out with the idea of establishing some possible new developments, which will strengthen our plot, and knit it more closely together.

We have said very little about the past history of any of our principals in this story. For instance, the suggestion comes that they may have borne some relation to one another at some time in the past. Without having to refer to any printed list, our knowledge of the basic dramatic situations tells us that there is one entitled "To love an enemy." This is one of the thirty-seven basic situations, on which all drama and fiction is founded. It is any situation in which a person finds himself to be in love with another who is, through some circumstance, an enemy, or who is the kinsman of an enemy. The more dramatic situations we get into our plot, the stronger it will be.

The above line of reasoning suggests that it might be a good idea to establish the fact that our young prospector and the white girl are traditional enemies, or that she is the kinsman of his enemy. This being the case, we would naturally think of her father as an enemy of the prospector. In what way?

Suppose that her father had formerly been a sheriff, and that the prospector had been accused of a crime of which he was not guilty—railroaded to the penitentiary, and then escaped. This would give him a very good reason to seek the isolation of the mountains, as he would then be a fugitive from justice. The next question is: What was the crime with which he was charged? Of course it would have to be a serious one to result in his being sentenced to prison. Let us assume that the son of the old man, and the brother of the girl, was murdered and that the prospector was falsely accused of it. The heavy in our present little plot might be the fellow who really committed the murder, before fleeing to the mountains for the same reason as our prospector. We could establish the fact that he was told by some cattle men of the location of the other two prospectors, so as to avoid making this part of our story too coincident.

The question here is: How are we going to prevent both the old man and his daughter from recognizing him as the escaped convict, as soon as they see him? We could prevent the girl from recognizing him by simply establishing the fact that she had never met him. The old man would not recognize him, if the prospector wore a growth of beard. This solves that problem. As far as we can see, there would be no objection to the prospector recognizing the old man, at which time, however, he keeps his counsel. Through a conversation with the girl shortly after she regains consciousness, the prospector may have learned that she is the daughter of the man who has persecuted him in the past. Here we have the situation of a love affair between enemies. This strengthens the prospector's motive in concealing the whereabouts of the girl, from her father, some time later. He is not only in love with the girl, but here is a chance for him to secure revenge against the father.

STARKE PATTERSON

whom we accused of being at the Superba last week. We were all wrong. It is this week and "Wolves of the North" is the picture.

Another one of the basic dramatic situations is: "To learn of the dishonor of a loved one." The dramatist, or a photo-dramatist, who knows his business, does not have to refer to a text book to know this. We can introduce this basic situation into our story by having the girl discover, or think she discovers, that the prospector is the man who murdered her brother. She might find a pistol in his cabin, which bears peculiar markings, and which she recognizes as being one which was formerly owned by her brother. This would give her a very good motive for running away from his cabin and going across the river to the cabin of the villain, which you will remember, we had her do a short time before the fight, in which the Indian girl shoots the villain.

Right away, if you are following closely, you will ask: "What was the prospector doing with the brother's gun?" That's easy. You remember we had a big fight between the prospector and the villain, after the villain had thrown the prospector's friend over the cliff, early in the story. Our prospector could have taken the gun away from the heavy at that time.

It does not require much exercise of the imagination to find a way of clearing the prospector in the eyes of the girl. This could be solved by a confession of the villain, after he had been shot by the Indian girl, and the prospector has returned to the other side of the river. Now there is only one thing left to be explained. That is: How was the girl's brother murdered and why was suspicion thrown upon our prospector? This we will leave to work out in our next installment.

In the next issue of Camera!, it being a special scenario edition, we will also devote some extra space to a study of Suspense, Heart Interest, Pathos, and Climax, using the various component parts of the plot which we have just created to illustrate the same.

STORIES WANTED

We want a great big outdoor story for Frank Glendon. Neither a typical western cowpuncher, nor a mining camp story is wanted. We would say that a strong plot in which Mr. Glendon can play the part of a civil or construction engineer, a forest ranger, a secret service man, or a business or professional man, who is sojourning in the wilds. Mr. Glendon does not merely want a story in which the leading man overcomes a number of obstacles in order to win the girl, but he wants a story with a big idea, or a big thought behind it.

We are still looking for a few more two reel North West Mounted Police stories, for Irving Cummings.

We suppose everybody in the game knows that a big story is wanted for Priscilla Dean. Might add, however, that friend Lucien Hubbard is rather hard to please.

C. O. D. Blanchfield asked me to see if I could dig up a few North West woods stories, which could be produced in the state of Washington—mostly exteriors, and which would not cost too much to film. This does not mean mounted police stories, however.

We are looking for a five reel comedy drama featuring a girl of the type of Mary Anderson.

Harry Burns has completed two more Joe Martin comedies for Universal.

Another five-reel western entitled "Big Boy" Williams, is in production at the Selling Studios.

Edward Laemmle has just returned from a trip to Chicago and expects to start on Feature Productions as soon as he finishes his present series of Universal two-reelers.

Dick Rush, co-directing with Howe and Hersholt for B. B. Hampton, leaves at the end of the week for a motor trip through Yosemite prior to starting work on "The Gray Dawn."

Charlie Stallings, senior assistant director at the Goldwyn studios and right hand man to Reginald Barker, has left after a two and one-half years' engagement with that organization.

At the last bi-monthly meeting of the A. D. A., held in their Hollywood Club room, Frederick Palmer, of the Palmer Photoplay Corp., was the feature speaker; his subject being the "History of the Photoplay."

Gordon Hollingshead, assistant to Howard Mitchell, at Fox studio, announces that the company with Shirley Mason has just returned from Catalina, where they have been completing "Chi Chine," her latest production, and will immediately start production of "Queenie."

Dorothy Dane will play the leading feminine role in "When a Man Rides Alone," William Fairbanks' next starring vehicle.

Cleo Ridgely will play an important role in Betty Compson's second star picture, "The Woman in the Case."

Elmer Dewey is playing a half-breed, and another character, with Earle Williams in "The Man from Calgary," re-titled "Bring Him In."

Mr. John Douel is technical director for the Wah Ming production, entitled "Lotus Blossom," now in production at the Boyle Heights studio.

Frankie Lee, child actor, known principally for his work as the boy cripple in "The Miracle Man," is playing a leading role in B. B. Hampton's latest all star production, "Heart's Haven."

WATCH CAMERA!

Jimmy Kelly is cast in the next Harry Sweet-Century comedy.

It is rumored that the second Barthelmess starring picture will be made in California.

James Finlayson, formerly with the Mack Sennett organization, is leaving for New York presently.

Bert Apling has been added to the cast of "Big Boy Brown" in production at the Seeling Studios.

Mary Philbin has been chosen to play an important role in Hoot Gibson's next picture, "The Sheriff of Cinnebar," which Reeves Eason is directing.

Dario L. Faralla, Assistant Treasurer of the Realart Pictures Corporation, is in Los Angeles inspecting exchange and studio methods pertaining to the work of his department.

ment was Edward Massey's "Plots and Playwrights," a comedy in two acts, a prologue and several scenes. It is a screamingly funny burlesque upon the melodrama in which the American public has always found so much to enthrall.

The lines, indeed the entire arrangement of the piece, are the utmost in cleverness, and provide a rare evening of mirth.

Clarence Thomas' direction leaves nothing to be desired and the roles are without exception exceedingly well cast.

Perhaps the most striking interpretations are accomplished by Marjorie O'Neill, who plays Maggie, an East Side boarding-house slavey, Miriam Meredith, who does Bessie Dodge, a colorful, modern vamp, and George Meredith, who is seen first as a genial young commoner and who later enacts an exaggerated "pug." In every instance these three, all displaying by-the-way, rare characterizing ability, are a riot.

The remainder of the cast is also quite ideal. It contains Michael Dark, Ralph McCullough, Charles Meredith, Harriet Wilber, Melba Melsing, K. Arbath, Wyn Ritchie, Helen Yoder, Kenneth Miller, George Gramlich, Paul Vickers and Fred Bauersfeld.

On the same program is presented a harlequinade by Ben Hecht and Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, entitled "The Wonder Hat." It is a beautiful little fantasy with also a good cast.

Michael Dark as Harlequin, Lillian Leighton as Margot and Charles Meredith as Punchinello provide some of the most laughable high lights, while Ann May and Kenneth Miller are both sufficient in the roles of Columbine and Pierrot.

Eli Benneche designed the attractive costumes for "The Wonder Hat."

A word should be said for the unusual work of Marie Bollman, Paul Vickers and William Towne, who competently fill the positions of stage manager, scenic constructor and electrician at the Workshop. Their work progress with refreshing smoothness and their effects are quite wonderful.

We congratulate this industrious company, which has done so much for the unadulterated art of the stage here in Hollywood.

"SOMEONE IN THE HOUSE"

Tally's

Metro's adaptation by Lois Zellner of "Someone in the House," the stage play by Larry Evans, George S. Kaufman and Walter Percival, makes a very absorbing mystery drame of crooks and intrigues. It deals with a society thief known as the "Dancer," whose crimes are committed largely in the name of the luring god of Adventure and Luck. His final reckoning comes, however, before Love, but only after several reels of clever dodging, double crossing and situation mix ing that keep the audience on the edge of its seat with attention glued screenward. The camera work is good.

Edmund Lowe is ideally placed and interprets with fascination the "Dancer," alias Jim Burke, whose rapid manipulation of society's famed jewels forms the basis for a highly entertaining plot. Lowe is coming into prominence with his superior characterizations.

The feminine lead is played by Vola Vale, who is well suited to the simple little role of Molly Brent. It is Molly's diamond necklace which causes all of the row.

Thomas McGuire is the typical plainclothesman as Halloran, whose attempts to capture the "Dancer" are consistently thwarted.

Acting as a sort of assistant in the opposition to the likable young crook, is Walter Hargrave, dignifiedly done by Laurence Grant.

Edward Connelly is responsible for a few excellent scenes in which he plays a small but unscrupulous pawnbroker, in league with the thieving hero.

Howard Crampton, William J. Irving and Edward Jobson are good types to play "English," a crook, Percy Glendenning, a gullible society playwright, and Malone, the village police chief. All of them are well done for comedy.

John E. Ince's direction of "Someone in the House" was very capable.

"THE MAN TAMER"

Superba

Gladys Walton's latest Universal starring release, "The Man Tamer," although quite a feeble little comedy drama by John Barton Oxford, will doubtless interest the fans who follow its star, and that is naturally as much as could be absolutely demanded in a program picture. The story deals with a little lion tamer and her struggles to "tame" the man of her choice. A. P. Younger's scenario is lucid throughout, while the picture's photography is just about standard.

Miss Walton is seen as Kitty Horrigan alias Celeste d'Auvergune, a circus girl whose business is lions. This little actress is getting right along, and has collected a large following. Some day, we hope to see her given real material to work with. We believe that she will soon have earned the right to it.

Roscoe Karns gains an unusual amount of sympathy for the leading masculine part, Bradley P. Caldwell, Jr., considering that the young hero is almost always drunk. Probably a great portion of the audience will be more envious of Bradley, Jr., than

The Entertainment Committee included Dick Cummings, Carl Stockdale, and Ernest Butterworth.

Screen Nest meets the second Monday in July.

NEW ACQUISITIONS FOR CHESTER COMEDIES

Three educated horses have been added to the Chester Comedies stock company, and hereafter, with other animals, will work actively in support of the star, Snooky, the "Humanzee."

Harley Chambers is cast in the new Harry Carey picture, "Partners."

Vola Vale has been offered a special feature engagement, it is stated.

Virginia Valli is finishing her third picture as leading woman with Bert Lytell.

Willard Lee Hall is playing the heavy in the newest Charles Ray picture, now in production.

Included in the "Molly O" cast and playing the role of a snobbish society woman is Gloria Davenport.

Harvey O'Higgins will leave July 2d for New York to attend rehearsals of his dramatization of "Main Street," the novel by Sinclair Lewis.

Theresa Maxwell Conover and Nita Naldi have been added to the cast of the new Constance Talmadge-Emerson-Loos picture, "Good for Nothing."

Ruth Renick has been vacationing since completing a stellar role in "The Golden Snare," a David Hartford production for First National.

Frank Lalor will enact a principal role in the forthcoming Eastern-made Constance Talmadge picture, entitled "Good for Nothing."

Winthrop Kelly, former associate director with Maurice Tourneur, is production manager for Ferdinand Earle's "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

Louise Lovely and Roy Stewart are filming a series of Canadian Northwest Mounted Police stories in San Francisco, sponsored by Harry Revier.

John M. Stahl has chosen Grace Darmond to interpret one of the leading roles in his second all-star production for Associated First National.

Otto F. Hoffman, remembered for his various character parts with Charles Ray, is playing Hen Jones in Ray's newest production, "Two Minutes to Go."

"Pal," Harry Lucenay's intellectual bull dog, who has appeared in many recent pictures, will again be seen in "Queenie," Shirley Mason's forthcoming production.

Chester Comedy No. 2, of the new series to be distributed by Federated Film Exchange of America, will introduce the three equines in support of Snooky.

"Beau Revel," the first of a series of Thomas H. Ince-Louis Joseph Vance picture productions, will be presented at the Grauman Million Dollar theatre during the week of Monday, July 4th, in conjunction with the appearance of the world famous Columbia Park Boys Band.

Jean Havez, recently added to Harold Lloyd's scenario staff, wrote the book and some of the music and lyrics for "Sun-Kist," which is having a long run in New York. The production first showed in Sacramento and San Francisco.

ROBT. ANDERSON IN "THE RUBAIYAT"

Robert Anderson, who will be remembered for his "Monsieur Cuckoo" in "Hearts of the World" and for his characterization in "The Heart of Humanity," has been cast for an important part in Ferdinand Earle's production of "The Rubaiyat."

NATIONAL PUBLICITY

Here is a letter to CAMERA! from a publicity expert who has been serving in all branches of the exploitation game for the last five years. We value his opinion because his long and varied experience puts him in a position to judge accurately; incidentally he has just completed the publicity campaigns of Benjamin B. Hampton's anti-censorship fight:

Dear Editor:

Congratulations on your new move to widen the scope of Camera! to the national field. We have regarded Camera! as our own exclusive organ, with no little pride and affection. But my correspondence with motion picture editors shows me that they will welcome its news as we welcome it, and through them its articles will secure not only local, but national publication.

This means much to producers, but it means far more to players. Actors and actresses, though dependent upon publicity for success against the great competition they face, and realizing this fact more or less strongly, are nevertheless surprisingly ignorant of the power of national publicity. They think that only local publicity is of value in getting them positions and winning them lasting fame.

Just a glance at the facts will dispel this illusion. Producers take the services of national clipping bureaus, which send them marked clippings on every article published that bears the name of their companies, their pictures, or the actors and actresses they employ. This is necessary for three reasons: First, to check the activities of their press departments; second, to follow the bookings of their pictures; third, and most important, to check the public taste; to see what players, what authors, what directors and what picture titles are the best box office attractions.

Suppose an actress has a publicity man who sends out items about her to the national field. The item mentions a producer or so. Several producers have her name on their clipping bureau lists. The result is that the item, appearing in New York, in Boston, in Detroit, in Chicago—in dozens of large cities—returns to half a doben producers, clipped and marked. It is pasted in scrapbook files for reference, and noted from time to time. A producer sees that this actress is becoming popular in these towns, both with the public and with the motion picture editors. Popularity with a dramatic editor may color the entire review of the picture in which she appeared! Consequently, he jots down her name for his next cast.

This is what your plan for Camera! will do in addition to its undoubted local value, if the players realize how greatly Camera's! new move will benefit them, and you will have their unqualified endorsement, as you have mine.

Sincerely,
JAY BRIEN CHAPMAN.

Adrien Gauthier is going to spend the summer months at Venice, California.

The Morosco company, which is producing "Slippy McGee," plan to be in Natchez, Miss., for another month or six weeks.

Marie Mosquini, playing opposite Harry "Snub" Pollard in his series of comedies, will spend the Fourth at Keene's Camp, near Riverside.

disapproving, at that. In any event, Karns certainly makes him appear to be enjoying himself, which is admittedly a desirable state these days. Of course, the "wild man" must be and is "tamed," even at the expense of a circus lady's heart.

William Welsh is an excellent type to play Hayden Delmar, the super-heavy, owner of Delmar's great shows, whose preference is quite noticeably for Kitty.

C. Norman Hammond is a good touch as Caldwell, Sr., and Rex de Rosselli plays Jim Harrigan, Kitty's father.

C. B. Murphy and Parker J. McConnell end the list of players in this Harry B. Harris directed production.

Retaliation?

the American film has always been, in Europe, a much more cheaply produced article than that made at home. If it is legitimate for America to protect herself against the accidental advantage which the Europeans get from the state of the exchange, it is equally legitimate for Europe to protect herself from American films which can be "dumped" here because the cost of production has already been recovered at home.

"Our own attitude in this matter is that International Free Trade in films is the ideal, and in any consideration of the problem it should not be forgotten that the first interest to be considered is not that of the producer but of the public. It is even more important that British theatres should have a full selection of the best films made everywhere than that we should have a thriving native production, for British production in itself depends in the last resort on a satisfied and increasing public for pictures—a public which cannot be obtained without variety. But the terms of international competition should be equal; if America weights the scales in favor of her own producers she must expect retaliation—and we hope she gets it."

H. La Verne Swisher is on a two-months' vacation.

Jim Habif has been engaged to assist Alexander Bodo and Tom Regan in their next production for the Italian-American Film Co.

Max Graf, manager for the Hobart Bosworth independent productions, is in San Francisco attending a conference in connection with the Bosworth productions.

Dick Sherer is with Francis Grandon, producing Chinese pictures with a Chinese cast at the old Boyle Heights studio. Their first production will be "Wah Ming."

Melbourne Culver and Ross Fisher are cameramen for The Wah Ming Motion Picture Company making Lotus Blossom, a Leong But Jung production, at the Boyle Heights studio.

E. J. Zerr, Assistant to Henry Otto, is back in Los Angeles after a tour of the South Sea Islands in company with his director, where they made scenes for a new production from the pen of Henry Otto, to be produced in the near future.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle has just returned from San Francisco, where he attended the Boosters' Ball, and will start production on his next comedy drama, "Fast Freight," around July 11th.

The Scenarists Again!

Somewhat over a year ago, as our more veteran readers will recall, Camera! opened a discussion editorially upon the relative importance to a picture's success of the author, director and star; and for some weeks thereafter the various branches of the industry took up their sides and presented their arguments in space which this paper donated for that purpose.

We were delighted at that time to discover from the articles presented that the scenarist was at last awakening to the magnitude of his scope and the proportions of his own accomplishments, an appreciation which had not been allowed him in the old days of self important directors and stars. More or less secretly we had been on his side all along, and nothing could have pleased us as did such a declaration of the esteem in which he held his position in our industry, for it marked his progression out of that false stage of modesty in which he had considered it unethical to publicize his own achievements and the value, financial and artistic, which they placed upon him.

In the comparatively short space since the occurrence of the incident just mentioned, things have plunged ahead with almost upsetting rapidity for the average screen writer of several years' standing. First he witnessed the sensational advent of the novelist and short story expert in his heretofore undisputed territory, and while still plodding on, he came to recognize the fact that the offerings of these, his threatening rivals, met with only mediocre success in the picture theatre. Finally, one by one, he saw his more scintillating contemporaries pack up and return to other fields in which their experience was greater and brought more satisfaction. Then he reclaimed his personally constructed art and kept quietly on.

Today, the men and women who headed the studio scenario departments and free lancers of several years back, once more face a broad, unimpeded highway up the hill to picture fortune. This time, however, their traveling will be made easier by the expressed admiration of their fellow workers and their public.

The fascination surrounding outside celebrities has not stood the marring of time as has the worth of these workers who have always exerted their first efforts for their profession. It is remarkable how quickly self-confidence brings the other fellow's respect. For the photoplaywright it has gained quickly a general esteem which could not be stood against by usurpers of his line. A new day for the scenarist has arrived, and with it a new promise for the motion picture industry.—F. R.

America's Song Unsung

BY TED LE BERTHON
Editor of The Photodramatist

According to statistics recently compiled by an individual who was given access to the files of the scenario departments at leading studios, it was found that slightly over ten thousand persons have submitted scenarios to these particular studios in the past three years. As these studios include almost all the larger producing organizations, and many of the smaller ones, it is doubtful if over twelve thousand individuals have submitted photoplays during this period. In other words, about one person in every eight thousand has attempted to write for the screen, outside of those actually employed at the studios.

Of course, one organization received thirteen thousand scenarios during the year 1920, but these consisted of many stories which had been sent to several studios; and all the way from two to two dozen screen stories, in many instances, were submitted during the year by some one person.

A recent national scenario contest, conducted by a leading film producer through a newspaper syndicate which serves four hundred representative newspapers in as many cities in the United States, brought forth about ten thousand photodramas, many from people who had never before essayed screen writing.

When these facts are digested and then pondered over, a great light will dawn on any thinking individual. There are not nearly as many people submitting scenarios to the studios as there are submitting short stories, novelettes, essays, poems and other forms of literature to the magazines! And, judging from the scenarios received, those believing they could write for the screen must have ranked intellectually far below those who were attempting to break into the magazines. To get down to approximate facts, there are probably over one hundred thousand people in the United States signing their names to variegated literary matter in newspapers, magazines and books.

Is it any wonder that the film magnates have turned to published books, magazine stories, and plays for their screen story material? They have had a far bigger field to select from.

Now, are the motion picture producers thoroughly satisfied with the artistic or financial results of the past several years? No, decidedly not. But the great public maw had to be fed three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, and stories suitable for screening had to be secured from some source.

Film Capital Production Notes

GOLDWYN ACQUIRES NEW STORIES

The following stories have been recently acquired by the Goldwyn studios for early production: "Syndafloden" (Sin Flood), the Swedish play by Henning Berger; "The Wall Flower," an original story by Rupert Hughes; "Laura's Daydream" (formerly called "The Woman Who Hated Politics"), by Alice Duer Miller; "Nobody's Man," a novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim; "Wild Apples," a novel by Cynthia Stockley; and "His Back to the Wall," a published story by John Frederick.

RELEASE TITLES GIVEN

Release titles which will supplant working titles on Universal productions scheduled for early showing, are as follows:

"The Mascotte of the Three Stars," featuring Hoot Gibson, will be called "Action."

"Christine of the Young Heart," Gladys Walton's picture, will be exhibited as "High Heels."

"The Harbor Road" will go to the screen as "Danger Ahead," and "A Daughter of the Law" is the title finally decided upon for "The Black Cap," a forthcoming Carmel Myers production."

FOR LOCATION SCENES IN WEST VIRGINIA

Richard Barthelmess, who is working in New York on the photodramatization of Joseph Hergesheimer's story, "Tol'ble David," for Associated First National release, plans a trip in the West Virginia mountains to the approximate location where the scenes of Mr. Hergesheimer's story are laid.

Mr. Barthelmess will be accompanied by his wife, Mary Hay, his director, Henry King, and supporting company.

SCHERTZINGER TO DIRECT JACKIE COOGAN

Arrangements have been consummated between Jack Coogan and Victor Schertzinger, whereby Mr. Schertzinger will direct the future Jackie Coogan productions.

Mr. Schertzinger is now busily engaged with Mr. Coogan in compiling the script for Jackie's initial story, and early production is predicted.

SOUTH SEA STORY FOR KATHERINE MACDONALD

Upon the completion of the cutting and editing of "Peachie," which she recently finished at the Ambassador Pictures Studio, Katherine MacDonald will begin production of "The Infidel," a story of the South Sea Islands, by Charles Loge, which has been selected for her by General Manager B. P. Fineman.

FOURTH SANTSCHI PICTURE

Bob Bradbury has just finished writing the fourth Santschi picture in the series which he is directing for Cyrus J. Williams. It is titled "Lorraine of the Cumberlands," and Ruth Stonehouse will play the leading feminine role.

"REGENERATION ISLE" RELEASED IN AUGUST

Joseph M. Schenck announces, through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., that Norma Talmadge's "Regeneration Isle" will be released as a First National Special picture early in August.

GEORGE ARLISS PORTRAYS DISRAELI ON SCREEN

"Disraeli" is now being picturized with George Arliss in the title role, in which he starred on the stage. Mrs. Arliss is playing Lady Beaconsfield.

The smooth-dealing J. Rufus Wallingford is about to make his screen bow to the public. Frank Borzage directed the film of his get-rich-quick adventures for Cosmopolitan, and it is scheduled for fall release.

"THE WHITE RIDER" SHIPPED EAST

Denver Dixon has shipped his five-reel western drama, "The White Rider," to New York. It has an all-star cast and was written and directed by Mr. Dixon, and photographed by Gordon MacLean.

POLLARD COMEDY IN PRODUCTION

Harry "Snub" Pollard and his leading lady, Marie Mosquini, have started on a new comedy for Pathe release.

GROVER JONES PRODUCTIONS

Grover Jones, magazine author and comedy director, will launch a new producing organization soon to be known as the Grover Jones Productions. The first picture which he will direct will be a five-part original story entitled "Silent Jim," with an all-artist cast headed by Ora Carew.

AT UNIVERSAL

Marie Prevost has finished her first starring vehicle for Universal. The story is called "The Butterfly" and was directed by King Baggot from the story by Percival Wilder.

Priscilla Dean and eighteen members of her producing unit are en route to British Columbia, where the concluding scenes for "Conflict," her forthcoming production, will be filmed under the direction of Stuart Paton. The unit will be camped in the Bull River district for several weeks.

Eddie Polo is at work on the opening episodes of his forthcoming serial. The chaptered story is "The Secret Four," a narrative by Anthony W. Coldewey, who wrote several of the star's recent serial successes. Albert Russell is directing.

Tod Browning is cutting "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story which he filmed as a super-feature.

Erich von Stroheim is doing the editorial work on "Foolish Wives." It is estimated that ten weeks will be devoted to the cutting of the picture.

AT REALART

Wanda Hawley will start this week on "The Love Charm," an original story by Harvey O'Higgins, heretofore adapted to the screen by Percy Heath.

May McAvoy starts within a few days on "The Happy Ending," an original story by Hector Turnbull. The direction will be handled by Frank O'Connor.

Constance Binney, whose productions have been made in New York, will shortly arrive to join the colony of happy "filmers" in California. No announcement has yet been made of Miss Binney's first story.

GOLDWYN TO ANNOUNCE PLANS

Samuel Goldwyn, President of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, arrived from New York recently.

While in California Mr. Goldwyn will announce the sales and distribution plans for the fifth Goldwyn year. He will make public a new selling arrangement by which a limited number of franchises will be granted to exhibitors for the entire output of the company.

This will be Mr. Goldwyn's first visit to the local film colony since his return from abroad, where he made a thorough study of production in England, Italy, Germany and France. The company has announced for fall release two Italian spectacles, but it is stated positively that Goldwyn does not intend to import any more German productions.

"THE SKY RANGER" IN EPISODE TWELVE

"The Whirling Menace" is the title of episode twelve of the new Pathe serial, "The Sky Ranger," in which June Caprice co-stars with George B. Seitz. The episode has been scheduled for release by Pathe July 17th.

HAROLD LLOYD RE-ISSUES

An announcement recently made by Pathe Exchange, Inc., is to the effect that re-issues of Harold Lloyd one-reel comedies are to be instituted.

"Bliss," the first of the Lloyd one-reelers, has been scheduled for release July 17th. Bebe Daniels plays opposite the spectacled comedian, and "Snub" Pollard, featured in Hal Roach comedies, is also in his support.

Current Reviews

"BEAU REVEL"

Grauman's

This week we have another example of the very entertaining novel gone wrong upon the screen. It is Louis Joseph Vance's "Beau Revel," which Thomas Ince presents on the Paramount program. The story has been given an elaborate feature production and an all artist cast which it is unable to justify, since it has only mediocre picture value, and the material it contains could be easily set forth in three reels. Our authors are prone to forget that the pages which they devote to description and personal philosophizing are necessarily lost to the scenario in so far as space-filling is concerned, for they are instantaneously revealed to the audience when the character or set in question comes into view. We are fast learning that the adaptation is not, as we had thought, the thing.

Technically the picture cannot be adversely criticised. Its direction by John Griffith Wray, and the photographic effects, are both highly artistic. Luxurious sets form a pleasing background for the cast which is in every instance excellent.

Lewis Stone has not lately been more perfectly established than he is in the name role of this production. There is something both sympathetic and picturesque about this more than middle-aged dandy who "wouldn't marry or grow old." His final sequence in which he faces grim reality at last and then a sensational death by his own hand is by far the most vivid and fascinating work in the piece. Rarely are we privileged to witness as touchingly handled a death scene as is experienced by the disillusioned "Beau," who, even in tragedy retains the mannerisms of his old self. Stone balances his characterization beautifully.

Betty Lee, the leading feminine part, is filled by Florence Vidor, whose interpretations of the modern woman are always interesting. We have seen her quite lately in stronger positions, however, than that which she occupies as the little dancer who is loved by both a boy and his father. It might also be considered that Miss Vidor is a bit mature in her role, but that is a minor point. As always, her work carries conviction.

"Beau's" honest young son, Dick Revel, is unusually well done by Lloyd Hughes, who accomplishes some unadulterated acting to good advantage. His clean cut youth contrasts effectively with Stone's part.

Kathleen Kirkham in the semi-unsympathetic portrayal of Mrs. Lathon, the neglected wife, who capitulates to "Beau's" studied charms, brings forward her well learned technique and graces her sets with ease. Miss Kirkham is truly individualized in a class by herself.

Again and again we are surprised by the angles William Conklin gets into his drama. As Lathon he is at once a worthless drunkard and a pitiful, misunderstanding little lad. In a very few scenes he offers some invaluable pathetic touches.

Lydia Titus in a comedy aunt, with Richard Ryan, William Musgrave and Harlan Tucker, completes the cast.

For all its excellent moments "Beau Revel" will prove but an average box office attraction.

"THE SKY PILOT"

Kinema

It certainly is wonderful what an all sufficient, well balanced cast and a good scenario, competently handled by the direction, can do to a story on the order of Ralph O'Connor's "The Sky Pilot," in the way of making it live, seemingly, for the first time. We must admit to being happily surprised at the understanding manner in which King Vidor has treated this much-read subject and delighted by certain vivid little touches which he has added to the original. To us, this story is much improved on the screen.

PAULINE CURLEY

Beautiful snow-blanketed landscapes, effectively photographed, add their bit of perfection to the work of an ideal cast, making "The Sky Pilot" altogether one of the most worth-while pieces of its type to have been recently filmed. Heading the cast in the title role is seen John Bowers, whose last two years of juveniling for Goldwyn have not been overlooked. This, however, is his role, we might say his first role, in so far as its perfect suitability to himself is concerned. The sympathetic, dauntless preacher who cowboys that he may win the admiration and attention of his flock, is an excellent opportunity for Bowers' appealing type. His sincere interpretation lacks nothing to convince and his transitions are remarkable, thanks to both the actor's art and the footage allowed him to put them over.

Bill Hendricks, the well-loved "cow-punchin'" friend of the Pilot, is excellently filled by David Butler, who never for one moment misses in comparison with the other role. The two characterizations are unusually equal in their ability to hold sympathy and in their technical rendition Butler has never been better placed or fitted easier into a part.

Colleen Moore must be lauded for the consistent characterizing which she accomplishes on her own account in the role of Gwen, the rebellious little fire-eater, who is injured that she may be saved, and cured that she may herself save another. This little actress has won her spurs by hard and faithful work. She deserves all of the big chances that she may ever receive. It might be added that the closeups of Miss Moore in this picture are the most pleasing that we have seen of her. They are a credit to the cinematographer who made them.

A clever part is added to the cast by Harry Todd, who does Gwen's father, The Old Timer. Todd always has something of value to offer.

Donald MacDonald plays in his habitual good form, The Duke, an aristocratic cattle thief, while James Corrigan and Kathleen Kirkham in unimportant roles complete the cast.

"The Sky Pilot" is a Cathrine Curtis production.

"COLD STEEL"

California

Again we implore someone to get busy and conscientiously fill up the atrocious gaps which the past year's underproduction has rent in the fabric of our picture entertainment, for the patches with which the powers that be have attempted to mend them are of such a miserable texture and coloring that they take most of the pleasure from the whole.

Robertson-Cole's current local release is "Cold Steel," an S. J. Meyberg presentation starring J. P. McGowan. Although we never heard of the original, this picture is Monte Katterjohn's version of a story by George Shedd. Its classification is simple to accomplish, for it belongs body and soul to that type of impossible, hysterical melodrama which has been known to fascinate so many twelve-year-old males with its breath-taking suspense. As might be expected, the dirty gang of grimacing murderers, the stalwart, cool-eyed hero, the contradictory ingenue, automobile chases and burning powder can fuses mixed well with western scenery, and saloons run the show as of old. The situations are strangely reminiscent of the serial, of which we are not overfond personally, but every man to his taste. "Cold Steel" is a psychologically clever offering for some Main Street houses, but it should have been kept far below Eighth Street.

The direction by Sherwood McDonald is exceptionally poor and savors jerkily of days long gone by. The camera work is one good item in the picture, as indeed it should be with three A. S. C. boys on the job.

McGowan is really an unusual type for dauntless roles and were his work better timed it would mean considerable. He rushes about a bit too wildly to please the modern picture-goer, however, as "Cold Steel," a daring contractor in this photoplay.

Some clever work is done by Kathleen Clifford in the feminine lead opposite him, although the action of her little ingenue is far from natural.

Nigel de Brulier must be credited with some noticeably good work as Martineze.

For the cast further there is little to say.

The ridiculous heavy work is divided between Stanhope Wheatcroft, Arthur Millette, Charles Insley, Milt Brown and George Clair. It is difficult to differentiate between the actors and director as to where the blame for their almost funny exaggerations should be dumped. Certainly the business allotted them is fearful.

Elinor Fair in a sob sister part, J. D. Ormand, and Andy Waldron end the cast.

Here's hoping that the merciful Heavens lead us hereafter far from such reviews. They are hard on the nerves.

"THE LYING TRUTH"

Preview

Marion Fairfax's first independently written and produced photoplay, "The Lying Truth," is a small-town drama with quite an entailed plot illustrating a rather simple theme concerning the fallibility of circumstantial evidence.

Hal Wilson has been added to the cast of Eddie Polo's new serial, "The Secret Four," which Albert Russell is directing.

Ruth Renick will be seen as Celia in "The Golden Snare," from the story by James Oliver Curwood.

Noah Young, Vera White and Sam Brooks will have principal supporting roles in the next "Snub" Pollard comedy, which Charles Parrott will direct at the Roach Studios.

The juvenile roles of Tom Santschi's outdoors pictures will hereafter be filled by Earl Hughes, brother of Lloyd Hughes, playing in Thomas Ince pictures.

Georgie Stone will be seen as Dannie boy in "Desperate Trails," featuring Harry Carey, which will open at the Superba Sunday, July 10th.

W. W. Rarity, general manager of Hamilton-White Comedies, Inc., has engaged J. T. Jenkins to serve as cameraman for the newest Mermaid comedy which Jack White is directing.

Marion DeBeck, who appeared in several New York stage productions prior to entering pictures, has the leading feminine role in "One a Minute," the current Douglas MacLean release.

Rex Roselli, C. B. Murphy and William Welsh are cast in "The Ark Angel," the new Gladys Walton picture, now in production at the "U."

Otto Matieson has been given a part in the Guy Bates Post initial starring vehicle, "Omar, the Tentmaker," which Richard Walton Tully is producing for First National release.

Virginia Faure, who played the leading role in "Without Benefit of Clergy," is chosen for the cast of "Omar the Tentmaker," which James Young will direct.

The Screen Writers' Page

Every active company was recently consulted by Camera! concerning its scenario needs for these columns. As is generally known, the majority of producers have their stories handled mostly by the departments which they maintain for this purpose; consequently they are not included here. Others from whom replies have not been forthcoming we can but take to be disinterested. The ones mentioned below are red hot tips. We feel that they will do much to assist the free lance screen writer.

SCENARIO MARKET

David Butler Productions, Brunton Studios, 5341 Melrose Ave., Los Angeles, is the market for either original or published stories submitted in synopsis form for star who plays small town or country roles. Scripts will be returned as soon as read.

Pickups By the Staff

KIDDIES' MATINEES START IN L. A.

That Los Angeles will have facilities to provide entertainment for boys and girls during the summer vacation months is now definitely decided. Alice S. Hellman, social worker of Los Angeles, has interested Sol Lesser, vice-president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., to the extent that he will donate the Alhambra theatre for a series of special children's Saturday morning matinees.

The initial performance of this kind will commence Saturday, July 9th, at 9:30 a. m. All children and parents are urged to attend this first show and obtain a vision of the nature of entertainment offered.

Mrs. Hellman has selected a committee to preview and pass on all film subjects prior to their being shown at the special performance. This committee, headed by Mrs. Hellman, includes Mrs. Susan Dorsey, head of the Los Angeles Board of Education, Mrs. Charles Toll of the Ebell Club, Mrs. Noble of the Parent and Teacher's Association, and others. The recognized name of this new organization will be known as The Children's Security Film Association.

The first of the program will include Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," a special children's film entitled "Little Bo-Peep and Her Friends," colored cartoon slides, an organ recital of kiddy songs, and Miss Louise Sullivan, soprano, in a song recital. A professional story teller will be another feature of the entertainment. Admission prices are 25c for adults and 15c for children. Mr. Lesser has arranged for the proceeds of the shows to be given to Mrs. Hellman for children's charity purposes exclusively.

NEW PUBLICITY SERVICE

Kirk Watkins and George Warner have formed a partnership for the purpose of conducting a general advertising agency and publicity office with headquarters in Los Angeles and agency affiliations in London, Paris, New York and Chicago.

Mr. Watkins is a practical newspaper and magazine man of over thirty years' experience. He was at one time connected with the Chicago Herald and later with the Chas. H. Fuller Advertising Agency of Chicago. He has been identified with magazine and publicity work in Los Angeles lately and during the war was one of the civilian employees of the United States government contractors at Camp Kearney.

George Warner recently arrived in Los Angeles from New York, where he was identified with the advertising business, and some years ago was associated with Mr. Watkins in the business in the East.

EFFICIENCY CONTEST WINNERS HERE

Irving Stolzer and Mrs. Charlotte Marcus, who won the recent efficiency contest at the Universal Film laboratory at Fort Lee, N. J., have arrived in Los Angeles, Calif.

Stolzer has been in the Universal service for fourteen years, while Mrs. Marcus has been with the firm for a decade. The visitors are being entertained at Universal City and at the Ambassador Hotel.

FINISHED NEILAN PICTURE A NOVELTY

The new Neilan photoplay, "Bits of Life," recently finished, offers four complete episodes, the four scenarios being adaptations of feature magazine novels by well known writers, each plot having significance to the general theme of the story.

The initial episode is taken from "The Bad Samaritan," a short dramatic story which appeared in "Popular Magazine," by Thomas McMorrow. The second story is a picturization of Walter Trumbull's tale which appeared in "Smart Set," entitled "The Man Who Heard Everything." The third episode is an adaptation of Hugh Wiley's popular story, "Hop," which originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. As the closing episode Mr. Neilan offers his own story, "Under Ether."

U. S. CAVALRY IN "PARDNERS"

Harry Schenck, production manager at Universal City, is on his way to the presidio at Monterey, Calif., where he will complete arrangements to take two troops of regular cavalry to the Mojave desert for Harry Carey's forthcoming feature, "Pardners." Arrangements for the troops have been made by Schenck with Major-General Muir, commanding general of the Ninth Corps Area and more directly through Col. John M. Jenkins, commanding at Monterey. The troops will be in action about July 28th, under the direction of Robert Thornby.

STAGE PLAY BEING ADAPTED TO SCREEN

J. G. Hawks, head of the Goldwyn scenario department, is taking a vacation at Big Bear Lake. While he is vacationing, Mr. Hawks will write the continuity for "Snydafloden," (Sin Flood), Henning Berger's stage play, which will be produced by Goldwyn soon.

Production Notes

MORRIS R. SCHLANK PRODUCTIONS

The Broadway Comedies, a series of two-reel situation comedies featuring Eddie Barry, from stories by Frederick Bennett, started shooting July 2nd. Ward Hayes is directing and Frank Kingsley assisting. Another comedy company is expected to begin work about July 8th.

"The Bluffer," by Frederick Bennett, will be produced late in the summer, and the "Fall of Rome," another production of seven reels, is also under preparation.

"Innocents Abroad" will be photographed in Europe by Ernest Schoedsack, recently of the Sennett staff and lately the official photographer of the Peace Conference. His first pictures, of a novel travelogue order, will be made in Andorra, the smallest kingdom in the world. Later, in Norway and Finland and the remote parts of the Ural Mountains, other unique scenes will be filmed.

BARKER'S "OLD NEST" OPENS RUN AT ASTOR

Reginald Barker's "The Old Nest," opened at the Astor Theatre recently for a New York pre-release run. It succeeds "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." "The Old Nest" will be released to exhibitors in September as a ten-reel special.

Mr. Barker is at present considering plans submitted by individuals and corporations who want to finance and distribute his independent productions. A definite affiliating is expected in a few days. Meanwhile he is getting "The Poverty of Riches" down to footage. He has completed preliminary cutting of this final Goldwyn opus.

HACKATHORNE SUPPORTS WALTON

George Hackathorne will be seen as the crippled brother of Gladys Walton in her latest picture, "Christine of the Young Heart." Mr. Hackathorne recently portrayed the Hunchback in Allan Dwan's "The Sin of Martha Queed," to be released shortly.

ELMER RICE WRITING TITLES

Elmer Rice, the latest addition to the Realart writing staff, who titled "White and Unmarried," has but recently finished titling "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," Mary Miles Minter's forthcoming picture.

HAYAKAWA IN NEW YORK

Sessue Hayakawa arrived in New York recently to spend a two weeks' vacation, accompanied by Mrs. Hayakawa. While in New York the Japanese star will confer with R. S. Cole, president of the R-C Pictures Corporation which distributes his pictures.

Jack White has started production on the third of the Hamilton-White series of Mermaid comedies, the title of which has not yet been announced.

Bill Dagwell is back on his old job assisting David Smith in the direction of the latter's special production for the Vitagraph.

STARS SETTLE TO WORK

Having completed extended trans-continental "personal appearance" tours both Clara Kimball Young and Johnny Jones are once again before the camera.

HARRY NORTHRUP

Playing the heavy in Vitagraph's special production "Flower of the North."

SENNETT STUDIO QUIET

For the first time in his career as a producer, Mack Sennett is closing his studio for two months this summer. He has a number of surplus films and by ceasing production for a while is thus equalizing the market.

NEW ZEALAND PARLIAMENT MEMBER SEES PICTURES MAKING

Thomas M. Wilford, leader of the Liberal Party in the New Zealand Parliament, is in Los Angeles for a three months' vacation, and was a recent guest at Universal City of Irving G. Thalberg, general manager.

Pathe will presently release "The Money Maniac," Leonce Perret's latest cinema creation.

Alexander Bodo has recently been in San Francisco where he has been preparing for the production of his feature drama for the Italian American Film Co.

The third Blue Ribbon Comedy, "The Noodle Agent," has just been finished by Director Hagenah, at the Chester Studios, from the story by Frederick Bennett. It is probable that the company will hereafter make two-reelers.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

REGGIE MORRIS

Reggie Morris, of The Reggie Morris Productions, Inc., was born in Newark, N. J., and early became interested in all things theatrical. He appeared upon the boards with George M. Cohan in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," and then he entered the films, where he spent three years with D. W. Griffith, and later four years with Mack Sennett, during which time he produced comedies and made some of today's foremost comedians. There followed a series of comiclassics directed by him for Special Pictures Corporation, including "Up in Betty's Bedroom" and "Look Pleasant."

Now Morris heads this new company bearing his name, which has been organized upon a co-operative plan. The product, two-reel comedies which feature Neely Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, Jack Duffy, Margaret Cullington, and Joe Moore, will be released through the Arrow Film Corporation.

Morris is now producing at the old Special Pictures Studio, where he is associated with Frank Marshall, who is general manager of the company.

PATENTS GRANTED ON INVENTION

At last a combination motion picture camera and projection machine, capable of utilizing standard film, has been accomplished. It is called The Standard Combination Camera and Projection Machine and patents have been granted on it to A. Edward Rosenberg, formerly of Universal, Lester Reider and Nate Salmon.

The new invention weighs only six and a half pounds. It will be sold for about $150.00.

REHEARSALS OF "KINDRED OF THE DUST"

"Kindred of the Dust," the Peter B. Kyne story, has been put into continuity form by R. A. Walsh and Jack O'Brien. The Walsh company has been assembled on Catalina Island for rehearsals.

NEW BESSIE LOVE COMPANY

A company is being organized to take Bessie Love to the South Sea Islands to make one production. Under the terms offered, Miss Love will be away from this country six months.

Melbourne MacDowell has returned from San Francisco where he has been vacationing.

Hope Hampton is busy at present finishing "Star Dust," at Fort Lee, N. J., for future Associated First National release.

"We'll Get You Yet," is the title that has been given the seventh of the Federated Hallroom Boys Comedies, featuring Sid Smith, which Harry Cohn, the producer, has just forwarded to the New York offices of Hallroom Boys Comedies, Inc., for final editing and titling. This comedy will follow "We Should Worry," on the release schedule.

The story is fully worth the picturization and its value may be said to have been greatly increased by the several better than ordinary performances given by the players who interpret it. Undoubtedly a little different arrangement or cutting of the later scenes might improve the somewhat weak and dragged-out descendant action after the culmination of the plot, and several unnecessary subtitles also should and probably will be eliminated before the picture's final release. These with a rearrangement of the murder mystery should bring satisfaction.

The photography, although varying, presents in places some super-artistic scenic shots.

The direction by Miss Fairfax is very commendable considering that this is her first production. Quite naturally, there are inferior places to overlook, but let it be stated here that she has set a higher standard of consistently handled entertainment for our women producers than they have been maintaining of late.

Pat O'Malley's work improves steadily. He makes both a lovable and admirable juvenile of young O'Hara, a semi-orphan, who has been raised by Claibourne, a publisher, and willed his foster-father's worldly goods and responsibilities only to be beset with evidence implicating him in the murder of his patron's son. His extrication from the horrible net which circumstance weaves about him, provides some real opportunities which O'Malley manages to good advantage.

Marjorie Daw plays the daughter of the "most important man in town," or one Miss de Muidde, a little uncertainly from the audience's viewpoint. Nevertheless, she is almost satisfactory in the uncomplicated part, which is only included to aid the romantic interest.

Charles Hill Mailes and Claire McDowell present representative high grade work in their respective roles of Claibourne, the previously mentioned publisher of the village Gazette, and his wife. Some of Miss McDowell's anguished mother sequences are particularly effective.

The part of their own son, Claibourne, Jr., is stiltedly done by George Dromgold, who misses in it a rare chance for characterization, as the worthless, dissipated lad who commits suicide. It is a pity that such a suitable type for this character role should not have been able to carry conviction.

Tully Marshall is very clever as the Gazette's editor and the Claibourne's standby. He gives us some necessary comedy and not a little sympathy.

Noah Beery pompously struts about, as is his habit, in the part of the shoddily superior de Muidde, while Wade Boteler accomplishes one of the most artistic pieces of work in the picture. He is O'Hara, Sr., both as a young father and as the parent of a grown son whose education he has made possible by a twenty-years' absence. Boteler's versatility is being recognized as his unusual interpretations follow each other.

Frank Stockdale and Robert Badger each do minor parts remarkably well.

"The Lying Truth" is an Eagle production.

On recovering from a recent appendicitis attack, Julian Eltinge will start his vaudeville tour.

Leo Willis is playing a sea captain in the Ruth Roland serial, "White Eagle," now under production at the Hal E. Roach Studios.

PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

Chapter IX

In our last chapter we only left one question to be answered, as far as we can see, now. That was the question of how the girl's brother was murdered, and why suspicion was thrown upon our prospector. There are a thousand ways in which this could be done.

We have previously decided that the girl's father was a sheriff and that he was an enemy of our prospector. This suggests a feud such as commonly exists in the mountainous country of Kentucky. Let us assume then, that the old man is a member of a band of feudists who are enemies to another band of which our prospector is a member. His son, the brother who is killed, would naturally be an enemy of the prospector, also. This brings us to the point where it is necessary to have the boy murdered and the suspicion thrown upon our prospector.

Suppose that there is going to be a dance to celebrate some occasion—it might be the completion of a new school house. By the way, an idea immediately jumps into our mind which will build up the character of our prospector. If we are going to show him as an ideal man, whose example can admirably be followed, we must not make him a vindictive and malicious feudist, of the same type as the rest of his band. Let us assume that he has been away to college, and that his mind is consequently broadened to the point where he thinks of some practical plan of establishing harmony between the two warring factions, instead of a continuation of bloodshed.

When he returns from school and his very unusual attitude is generally noised around, both clans are set to talking about him. We might show that even members of his own clan ridicule him in secret and discuss the proposition of his lack of the grit that should have been inherited from his "old man."

We spoke of a new school house a while ago. In order to further show the magnanimous and broad-minded nature of our prospector, why not let him be the one who furnished the money to build the new school house? It might also be at his suggestion that the dance is staged. It would be a very unusual thing, and something that would start much speculation, if he invited his enemies to the dance.

I believe we decided to have the sheriff's son killed at this dance, and the suspicion of the murder thrown upon our prospector. This is a very simple matter. We can have the sheriff's son raise a rough house, just outside. Our prospector, being the host of the occasion, goes out to put a stop to the racket. A shot is fired in the dark, and the sheriff's son dies with his "boots on." Immediately the prospector is arrested for the murder.

But wait a minute: Who was the real murderer of the sheriff's son? He must be some villain who had it "in" for his victim. A little thought brings to our mind he fact that the business of making moonshine liquor is a very prevalent one in the Kentucky mountains. Suppose that the sheriff's son was a young revenue officer, who had been making it hot for a certain gang of moonshiners, and that the fellow who shot him is one of these moonshiners, the man who later appears with the Indian girl and plays the villain right on until the end of our story.

Now there is one criticism that is going to be made of our plot after we have constructed it, with this last development. It

THE STUDIO BEAUTIFUL

Today the motion picture industry faces a critical situation.

Production costs must be cut, and none are more anxious than the film magnates themselves to avoid in the future the paying of unreasonable, exorbitant sums for the screen rights to books, magazine stories, and plays. The most vital question of the day in the world of the cinema is: Where are our future stories coming from?

For, with few exceptions, the so-called eminent authors employed at the various studios have failed dismally in their attempts to produce artistically great or financially successful motion pictures! There is one great exception to this statement; Basil King adapted his story "Earthbound"—a very mediocre piece of literature—to the screen. The photoplay was anything but an artistic triumph, but did succeed financially, on the strength of the wide current interest in spiritualism.

The eminent authors' names have not proven box-office magnets, which the "astute" film magnates did not realize in advance of hiring them. Strange, that no hard-headed, calculating picture producer (I've often wondered why they're called "producers?") ever took the trouble to find out that only five per cent of the population read the individual works of the most popular authors and that hardly one per cent read any of the less popular books published!

Furthermore, the eminent authors had expressed themselves through the medium of the novel or play or short story—their real loves—for so long that it was difficult, considering their average age, for them to adapt themselves to an entirely different technique. None of them ever created a screen story equal to any of the dozens turned out by Jeanie MacPherson, C. Gardner Sullivan, H. H. Van Loan, Clara Beranger, Olga Printzlau, Anita Loos, Sada Cowan, Carol Kapleau, J. G. Hawks, Lois Zellner, and others whose first and only love has been the photoplay.

What is the answer? The star system failed, because a star was undone by as few as two successive poor vehicles! The directors failed under the same circumstances. The story is evidently "the thing," but the "eminent" storyists have failed.

Who will write the future screen stories?

With production costs still high, the screen rights to books and plays still commanding large sums, and attendance slowly diminishing in almost every section of America, there is apt to be an economic earthquake unless better motion pictures are produced. Today is the psychological time for the advent of a whole army of trained screen writers, who, like Crusaders, will swoop down upon the studios and change the present order of things. But the few trained screen writers of today are not equal to this revolutionary task. Their numbers must be added to. The nation needs more men and women who are solely photodramatists, not ex-novelists and ex-playwrights.

The novelist or short story writer is temperamentally unfit for screen writing, because he has been accustomed to seeing his pure, unadulterated creation in print—and has harvested exclusively the fame accruing from his writing. In writing for the screen, only the interpretation of his work reaches the public, and he must divide honors with the director, cinematographer, and players.

The photodramatists' ranks will be filled more so by those whose previous leanings were toward play writing, and yet, it is hardly likely that the persons who have already succeeded as playwrights—having necessarily become absorbed in the technique of the stage play and saturated with the traditions of the theatre—will succeed as photodramatists.

Successful photodramatists must of necessity possess larger viewpoints and noble instincts. For the screen writer can never have the pleasure of sitting down and reading his "great" scenario—under his signature—in some magazine of wide circulation. He cannot write to please himself. Like an architect or a composer of music, his works are mysteries for the builder or instrumentalists to interpret and reveal to the multitude.

Our producers are turning to hundred year old literary classics for screen material, while Modern America's song goes unsung. They have even turned to Salome and Cleopatra and The Queen of Sheba, for lack of a Walt Whitman of the screen.

The great problem is the training of a sufficient number of writers for the screen. Only the comparatively few people living in Los Angeles or New York are close enough to the producing centers themselves to obtain any gleams of intelligence regarding the limitations and advantages of the screen and the art-science of screen writing; but even in those places the ordinary person lives in a world apart from the cinema studios—and the studio executives are not favorable to breaking in and training beginners, which is another obstacle to be individually overcome.

It is evident that the great difficulty at present is to interest about ten times as many people in screen writing—and at the same time to endeavor to interest those worth interesting, the intelligentsia: those whose mental and emotional forces are at least normally developed. There is more money in writing for the screen than there is in writing for the magazines, eventually wider fame; but the American intelligentsia have yet to become interested. In exact is this: We are going to be accused of having introduced one or two situations which are too "co-incidental." In other words, the situations "just happen," apparently for the convenience of our plot. For instance: How does it happen that our whole bunch of principals, prospector, sheriff, daughter and villain, all move to California? And again, how does it happen that after the prospector has fled into the High Sierra mountains, that the same villain, who committed the crime which has been laid at his door, arrives at the same canyon where the prospector and his friend are at work? Also, why does the girl in her aeroplane select the very spot in the air over the prospector's camp, to do a tail spin and to fall almost at his feet? After we can satisfactorily make these things logical, I would say that we have a pretty fair plot.

We can answer the first question by eliminating the idea that the story has its beginning in Kentucky. There could just as well be feuds and moonshiners in the mountains of California as in Kentucky. They are making "hootch" everywhere these days. That makes it more logical then, that both the hero and the villain of our story might arrive at the same canyon. As a matter of fact they are both fugitives from justice and it is not illogical that both of them might have heard the whispered information that a heavy deposit of gold was supposed to exist in a very remote canyon, in the High Sierra mountains. That would answer the question of how they both came to arrive at the same place. The information concerning the supposed location of the gold deposit may have filtered out of the wilds, through the agency of an old Indian.

The most difficult question of logic that we have to solve is the matter of the girl selecting the particular spot where the prospector is camped, to fall with her plane.

Here is a solution to that. We will not have her fall right there. Let us assume that the prospector is on a hunting trip at some distance from his camp—and that he hears the plane flying overhead and sees it begin to fall. Then going in the direction of where the plane has fallen, for a couple of miles, he finds the unconscious form of the girl. This partly removes the objection to the "coincidental" situations described. Of course, it is not a forced situation to bring the aviator and the girl's father, as they are both in search of the girl.

As a matter of fact there are "co-incidental" situations in the majority of plots which appear on the screen. The author should endeavor, however, to eliminate them as far as possible. A picture plot is a composite thing. Most of them are such as could happen in real life, but which never have and never will. What I mean by this, is that dramatic situations as they occur in real life, are not usually so beautifully co-related, one with the other, or perfectly synchronized. All of the situations present in a plot might occur to one individual, but not in a "bunch," as they do in a picture plot, where they are shaped to dove-tail closely into one another.

That is why the majority of amateur writers submit narratives instead of dramatic plots. They simply write a description of a series of dramatic events which have actually taken place in their own lives, or in the lives of others, and which dramatic situations usually have very little bearing one upon the other. This constitutes narrative. Real skill is required to construct a perfect dramatic plot.

This is the end of this series of articles on the "Process of Deduction," one of the two processes of plot construction that is used by successful authors.

$5,000 Won By Trained Photoplaywrights

IN COMPETITION with nearly 10,000 contestants residing in nearly every state in the union, the first, second and third prizes in the recent nation-wide J. Parker Read $5000 Scenario Contest were won by students of former students in the Department of Education of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

THE WINNERS

First Prize—$2500.00

Won by Frances White Elijah, Santa Barbara, Cal.

Second Prize—$1500.00

Won by A. Earl Kauffman, York, Pa.

Third Prize—$1000.00

Won by Anna B. Mezquida, San Francisco, Cal.

It is significant that every cash prize was won by writers who received their training in scenario writing by correspondence through the Palmer Course and Service; that not one penny of the $5000 awarded was received by an untrained writer.

The Palmer Course and Service is available only to men and women who possess creative imagination, dramatic perception and unquestioned earnestness of purpose. A questionnaire embodying tests designed to enable the applicant to predetermine his or her natural abilities for creative work will be mailed free upon request.

Another Black Eye?

Probably mishandled instruction has brought more of detriment to the subjects treated and those who are taught than all of the combined ignorance of mankind. However, since it is, in great part, only the seekers who progress, we are compelled to overlook imperfections in that knowledge which they naturally desire to pass along; consequently it is only left to us to criticise those who intentionally or through carelessness misrepresent in their teachings.

For this week's prologue, the Kinema Theatre management happened upon the very clever idea of depicting a studio set and the shooting of an average dramatic scene for the public's edification. So far, so good! Certainly a more interesting type of thing could scarcely have been prepared for the ordinary audience. Through indelicate treatment, however, in an attempt at humor, this seemingly simple sketch is harming the motion picture industry at every performance. Portrayals of ridiculous temperamentalism upon the part of the actors used, and the ineffective irritability of a rather poor director, resulting in much tossed-about insolence over the work in hand certainly lets the picture making staff down hard—unfairly so. The audience's impression of the whole, whether conscious or not, is bound to be tinged with disrespect, possibly disgust.

That the film colony is resenting this glaring error is shown plainly in the following communication from one of our well-known scenarists. We commend his sentiments and the many professionals whose own are represented by them. If we are not loyal to our own, what is there left for us?

F. R.

"Editor Camera!

"Purporting to be 'an intimate glimpse of the actual work in a motion picture studio' one of our leading theatres presents another slur on our profession.

"The scene is rehearsed and taken for a 'western.' It has a corner-set; and four twin sidelights, a camera man and a couple of stage hands form the technical setting. A supposed director and two actors go through a travesty on the work of taking the rather lengthy action.

"The director attempts to explain the business to a clever actor who plays the male role and to a good actress who is supposed to do the ingenue. Both appear to be bored to death throughout the explanation, pay not the slightest attention to the director and show a most deplorable lack of discipline. The absolute purpose of the travesty seems to be to show an alleged 'don't give-a-dam-ness' of our work.

"The whole thing is belittling the profession unjustly for I do not know of a modern director who would tolerate such lack of discipline. The impression given the public is false and unfair, yes, utterly uncalled for.

"The subject in hand offers a splendid opportunity to show what infinite pains are taken, and the great difficulty attached to making any scene, and in the long run the entire affair would have been made far more interesting and certainly more valuable if it had been reproduced with fidelity and tact.

"Is there any other business on earth which is parading its most miserable samples for public inspection? The persons responsible for this act could have done a service instead of rendering an insult. And a leading theatre lent itself as the medium!

"Yours truly,
"FREDERICK BENNETT."

For Our Scenarist Readers

We have with us this issue, as we will continue to have for some time, William E. Wing, one of our industry's most successful free lance scenarists, who will provide us with something new from the progressive screen writer's viewpoint. Mr. Wing's list of produced photoplays is remarkable in length and it includes many really great sellers. It is unnecessary to suggest that his weekly talks in Camera! will prove equally invaluable to those readers of this paper who are either fully versed in the story phase of picture production or merely training that they may in time achieve the scenario.

Present Crisis a Big Opportunity

By Marshall Neilan

The cry of panic is evident on all sides here in the producing center of the industry. The cutting of salaries and the elimination of big job holders that heretofore have been considered indispensable have struck fear into the heart of every individual in the business on the West Coast. Yet, when we consider the facts, I venture to say that the present situation is the best thing that could have happened to the industry. The whole structure upon which this business was founded was so frail that at the first severe strain it was bound to crack.

Now, if we are good builders we will take this opportunity of insuring the correction of evils that were bound to bring about the present condition. In the period of reorganization now already under way, there is much to be done in order to prevent another crisis such as that through which we are now passing. The feeling of get what you can for yourself and let the devil take the hindermost has permeated throughout this business from its inception. In the present crisis this feeling has been overcome, for it has taught even the greatest individual powers in this business that they must get together with each other and with those of lesser strength. It is no longer an uncommon thing to see the heads of different organi-

Film Capital Production Notes

ALLENE RAY SEMI-WESTERNS COMING

Bert Lubin, president of the Western Pictures Corporation, is returning to New York this week with a print of the first of a series of six five-reel dramatic features in which Allene Ray will be starred. All star casts headed by Miss Ray will be featured in each release, the first of which will be directed by Rolin H. Townley and released about July 20th.

Miss Ray was featured in the two previous Lubin offerings, "Honeymoon Ranch" and "West of the Rio Grande," which were disposed of on the state rights market. This series will contain the first Ray offerings under the new contract with the Western Pictures Corporation.

"LORNA DOONE" IN PRODUCTION

The filming of "Lorna Doone" will commence in Yosemite National Park next week, the arrangements having been completed recently on behalf of Maurice Tourneur by Clarence L. Brown, associate director. Charles J. Van Enger will be in charge of the camera.

MONTANA COMPANY SHOOTING

Art Staton is working on his first starring production entitled "Dark Bark la Noir," for Flathead Producers Corporation at Columbia Falls, Montana. This French-Canadian story is the first of a series of multiple length productions which the company will make at its newly established studio.

NEW HARTER-WALL COMEDY

The Harter-Wall Productions have completed another two-reel comedy, entitled "The Right Man," featuring Vera Glynn and "Jim" Baker.

The company will leave presently for Yosemite, to take exterior for its next story, with L. S. Wall directing.

GOULDING DIRECTING SWEET

The latest addition to the Century Comedies is Alf Goulding, late of Sunshine Comedies, and recently directing Harold Lloyd. Mr. Goulding has been chosen to direct Harry Sweet Century Comedies, alternating with Tom Buckingham.

ADAMS COMEDY STARTS

Arvid E. Gillstrom, who was chosen by Mr. E. W. Hammons, president of the Educational Film Company, to assume production responsibilities of the Adams Comedies, has started production on his next Jimmie Adams two-reel comedy at the Astra studios in Glendale.

"THE IDLE CLASS" FINISHING

Charles Chaplin is finishing "The Idle Class," upon which he has been working for twenty-one weeks. This comedy will be released through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

STAGE SUCCESSES FOR SCREEN

Associated First National announces that Richard Walton Tully, author and producer, is preparing the continuities of "The Masquerader," "The Bird of Paradise," "Keep Her Smiling," and "The Flame," as well as a number of original scenarios and European plays which Mr. Tully acquired during his sojourn abroad.

FIVE-REEL WESTERN RELEASED

"The Mysterious White Rider" is the title of the five-reel Western recently completed by the D. & M. Productions, under the direction of Fred Caldwell. It will be released through Goodman & White.

AT UNIVERSAL

Art Acord is at work on the last two-reel western photodrama which he will make before starting his new serial. The short reel drama is called "The Mayor of Gopher Hole," and is being directed by Edward Laemmle. His forthcoming serial will be known as "Winners of the West," in which he will also be directed by Laemmle.

Lee Moran is working on the concluding scenes for "A Mile a Minute," his latest comedy, which William Watson is directing.

Miss Dupont is making progress on "The White Peacock Feather," her first starring vehicle, in which she is being directed by Jack Conway.

Hoot Gibson is finishing "The Sheriff of Cinnebar," the Peter B. Kyne story upon which he has been at work under the direction of Reaves Eason.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd starts work next week on his fourteenth two-reeler, with Fred Newmeyer directing. The script has been furnished by Jean Havez. Mildred Davis will play opposite the star. Mr. Lloyd's latest comedy, the working title of which was "The Sky Is the Limit," is now being cut and assembled by T. J. Crizer, while H. M. Walker is busy titling it. The new comedy will bear for a releasing title "Look Before You Leap."

Ruth Roland and company have been doing location work at Santa Monica, where sea shots were taken for "White Eagle," under production.

Harry "Snub" Pollard's comedy, "You're Next," has just been released by Pathe.

AT LASKY'S

"Rainbow's End," the all-star feature in which Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter will play the leading roles, under the direction of Sam Wood, will start on the 18th or thereabout. Lorna Moon is author of the photoplay; A. S. LeVine is making the screen adaptation.

Thomas Meighan will start presently on George Cohan's romantic play, "A Prince There Was," Tom Forman directing. The continuity for this was written by Waldemar Young.

Clara Beranger's original picture, "Exit the Vamp," in which Ethel Clayton will star, is under way, under the direction of Frank Urson.

James Cruze, Roscoe Arbuckle and company, making "Handle With Care," are on their way to Chicago for important exterior scenes. Walter Woods wrote the scenario for this story, which is by Curtis Benton.

George Melford is on the desert for exterior scenes of "The Sheik." Rudolph Valentino has the leading role, with Agnes Ayres featured opposite him. This is an adaptation by Monte Katterjohn of E. M. Hull's popular novel.

William DeMille is engaged in arranging the details for a forthcoming production, the title and character of which are as yet unknown.

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

Josephine Hill will be retained by Christie for further pictures now being made for early Educational release. Miss Hill is at present playing a lead with Bobby Vernon in a comedy in preparation by William Beaudine.

Neal Burns and Viora Daniel are scheduled to carry the leading roles of a new comedy which will be started soon by Frederic Sullivan from a story by Sam Taylor, entitled "Twins."

Current Reviews

"SACRED AND PROFANE LOVE"

Tally's

Arnold Bennett's strong, almost daring dramatic story, "Sacred and Profane Love," which was scenarized by Julia Crawford Ivars for Paramount's presentation of Elsie Ferguson, has more accentuated, attention-holding qualities than the majority of the week's releases. The theme of the story, which treats of a sheltered girl and her growth in the knowledge of life, departs from the conventional to an interesting degree, giving it an honest, human scope to work from, which is better covered than one might expect, considering the present general dread of the misunderstanding censor.

William D. Taylor has shown admirable conception of his material in the direction of the scenario, and there is nothing blatantly wrong with the picture's general technique. A few of the philosophical subtitles deserve special mention. However, it might be said that the good photography is not always supplemented by equally satisfactory lighting, a minor point in this instance, but plainly perceptible and undesirable.

Miss Ferguson offers us a delicately handled, well proportioned portrayal in Carlotta Peel, who is played with great subtlety, both as an imaginative girl seeking an answer to the much which she feels without clarified knowledge, and later as the woman who, from the fullness of her experience, accomplishes an art and finally a living soul. Moreover, her screen translation is as natural as it is artistic.

Conrad Nagle characterizes Emile Diaz, a great pianist, who is apparently no mean student of feminine psychology, with exquisite poise, which he carries consistently through his breakdown and the drunkard's life which follows. Perhaps the greatest fascination surrounding Nagle is his mastery of transition.

The semi-unsympathetic role of Frank Ispenlove, the publisher who leaves his wife to follow the now mature Carlotta about Europe, is done by Thomas Holding, who may be said to satisfy in his part. A contradictory character of this type is always difficult to handle.

An unusually realistic touch is added to young Carlotta's atmospheric background by Helen Dunbar, who enacts the girl's serene old aunt, whose raising of the child has been along the sweetly idealistic lines with which convention has always striven to thwart nature.

Excellent types fill the remainder of the roles, which are in each instance, minor. They include Winifred Greenwood, Clarissa Selwynne, Howard Gaye and Jane Keckley.

If there are inferior moments in the scenario or action of "Sacred and Profane Love," they fade from view when compared to the miserable cinema entertainment which we have been forced to accept of late weeks if we would have any. Surely the old pendulum will soon start back.

"THE MARCH HARE"

Clune's

Bebe Daniels accompanies Realart to our screens again this week in Elmer Harris' farce, "The March Hare." From several standpoints this story is superior to many of Miss Daniels' offerings, even in the face of the fact that it contains exaggerations that are a bit too scorched even for near burlesque. Nevertheless, it is altogether likely that the star's followers will find very little to adversely criticize in the picture, which last must be recognized as the important point in hand, and the various laughs which it contains balance the inferior spots. Technically the production is about up to its company's average, although misplaced spotlights throwing unnatural shadows here and there might have been eliminated advantageously.

Lisbeth Ann Palmer is the same type of riotous flapper which Miss Daniels is accustomed to filling. The young lady's valiant attempt to exist for a week upon seventy-five cents among strangers in New York City forms the nucleus for the mix-ups, out of which she rides buoyantly on the crest of a somewhat expanded wave of circumstance. The role is very Bebe-ish.

It is not Harry Myers' fault that the highly amusing and consistent characterization which he creates for Tod, a startlingly uneducated millionaire cowboy, is entirely disconnected as placed in the story with a senatorial father and an exceedingly refined mother. That isn't overly important, anyway, for many of the necessary comedy situations are controlled by this same rough rider, and Myers is always equal to them.

Helen Jerome Eddy, in a "cracked" adventuress part, is howlingly funny. With her "nut" character she cares for both the opposition and much effective humor to everyone's complete satisfaction.

Mayme Kelso, as Mrs. Curtiss Palmer, Lisbeth Ann's much-imposed-upon aunt, together with Melbourne MacDowell and Frances Raymond as Tod's parents, form a well-chosen, conservative background for the action, which is given increased entertainment value thereby.

Grace Morse individualizes the small part of Clara Belle Palmer as she may always be depended upon to do. We always enjoy her work immensely.

Maurice Campbell directed "The March Hare."

"PROXIES"

California

Some months ago Cosmopolitan Magazine carried a surprise finish short story by Frank R. Adams, entitled "Proxies." It wasn't bad. Since then, Famous Players-Lasky has given that story a screen publication. The latter is scarcely acceptable. Indeed, it would almost seem that creditable producers might hesitate in their mad search for picture possibilities this side of the short story. Or is it reasonable after all to expect such to contain filler for long reel subjects? Some way, we don't think so. In any event, "Proxies" is a poor excuse for an enlivening photoplay, thanks to several mistakes in direction and much unmeaning action by the cast, as well as its rather inadequate story underpinnings. It deals with an aristocratic family whose antics are a bit plebeian withal, and their ex-crook servants who scurry in and out of stretched situations only to end it all happily and with notable ease, or rather with complete lack of responsibility, after the manner of the old time mystery novel. Photographically the production is more or less uneven.

According to the introductory titles, Norman Kerry and Zeena Keefe are co-starred in this picture. One might be tempted to ask why the combination, since, if the story includes a role of sufficient sympathetic value to even feature, it is Peter, the ex-convict butler, played by Kerry. Miss Keefe's position, or Clare, a ladies' maid, is only one of rather minor support. Neither of these performers are at their best here.

Kerry, minus his famous mustache and squeezed into the conservative servant's boots, manages to let go of the personal fascination which shades so much of his work pleasantly. Poor Peter means little at best, and at worst he is truly a mistake. Miss Keefe in the other part is afforded really no chance to do more than count among those present, although we found ourselves once or twice fearing her conspicuous arrival at the grimacing point.

At that, the really terrible performance of the piece belongs to Raye Dean, who is about the last word in gushing, simpering, self-consciousness as Carlotta Darley, a society bud whose carriage is about as "dis"-graceful as can be easily imagined. Very nearly she knocks over the furniture, and her posture continually presents an angle of about forty-five degrees from the waist up. Anyway, that must pass. We announce ourselves inadequate for once to express ourselves upon an ingenue.

Wm. H. Tooker, a real actor, is seen as Carlotta's father; and John Stover, the unmentionably indelicate heavy, is played a bit strenuously by Paul Everton.

Jack Crosby, in a superficial juvenile, completes the cast.

George Baker produced "Proxies" in the east.

"ONE A MINUTE"

Grauman's

"One a Minute," a Fred Jackson attempt of rather doubtful content, is the Thos. H. Ince-Douglas MacLean comedy which may be seen here this week. It is scarcely up to MacLean's standard for entertainment value, due largely to the inconsistent material contained in the story, which is altogether too greatly overdrawn to even be burlesqued effectively. Its slimsy action circles about a small town druggist whose faked but successful Panacea for All Pains causes a riot along the countryside. Ridicu-

The Screen Writers' Forum —Conducted by William E. Wing

In opening this photoplay department for "Camera!" it seems fitting to discuss the position of the present-day screen writer.

No longer is he the suppliant or merely an acceptable instrument. To a great extent he has become recognized in the full acceptance of the word. His importance and worth as a member of the great film industry is granted by manufacturers, exhibitors and the public itself.

This recognition came only after years of battle. It was not until leaders of earlier days actually organized to fight for their rights, that any headway was made. The original Photoplay League, organized by such reputable authorities as Griffith, Frank Woods, Richard Harding Davis and others, opened the doors and removed barriers. Incidentally it created a great fraternal spirit among the widely-scattered writers themselves. It formed a brotherhood, the good effects of which never have died.

But, now that the screen author has become the studio dependency, is the author's work done when he has written his story for filming?

I believe not. If Dr. Crafts is important enough to notice; if the professional reformer is a danger; if the good people who follow these self-appointed guardians of public morals with such amazing unreasonableness, constitute a further menace, then the author's work is something more than writing.

He is a member of the rank and file, therefore he also must fight for the rights of his profession, and also, for the right.

Defense is a necessary thing at times, but it wins no battles. Already the photoplay author is under fire. For example, at Albany, N. Y., recently, when consorship was the question before the legislature, the leaders of Craftsdom angrily denounced the film as criminal, and all who had to do with it as the criminals.

Noted writers present, headed by Rex Beach, were denounced merely for their attempts to defend the profession. They, too, were criminals.

Many other people follow this method of condemnation. The evangelist who acclaimed himself a follower of the gentle, lowly Savior while making Pomona blue recently, denounced all of us, as members of a "Godless gang." He further proved his right to preach the gospel by adding that we were "lily-livered lobsters," and then paused to denounce those of his audience who had not applauded.

Straws, my brethren, straws which indicate the rising winds of unreasoning destructive censorship.

There are two ways in which the writer must fight. He must be willing to lay aside the typewriter and join the army of occupation at times.

Again he can fight by removing the enemy's supply of ammunition. The majority of writers, as well as the greater portion of film manufacturers, desire a clean screen. Is it not well for the writer to discover in himself, the beginning of the cleanup? If every member of our profession would desist from any attempt to embody the broad things in their stories, to which the reformer could reasonably object, then would the cause of senseless legislation be marked by its absence.

True, the Craftites, other paid uplifters and politicians, will not cease their efforts to annoy while the noise of the cash register responds; but in this way a great power for mischief would be removed from our self-appointed guardians, and a good blow would have been struck for the safety of this great industry.

The clean story will keep the screen clean.

ALL LIFE A SCHOOL

Any successful attorney, scientist or member of other profession of parts, will tell you that they have been students throughout the long, profitable years. They will tell you that they still are students. Keeping up with the procession when the line of march lifts from marchers to equestrians, and from horseback to swiftly-moving, modern conveyances, is a task which leaves far behind the fellow who is satisfied with the methods his forerunners pursued. What an enormous burden would be lifted from studios if the uninitiated in the peculiar knack of photoplay writing, paused to secure the necessary training also; for how can these hope to succeed when the successful writers necessarily must continue going to class, as it were? The "army of the untrained!" It is the bane of many industries; it is the world-problem in many respects.

HIRE A GUIDE

The confusing synopsis is about as welcome as a nickel tip in a million-dollar cafe. Many writers attach a cast and then depend upon the memory of the reader to carry the long list of names and their relationships, while perusing a story entirely strange. It can't be done. If you want a fair reading open your story with: "Mary, daughter of Pete Jones, engaged to Burton; Burton, son of the village street-sweeper, engaged to Mary; Mike, Burton's rival, favored by Mary's father," etc. It would do no harm to reiterate at least once such things as "lovers," "rivals," and the like, thereby bringing happy relief to the struggler behind the goggles. It is a startling fact that a majority of stories submitted do not do this.

A LOW, RAKISH MOAN

Continuing the same line of melancholy thought, listen to the tormented soul of the fellow who has to read them:

"I frankly admit that the unnecessarily long synopsis doesn't get the same chance with me—or with any other eye-strained, brain-fagged reader—as the down-to-tacks story does. There is a mighty good reason. If you wade too long to reach deep water, a fellow is too tired to enjoy the swim. Get me? Too tired, and some disgusted. If these poor ducks who describe and illustrate, and who have their characters pull off a lot of "thinks," would paste the good, old rule on the wall, "Every scene should advance the plot," they might take a tumble; for they could well apply the rule to the synopsis by making "scene" read "word." If this doesn't bring them down to earth, they ought to be out on the Chautauqua circuit speech-making. The pump-handle who writes sixteen mortal pages to let us know that the Duke of Oklahoma is out to win the goil away from Harold, the chiropodist, and thereby win Old Man Bindle's boodle, should see a specialist.

SHINGLES OFF THE ROOF

Panning the editor never sold a story.

"The screen shows worse ones than mine," may be the truth, but it doesn't help much.

A really good story will sell if it circulates wisely and persistently.

Perhaps your story doesn't live up to the corking title. Giving a dog a "good" name never proved the old rule.

Good news! Although actual manufacture has slowed up a bit, the demand for stories still is on deck.

Yes, the price of comedy stories remains low, but why not? "Anyone can write that kind of stuff."

Don't pick on the old, familiar plot because it has "gone over" previously. Columbus sacrificed a perfectly good egg to discover a dry country, but the fellow who would try it now would be an awful egg.

The ship won't sink if you happen to write a Canadian woods story without your impervious hero in uniform.

Neither will your heart-interest story receive a swift kick merely for the lack of a midnight shot accompanied by the usual feminine shriek.

Too many of our so-called comedies remind us of Willie's effort to make baby smile with the glove stretcher.

THOSE TITLES OF GRIEF

"O mother! Look at the funny man."

"Hush, my child, he is not funny. Instead, he is very, very sad."

"Then why does he wear a knife between his teeth and a shotgun behind his ear?"

"That is because he is a studio editor, my dear."

"Is he going to assassinate some one?"

"No, but he is going to try homicide upon those stories in front of him."

"Why is the man going to carve up the poor stories and then shoot them in cold blood?"

"Because they carry such deadly titles as, "Loved and Lost," "Her Sacrifice," "The Atonement of Guiarda Gubb," "Yesteryear," and "Avenged at the Altar," my tender offspring."

"O, I see; he is one of the Corsican Brothers."

"No, my angel of light, he is the new fool-killer."

"Why don't he start on the fellers that write the fool titles, Mama?"

"That will do, Tillie. Run along now and play with your Gila monster. Mother can't be bothered."

Pickups By the Staff

"THE MIMES"

Film celebrities in Los Angeles are co-operating with John Griffith Wray in the formation of a private-theatricals society, "The Mimes," to present a series of artistic dramatic programs. Mr. Wray will direct, and the players will contribute their services in the interest of community art.

SANTSCHI GUEST ON ALASKAN TRIP

On completion of several pictures for which he is under contract, Tom Santschi expects to make a trip to Alaska with a whaling expedition, as an invited guest, on an all-winter cruise.

JULIEN JOSEPHSON BUSY

Julien Josephson, associate editor at the Goldwyn studio, is writing the continuity for "His Back to the Wall," a published story by John Frederick. Mr. Josephson has just finished the screen version of "The Man with Two Mothers," by Alice Duer Miller.

TOM MOORE COMPLETES THREE

Tom Moore has recently finished three pictures. They are "Mr. Barnes of New York," from Archibald Clavering Gunter's novel by the same name; "Beating the Game," an original by Charles Kenyon; and "From the Ground Up," an original by Rupert Hughes.

BETTY ROSS CLARKE IN BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

At a benefit for the disabled veterans held recently at the historic San Gabriel Mission, Betty Ross Clarke was one of the prominent actresses appearing on the entertainment program.

KENYON WRITES CONTINUITY FOR "THE CHRISTIAN"

Charles Kenyon has finished the screen adaptation of "The Christian," Hall Caine's novel, which will soon be produced at the Goldwyn Studios. Mr. Kenyon will be remembered as the author of "Kindling," a stage play.

CHRISTIE STARS VACATIONING

Dorothy DeVore, Vera Steadman, and Viora Daniel are enjoying a brief vacation period following their work in pictures just completed by Al Christie and Scott Sidney.

WARFIELD ON SCREEN

Metro, through Marcus Loew, has secured the services of David Warfield for both "The Music Master" and "The Return of Peter Grimm." He is scheduled to produce at studios in Hollywood.

Roland Rushton, Reginald Barker's assistant in his forthcoming independent film productions, has arrived from New York.

MABEL NORMAND ON EUROPEAN TRIP

Mabel Normand has finished "Molly-O" and is on her way to London and Paris. Miss Normand is scheduled to start work on a new picture at the Sennett studio September first.

SYD SMITH

Being featured in the Hall Room Boys comedy series.

NEW CASTING OFFICE

A new engagement office for directors, artists and technical workers in motion pictures will be opened by Grace Inglis, who has lately severed her connection with the firm of Willis and Inglis, to engage in conducting her own casting forum. Willis and Inglis recently retired from the engagement and booking field.

SMOLLEN—SCENARIST

Bradley Smollen, publicity director and writer of several Vitagraph continuities, will devote his time hereafter to Vitagraph scenario work. Mr. Smollen is succeeded by E. L. Moriarty, Los Angeles newspaper man, as press representative.

POWER BOATING IN LOWER CALIF.

Rupert Hughes and party have returned after a week's power-boat trip into Lower California. Those in the party were Howard Hughes, brother of the author, M. D. Gardner, studio executive, and Ernest Miller, cameraman. The navigators went as far as Ensenada.

Another trip is being planned presently for a cruise around Catalina Island. The passengers will be Rupert Hughes, Howard Hughes, Samuel Goldwyn, Abraham Lehr, and Charles Chaplin.

RUPERT HUGHES WILL TITLE NEILAN PROPAGANDA PICTURE

Marshall Neilan has secured the services of Rupert Hughes, noted author, to write the titles for his anti-censorship picture, which he is to produce for the Public Rights League of America.

Mr. Hughes has accepted Neilan's invitation through courtesy of Goldwyn. Both Neilan and Hughes will donate their time and effort in the production of this film, which will be booked with theatre owners over the country free of charge.

The scenario for the picture is complete and was written by Mr. Neilan. The film will run approximately two reels and will present many prominent players in the cast.

CARTER DE HAVEN WRITES

Carer De Haven is responsible for the scenario for the five-reel Western photoplay which Wallace MacDonald will direct, featuring Juanita Hansen.

CONNELLY RESTS

Edward Connelly, character actor, who was recently loaned to Universal for one of the leading roles in Priscilla Dean's newest feature, has completed his work at that studio and is spending a few weeks in the San Bernardino mountains.

PICKFORD PICTURE OPENS SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL THEATRE

Mary Pickford's "Pollyanna" is to be the first picture shown at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, situated in Shakespeare's own garden at Stratford-on-Avon, when this theatre is converted into a cinema house on September 12th.

LATEST NORMA TALMADGE PICTURE HAS N. Y. SHOWING

Norma Talmadge's next First National release, "The Sign on the Door," directed by Herbert Brenon, will have its initial New York showing at the Strand Theatre the week of July 17th.

Those important in the cast are Lew Cody, Charles Richman, David Proctor, Augustus Balfour, Mack Barnes, Helen Weir, Robert Agnew, Martinie Burnlay, Paul McAllister, Lew Hendricks and Walter Bussel.

NEW R-C SCENARIO HEAD

Eve Unsell, formerly head of the scenario staff of Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., has joined R-C Pictures Corporation, and will head the scenario department.

LASKY ADDRESSES W. M. P. A.

Jesse L. Lasky was present at the meeting of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers, held recently at the Assembly Tea Rooms in Hollywood, where he gave a talk on various vital facts concerning the present conditions in the motion picture industry.

Production Notes

AT VITAGRAPH

Earle Williams has finished the filming of "Bring Him In." The picture is from a Canadian-Northwest story by H. H. Van Loan. Robert Ensminger co-directed with Mr. Williams in the production.

Jimmy Aubrey has finished his second two-reel comedy under his new contract. The working title of this latest laugh maker is "The Storm."

"The Superman," William Duncan's newest picture, is completed and will be one of the Vitagraph September-October releases. Edith Johnson co-stars with Mr. Duncan.

The David Smith production, "Flower of the North," is well under way. This is the James Oliver Curwood story in which Henry B. Walthall and Pauline Starke head an all-star cast.

BUTLER ACTIVITIES

David Butler's second special feature, "Bing-Bang-Boom," is now completed and will shortly be released.

Prior to commencing work on his third picture, Mr. Butler plans a brief vacation and will be busy on the script of his new story.

"In Walked Jimmy" is the title of the new film, taken from the stage play of the same name. Fred J. Butler will direct his son as usual. The Butler pictures are being distributed by Irving M. Lesser.

AT METRO

"The Fourteenth Lover" is soon to be filmed, with Viola Dana in the stellar role.

Alice Lake is progressing on her new picture, "The Infamous Miss Revell."

Rex Ingram is preparing for his production of "Turn to the Right," upon which he will begin work in the near future.

Actual filming of "Lady Fingers" will commence shortly after Mr. Lytell completes his work in "Junk," upon which he is now engaged.

FROTHINGHAM PRODUCTIONS

Camera work has been completed on J. L. Frothingham's second Associated Producers' production, which will be released under the title of "Pilgrims of the Night." The photoplay is an adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, "Passers-by," directed by Edward Sloman.

The next J. L. Frothingham production will be a screen adaptation of "The Daughter of Brahma," by I. A. E. Wylie. It is probable that Marguerite De La Motte will be cast in the title role after finishing the "Three Musketeers," with Douglas Fairbanks.

WILLAT PRODUCTIONS

"Fifty Candles," the Saturday Evening Post story by Earl Deer Biggers, has been chosen by Irvin Willat as his fourth independent Hodkinson production.

The company left recently for Balboa Bay, where under the personal direction of Mr. Willat a number of water scenes are being filmed for an opening sequence of his current picture.

AT REALART

Bebe Daniels has finished the last scenes of "The Speed Girl," under the direction of Maurice Campbell.

May McAvoy has started "The Happy Ending," under the direction of Frank O'Connor.

IRVING LESSER DISTRIBUTING NEW PRODUCT

Irving Lesser has recently returned from the east and announces that a new series of feature productions will be made independently, to be distributed under his banner. These will be the Lester Cuneo productions, a series of eight five-reel Western pictures featuring Mr. Cuneo and produced by the Doubleday Production Company in Los Angeles.

The deal was consummated by Mr. Lesser, representing the Western Pictures Exploitation Company, and Chas. E. Mack, representing the Doubleday Production Company.

The first picture of the series, "Blue Blazes," has been completed and will shortly be released. It was produced by Mr. Mack and directed by Robert Kelley.

AT THE HAMILTON-WHITE STUDIOS

The concluding scenes for Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton's newest Mermaid comedy, "The Vagrant," have been shot and production will start at once on the star's next picture, the title and details of which will be announced shortly. Irene Dalton and Tom Wilson support the comedian.

The La Brea oil field has been used for the past two weeks by Jack White for scenes in his latest comedy, which is nearing completion.

SALISBURY PICTURE

After a long term of inactivity, Monroe Salisbury will star in a new picture to be produced by his own company. The play will have a Spanish setting and Salisbury's representative is now in Mexico gathering data.

PAUL BERN STARTS

Director Paul Bern started work recently on "The Man with Two Mothers," an original story by Alice Duer Miller. Percy Hilburn, former cameraman for Reginald Barker, is photographing the production.

KEATON COMEDY

Buster Keaton has completed his initial two-reeler for release under his new distributing contract with Associated First National. The comedy, as yet unnamed, is being cut and titled.

SENNETT STAR

Billy Bevan is to be featured in his own company at the Mack Sennett studio. His first starring vehicle has lately been completed under the direction of Roy Del Ruth.

Upon the re-opening of the studio, production will start upon the second Bevan comedy.

In the meantime, Mr. and Mrs. Bevan are enjoying a vacation.

BRANCH OFFICE

The Cinema Sales Co., of Los Angeles, world distributors for the Creco Arc Lamps, have opened a branch office and salesroom in Hollywood. H. Sylvester, E. E., who has been in the electrical end of motion pictures for the past twelve years, is the manager.

ANN FORREST NO LONGER WITH LASKY

Ann Forrest's contract with Lasky has expired and she is joining another producing firm. Her last picture is "The Great Impersonation," with James Kirkwood.

STUDIO OF STORIES

Adeline M. Alvord has recently opened an exchange on Hollywood Boulevard, dealing in stories and plays for picture production as well as for publication. Associated with her is Elizabeth McQuillin, who has charge of the research and special features.

WILL DIRECT EDUCATIONAL FILMS

Director Arthur Berthelet has affiliated with the Atlas Educational Film Company, releasing educational and industrial films

Production on Jackie Coogan's first picture since "Peck's Bad Boy" will commence August 1st at the Brunton Studios.

All future film product of little Jackie will be distributed by Irving M. Lesser, general manager for the Western Pictures Exploitation company.

zations sitting together at lunch or around a board of directors table, discussing ways and means of helping each other. A year ago such procedure was so unusual that when it did occur the rumor of "merger" was immediately spread broadcast.

The spirit of competition, which is the life of trade, is all very well, but it can be carried to such a degree that it becomes, as it has in the present crisis, almost the death of the industry. This condition has certainly displayed in a most vivid manner the fact that in striving for our own welfare we must also consider that of the other fellow, or we are bound to suffer from the reaction. Nothing short of the situation in which the producers of Los Angeles find themselves today would have offered such a wonderful opportunity for the rebuilding, along sane lines, of our particular structure. The situation which has absolutely forced a get-together spirit on the part of all branches of the industry and particularly the producers, should teach those who are now spending much of their time consulting with each other that this idea must be carried out in the future when the industry will again see its peak of success.

In building our new foundation for future production there are many things that should be considered and agreed upon by producers. The Producers Organization here in Los Angeles has at its command the power of modeling the future of this branch of the industry in such a way that great good can come from our present condition. An outline of future proceedings to cover all business dealings of the producers should be laid out and agreed to by every producer here. The very thought of ethics in the motion picture industry has brought laughter in the past. Yet this is just what we need, particularly in the producing world. Ethics indeed, and with a club attached to them so that every one who refuses to recognize them will suffer the penalty.

In righting the wrongs that occur in the fountain of the industry—the production field—every other branch of the industry should help. If a contract jumper goes over to another company because that organization is willing to pay twice as much as he is getting and which he does not earn, the organization that takes him away should be compelled to suffer for it. A heavy monetary fine should be imposed and if this does not have the desired effect an arrangement should be effected whereby that organization's product should be taboo at the theatres until such time as it mends its ways.

The large organizations particularly have it in their power to do the greatest good for the industry at this time that has ever been accomplished. For instance, the elimination of the individual releasing offices which, especially in small towns, often eat up a tremendous overhead, would be a great saving.

There are a hundred things that handicap the individual producer that result from the lack of understanding and co-operation with his fellow producers which could be eliminated by definite agreement that would carry a penalty severe enough to discourage their practice. The mania for outbidding each other for anything and everything pertaining to the production of a picture and trying to get what the other fellow has, should be eliminated by regulation and understanding. The engagement of persons, who are not fitted to handle such positions, at salaries that should go to the creative minds directly responsible for the achievements of the pictures, is another serious menace that must be overcome. Relatives and old friends should be placed in responsible positions only when their individual merits warrant such procedure, and not otherwise. The question of ability should alone be the consideration in the engagement of persons for any position. One thing this condition we find today is bringing about is the elimination of the dead-wood. The persons actively engaged in the business are narrowing down to those who are the survival of the fittest. Only those who have proved their worth are being held in their jobs. If we can stick to this idea when we again prosper, the result is bound to assert itself in no insignificant manner.

Agreements and understandings between producers are resulting from the crisis. We are beginning to realize that there is something in that old phrase "united we stand, divided we fall." There is not one single factor in this business today who can afford to believe that he is all-powerful and need not look to the others for co-operation. In this respect we all can meet on a common ground.

The present condition had to come. Now that it is here it should be considered in the nature of the silver lining to the dark cloud that hovers over our business. Let us make the most of it!

Current Reviews

lous sums of money are promiscuously dragged in conversationally as the Panacea's buying and selling prices, and taken altogether it is inevitable that the audience's interest soon slumps in a manner to make the general outcome really immaterial. Furthermore, the whole is unimproved by the impression of an over-rushed and therefore somewhat careless production staff, which makes itself unmistakable near the play's start. The subtitles, some of which are really clever, are unable to do more than fill their place sufficiently, which leaves the picture somewhat in a hole.

MacLean himself seems to lack the interest which has done so much for his work heretofore, in the part of Jimmy Knight, a combination lawyer and pharmacist. He also falls back a little too much upon his stock mannerisms for laughs, but there are few actors among us who could have done anything superior with the pitifully uncomplicated Jimmy.

Marion De Beck, apparently a stranger in our midst, is present as the necessary girl who happens to be the daughter of Jimmy's not-too-dangerous rival for the drug affections of Centerville, Iowa. From this work it is impossible to even appraise the screen value of Miss DeBeck.

Andrew Robson plays Silas Rogers, the "shrewd" busisess man, who, with very little struggle, hands over a million dollars for the controlling interest in Centerville's most popular medicine.

Victor Potel, Frances Raymond and Graham Pettie are all well placed as Jingo Pitts, the village editor, Aunty Knight and Martis Duffey.

Jack Nelson directed "One a Minute."

"THE GOLDEN SNARE"

Kinema

The James Oliver Curwood screen offering of his original Arctic story, "The Golden Snare," compares more than favorably with both pictures of its type, and a random shot choice of the month's releases. There are, as the readers of the book will testify, many amazingly imaginative incidents and sequences roped into the plot formation, but they are probably not marked enough to detract much from the entertainment value of the production which might, by the way, have been greatly increased had the suspense been managed with more conviction. Really gorgeous "shots" of Northwest scenery throw a glamor about the story which does much for it, and let us add that whoever handled the dogs is indeed due congratulation upon his work.

David Harford's direction is undoubtedly responsible for the picturesque gracefulness of his characters and scenes.

The cast is unusually fine.

Lewis Stone in one of his well-remembered mounted police roles is featured. He plays Sergeant Philip Raine, who has a mission which leads him into the white wastes and finds for him a tender love. His work is very good. Surely the mounted police uniform was designed for this actor's own particular fascination.

Perhaps the picture's really striking moments are provided by Wallace Beery, who gives us his most consistent, in fact his best, characterization in Bram Johnson, an outlaw resident of the Arctic regions, whose brutality cannot rob him of a beautiful sympathy which his carefully handled loss of memory and futile, boylike passion for revenge, get for him. Bram might have proven a mess in less competent hands. The deliberation with which Beery interprets this role is unusual, even for him.

Ruth Renick must also be credited with some exceptionally clever work as Celie, a mystery child and Bram's lonely companion. Her almost uncivilized simplicity is wonderfully effective.

An adorably happy baby, little Esther Scutt, as the tiny waif whom Raine takes on as a pal, cinches heart-interest of her own brand from both the masculine and feminine fan.

Melbourne MacDowell, Francis MacDonald and Wellington Playtor are excellent types for "Doug" Johnson, Pierre Thoreau and Black Dawson.

"The Golden Snare" should prove very attractive from the box office standpoint. It is a First National release.

CHESTER ACTIVITIES

"Work," second of the Chester Comedies for distribution by Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., featuring Snooky, the "Humanzee," and directed by Harry Williams and Mort Peebles, was recently finished at the C. L. Chester Studio.

Closing shots are being taken of Chester Comedy No. 3, an all-star animal picture of a new type, from an original by Dot Farley. Vin Moore is directing.

C. L. Chester is making arrangements for more travel pictures.

SINGLE REEL COMEDIES

Keeping up with weekly releases of single-reel Vanity and Gayety comedies, the Christie company has recently completed three, and another is in progress.

"Wild and Willie" is a Gayety comedy featuring Henry Murdock and Josephine Hill, and was directed by Scott Sidney. "Oh, Brother" is another new Gayety comedy by Keene Thompson, which was made by Fred Sullivan, featuring Helen Darling and Henry Murdock.

"Eat and Be Happy" is a new Vanity comedy recently completed by Scott Sidney featuring Irene Dalton and Francis Feeney.

Sidney is now making "Afraid of His Wife," featuring Vera Steadman and Earl Rodney.

Leo White has been chosen for an important part in Miss Dupont's initial photoplay, entitled "The White Peacock Feather."

Violet Radcliffe has a part in Mary Pickford's current production, "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Eva Southern will be seen in the initial starring vehicle of Dupont, entitled "The White Peacock Feather."

Edith Chapman has been selected by Bayard Veiller for a prominent role in "Lady Fingers," starring Bert Lytell.

Ramsey Wallace and Freeman Wood will have parts in the new Dupont picture being produced at Universal City under the direction of Jack Conway.

Frederic KoVert, female impersonator, will play an important role in support of Miss Dupont in her initial feature for Universal, which Jack Conway is directing.

Fontaine La Rue, Theodore Roberts and William Boyd have been added to the cast of Ethel Clayton's latest Paramount offering, "Exit The Vamp," in production at the Lasky Studios.

Robert Frager, J. W. Johnstone, Mildred [illegible]ght and Margaret Davis appear in the [illegible] of the first Allene Ray five-reeler, about [illegible]e released by Western Pictures Cor[illegible]ion.

ELKS ENTERTAINED

Lodge No. 174, Tacoma Elks, were recent visitors at the Hamilton-White studios in Hollywood and were guided through the studios by W. W. Rarity, general manager of the company.

Chow Young will have a part in "Lotus Blossom."

Edward Le Veque has been engaged by the Harter-Wall productions as assistant and casting director.

Louis Dumar is playing a part with William Russell in his latest Fox feature, "The Girl from Long Acre."

Josephine Crowell and Helen Dunbar will enact important parts in the new Realart-May MacAvoy picture now filming.

The Milburn Moranti company has returned from a three weeks' location trip in northern California, where scenes were taken for the third of the series of Moranti pictures starring George Chesebro.

In the supporting cast of "The Love Charm," starring Wanda Hawley, are Warner Baxter, Mae Busch, Sylvia Ashton, Dick Rosson, Fritzi Ridgeway, Carrie Clark Ward and Henry Johnson.

Arthur R. Thompson has been commissioned as assistant field production manager by Harry Schenck, production manager at Universal City. Mr. Thompson's work will be on the sets with the various producing units.

James Rennie, Noel Tearl, Vivian Ogden and Mary Foy play the principal roles in "Star Dust," the Hobart Henley production in which Hope Hampton is featured and which will be released early this fall by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

GOLDWYN STORIES

E. Phillips Oppenheim's story, "Nobody's Man," has been purchased by Goldwyn and will be put into production as soon as a cast is selected.

Alice Duer Miller is busy writing a new story entitled "Say It With Flowers."

Vic Potel is playing Willie McNeil in "Bob Hampton of Placer."

Isabel Wilford is at present playing opposite Art Acord at Universal.

Carrie Clark Ward is playing the housekeeper in "Bob Hampton of Placer."

George Webb will enact an important role in Willat's production, "Fifty Candles."

Lillian Biron has a part in a Christie two-reel comedy now being directed by Frederic Sullivan.

Florence Wix is cast in the forthcoming Gladys Brockwell picture, in production at the Mayer Studio.

Frank Brownlee has signed with King Vidor to play an important part in that producer's current picture.

Little Doreen Turner has been signed by Chester Comedies to portray the feminine lead in its latest comedies.

Charles West, who has recently recovered from an attack of appendicitis, is playing Major Brant in "Bob Hampton of Placer."

Supporting Jimmie Adams in his next picture for Educational release, are Cliff Bowes, Kalla Pasha, Phyllis Allen and Tom Wood.

The Hamilton-White studio, represented in the Elks' parade at Redondo recently by seven of its bathing girls, was awarded first prize by the beach city B. P. O. E. The prize, consisting of $100, was divided equally among the girls.

SIX A YEAR

Comes the announcement of the formation of the Irish Pictures Co. to produce a series of six pictures the first year, to be released through independent exchanges.

Walter Steiner, director general of the new company, has under his supervision a staff of assistants consisting of Vincent de Maria, technical director; Frank de Maria, cameraman; Jack Goulde, business representative, and Meyer Keilsohn, scenario editor.

The company has secured the Ideal studio, Fort Lee, New York, where all productions will be made. "Tangled Hearts" will be the initial picture.

HEPWORTH PICTURES TO RELEASE

The plass of the Hepworth Picture Plays have materialized with an announcement made recently that the company has made up a release program for the fall. The first reelase will be "Alf's Button," which will be distributed by Associated First National. Other releases will be "Anna, the Adventuress," by E. Phillips Oppenheim; "Mrs. Erricker's Reputation," by Thomas Cobb, and "Sunken Rocks," by E. Temple Thurston. A release for the latter three productions has not as yet been decidd upon. Hepworth Picture Plays are the American organization of Hepworth Picture Plays, Ltd., of London, England.

"The Rendezvous dis Artistes," a cluster of little bungalows, has lately been completed by Jack Donovan.

Jacquelise Logan, Virginia Faire, Frances Fuller, and Lorna Moore, the Scottish novelist, are a few of the tenants.

Mr. Donovan is responsible for the architecture, also the artistic furnishings.

Ralph Lewis has been cost in Frank Lloyd's newest picture for Goldwyn.

"BACK PAY" COMPLETED

The photographing of "Back Pay" has been completed at the Hearst Astoria studio, New York. It was directed by Frank Borzage.

CAREWE FINISHED WITH MAYER

Edwin Carewe has completed his contract with Louis B. Mayer, and is affiliating with another producing organization.

Wilfred Buckland will act as art director for "Omar the Tentmaker," which Richard Walton Tully is making for First National at the Hollywood Studios.

NEW CULLISON UNITS

Los Angeles.—Webster Cullison is making arrangements to produce western dramas, comedy dramas and educatiosals, and will rent space at the Francis Ford studios.

MARY ANDERSON IN COMEDY DRAMAS

Having fiinished with Charles Ray, Mary Anderson will commence her first of a series of comedy dramas for Spencer Prod., Inc., for release by Associated Photo-Plays, Inc.

Thomas H. Ince's latest production for Paramount, "The Bronze Bell," a story of British East India, based on Louis Joseph Vance's novel of the same name, will be the feature picture at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of July 18th.

Imported Talent

Last week, you may have observed in the news columns of this magazine and others, that the head of one of Los Angeles' producing companies was en route to New York in search of players and story material for his star's forthcoming production. Not much in itself, was it? Merely a notice which made equally as good reading as publicity. In other words, the type of stuff which we must always welcome as news, the one justification of every trade paper.

But as we read and edited that short paragraph, we experienced an annoyance at its content which we anticipated sharing with the many who were soon to run across it in their weekly wanderings for production information. Because the article was tinged with the insidious and ironical, our expectations were realized and we have at hand many expressions of resentment against those few lines.

There is no use covering over the fact that the motion picture industry has just bridged its most trying stretch, that it has miraculously enough survived the floods of near-panic which threatened to wash away the foundations of its structure so short a time ago. It would be equally futile to deny that the profession is yet suffering, while laboriously overcoming the dire effects of this ominous lack of studio activity which we have known. Its direct result may be seen in the hundreds of the screen's foremost actors and playwrights who have been walking Hollywood Boulevard with their cars in soak to balance their grocery bills. Such a condition is deplorable, but not exactly unbearable, until the studios commence to drag in outside material to fill the few stray engagements now open.

It is an undisputed fact that the film capital contains the greatest number of picture artists ever assembled in one city; while our score of famous scenarists have never been excelled. Could there then exist a logical reason for the passing up of such capabilities in favor of certainly no superior, and in many instances unknown, quantities of eastern importation? It wouldn't seem even worthy of consideration, would it?

Until the Los Angeles production departments can handle the art already at their disposal, they are in pretty poor business to be inviting in more competition, that mere living may be made harder for all, including their own benighted selves. For even the publicity attached to such enterprise falls far short of making up for the increased expense which they feel thereby. Far be it from us to be narrow in our loyalty, but in these strenuous times our recommendation to the Los Angeles producer is to combine good sense with far-sightedness and keep our own at work.—F. R.

"The Old Nest"

Repetition is valuable only when it improves upon former efforts. Reginald Barker and Rupert Hughes have done in "The Old Nest" what Fox failed to accomplish in "Over the Hill." The two productions are attempts in the same direction, but while the latter mentioned is a draggy, ridiculously overdrawn story containing only one excellent performance, and possibly two more that are passable, "The Old Nest" is a naturally told, well directed, dramatic narrative of family life interpreted by an all-star cast that disappoints in no single instance. Further, "Over the Hill" is a technical mess; Mr. Hughes' film play has been effectively scenarized and splendidly photographed, while Hughes' subtitles are, as the case may be, genuinely touching or cleverly shaded with irony, as against the most inferior ones in the other piece. It is remarkable, indeed, what just "knowing how" means to the creation of anything. Again we say in its line "The Old Nest" excels. Its homely pathos and comedy are equally real, and the people it includes represent that class of well meaning human beings who go to make up the greater portion of this world's populace.

A novelty in the way of introducing the rather numerous characters in the play, and some unexpected but well placed suspense add the finishing touches to "The Old Nest's" success. It will have a great general appeal.

Each of the plays which we have been comparing centers about the mother of a large family. We had nothing but admiration for Mary Carr's portrayal of that role in "Over the Hill." Her work was beautiful, but Mary Alden offers us a classic in Mother Anthon, the foremost figure in Goldwyn's presentation. In fact, it would be impossible to say too much for this artist's work. Every point given her, and they are numerous, is accepted and perfectly handled. Particularly subtle is her interpretation of the self-contained misery which her lonely character experiences when bereft of the family for which she had lived. We may safely say that this is the best performing of its kind that we have seen. It is also Miss Alden's greatest role, and is in itself worthy of the work of a lifetime.

Dwight Crittenden is responsible for a carefully thought out portrayal. He plays with great understanding Dr. Anthon, the typical father of the typical, progressive American family of the upper middle class.

The Anthon children grown are all unusually well done by Richard Tucker, Louise Lovely, J. Park Jones, Cullen Landis and Helene Chadwick. Each part is comparatively small, but all are both consistent and complete, as are those done by the dandy group of little troupers who enact the family as youngsters. It includes Lucille Ricksen, Johnny Jones, Buddy Messenger, Billie Cotton, Marie Moorhouse, Robert DeVilbiss and Marshall Ricksen.

Billy Eugene is to be congratulated upon the accomplishment of that most difficult of things, a comedy "bit" that lives. Others in the cast are Theodore Von Eltz, Molly Malone, Nick Cogley and Fanny Stockbridge.

Film Capital Production Notes

AT THE MONTAGUE STUDIOS

"The Evil Shadow" is the second production of a series of five features now being filmed at the Montague studio, San Francisco. The story is by Walter Montague and is being directed by Harry Revier. In the cast supporting Roy Stewart are Louise Lovely, Harry Van Meter, Eugene Burr, Kernan Wallace, Katherine Angus and Dorothy Valega.

Harry J. Edwards is busy cutting the first of a series of comedies to be made by the Max Robert Syndicate.

NAZIMOVA'S LATEST TO BE RELEASED

Madame Nazimova's production of "Camille," on which cutting and editing practically have been completed, will be released shortly.

The cast of the Nazimova film is headed by Rudolph Valentino, and Edward Connelly also plays an important part.

ANOTHER LLOYD RE-ISSUED COMEDY

"All Aboard" is the title of the next Harold Lloyd comedy of the series of reissued one-reelers, which Pathe has scheduled for release during the week of July 31. In this comedy, Lloyd is supported by Bebe Daniels and "Snub" Pollard, now being featured in Hal Roach comedies.

ANIMATED CARTOON ANNOUNCED

"The Country Mouse and the City Mouse" is the new animated cartoon of the series of "Aesop's Film Fables," created by Cartoonist Paul Terry, and produced by Fables Pictures, Inc. The short subject feature has been scheduled for release by Pathe during the week of July 31.

FINISHES CUTTING

Alex Troffey has finished the cutting and editing of "The Light in the Clearing," a T. Hayes Hunter production, for the Dial Film Company.

ANIMAL STORY COMPLETED

The Bradbury twins, the wild animal trappers of the Pathe series of "The Adventures of Bill and Bob," have completed the filming of their Canadian lynx trapping adventure, under the direction of Val Paul, and are preparing to start production on their next adventure story.

FINISHES FIFTH

The Cyrus J. Williams Co. has completed the production of "The Honor of Ramirez," its fifth picture of the second series for Pathe, and director Robert Bradbury has returned from Keen's Camp with his players, who included Tom Santschi, Ruth Stonehouse, Bessie Love and Eddie Hearn.

CHAPLIN PREVIEW

A preview showing of Charles Chaplin's latest feature, "The Idle Class," was given at the Raymond Theatre in Pasadena recently before a gathering consisting of Mr. Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Rob. Wagner, John McCormick, western representative of Associated First National, and the staff of the Chaplin studio and friends.

Mr. Chaplin has been working on "The Idle Class" for the past twenty-two weeks. Besides Mr. Chaplin, the cast consists of Edna Purviance, Loyal Underwood, Harry Bergman, Rex Storey, John Rand, Lelita Parker and Allen Garcia.

OWN PRODUCING COMPANY

Lloyd Ingraham, who recently finished directing Carter De Haven in "My Lady Friends," is busy on the plans for his own producing company.

AT UNIVERSAL

"The Mayor of Gopher Hole," a two-reel western featuring Art Acord, has been completed by Edward Laemmle. Isoble Wilford makes her debut in pictures opposite the western star.

"Bransford of Rainbow Ridge," a Eugene Manlove Rhodes' story, is being used by Hoot Gibson as a starring vehicle. Production on the story is under way, with Jack Ford directing.

Associates of Tod Browning have seen the first screening of "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story which has just been completed. The story was filmed with Mabel Julienne Scott in the name role.

Marie Prevost has started work on "The Girl Who Knew All About Men," a comedy by Roy Clements, which is being directed by King Baggot.

Production will start presently on a serial which will go to the screen as eighteen chapters from American history. The story is called "Winners of the West," written by Ford Beebe from history, and will feature Art Acord. It will be directed by Edward Laemmle.

Jack Conway is filming the concluding scenes of "The Rage of Paris," formerly entitled "The White Peacock Feather," and plans are being made for the filming of "Ropes," the star's next vehicle, from the one-act playlet of that name by Wilbur Daniel Steele.

Gladys Walton has finished "The Ark Angel," under the direction of Maj. David Kirkland.

AT GOLDWYN

E. Mason Hopper, who has directed several Rupert Hughes stories, has been assigned to handle the megaphone on "The Wall Flower," the latest product of this author's pen. It will embody an altogether new idea in motion picture photography, evolved by Mr. Hughes.

"Grand Larceny," Albert Payson Terhune's novel, will go into production this week under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

AT VITAGRAPH

Earl Williams has started work upon a five-reel picture called "Lucky Carson," from the novel "Salvage," by Aquila Dempster. Wilfrid North and Robert Ensminger will co-direct this picture.

William Duncan's new production, "The Comeback," is being made.

AT REALART

Bebe Daniels' next picture, on which she will start shortly, is at present entitled "Spring Fever." It is an original story by Katherine Pinkerton and Grace Drew Brown. Chester M. Franklin will direct from the scenario by Douglas Doty.

Constance Binney's first story at the Western Realart studio will be based upon "The Heritage of Dedlow Marsh," by Bret Harte. Adaptation is being made by Fred Myton, and Major Maurice Campbell will direct.

AT METRO

Rex Ingram has started preparations for the filming of "Turn to the Right," his forthcoming all-star photoplay.

Maxwell Karger is preparing for the filming of "The Golden Gift," Alice Lake's new starring vehicle, which he will direct.

Current Reviews

"THE BRONZE BELL"

Grauman's

Another Thos. Ince-Louis Joseph Vance feature is released this week locally. It is a Del Andrews and Louis Stevens adaptation of Vance's novel of the same name. As those who are familiar with the original will remember, the plot which hinges upon the marked resemblance of two men, is surrounded by the far-reaching political intrigues and the superstitions of Hindustan. Although the story steps far over the melodramatic line and deals, we might say, overly much with the coincidental, still as a gorgeously dressed mystery play it is "there." Its fast action never lets down and consequently it certainly cannot be said to be padded as was "Beau Revel," the first production of the Ince-Vance combination.

Some elaborate, heavy sets and very good photography help out considerably, while the direction, by James W. Horne, will pass.

The cast is exceedingly good and its members are well chosen for their positions.

Courtenay Foote interprets dual roles, namely, Har Dual Rutton and David Amber. The former is a powerful Hindu prince who hesitates at revolution and thereby incites the hatred of those in control of the faked Voice issuing from a bell which has for years guided the destinies of the superstition-enslaved natives. How he flees, is followed and finally induces David Amber, a white man, to accept his identity that India may be benefited, forms the plot's running start. Amber himself has very little sympathetic action outside of the fact that he is a dauntless adventurer. His romantic love interest is very much submerged. Foote is unusually good in both parts. Particularly is he well poised as Rutton.

One of the most striking pieces of work in the picture is offered by John Davidson, who does Salig Singh, Rutton's prime minister. Davidson is a wonderful Eastern type, while his accentuated deliberation of movement and almost feline grace throw a weird fascination around his character.

Doris May enacts Sophia Farrell, the daughter of an English colonel, stationed in India. She has comparatively little footage, although she provides the love interest. Her action is perfectly satisfactory, however.

Claire Du Brey lends quite some color to Nairaini, a sort of Hindu adventuress, in colleague with Salig Singh.

Noble Johnson, Otto Hoffman, Gerald Pring, C. Normand Hammond, Howard Crampton and Fred Huntley all do minor roles exceptionally well.

"The Bronze Bell" will please the admirers of the old-time mystery drama, even though its rather loud English propaganda may displease the many whose senses of humor are underdeveloped.

"THE TEN DOLLAR RAISE"

California

It is an event worthy of great celebration to run on to a comedy drama this summer that provides coolly uncomplicated, and, at the same time, thoroughly interesting entertainment. In fact, such pictures just aren't being done. However, the exception proves the rule and "The Ten Dollar Raise" is it. Moreover, this film play is even more marked because it is a successful adaptation. As we have previously remarked and repeated, these last are being put over much less frequently than might be expected with any great degree of satisfaction. Nevertheless this story of Peter B. Kyne's, without, perhaps, embodying anything startlingly different, contains all of the required photoplay constituents which have been well combined in the scenario and lucidly set forth by Edward Sloman in his direction.

Mr. Kyne has appropriately dedicated "The Ten Dollar Raise" to the underdog with whom it deals. Someway there is always a "kick" attached to the "worm who turns," and around such a worm is this rather simple yarn constructed.

COLETTE FORBES

Now playing an important part with Earle Williams.

The production is particularly to be commended for the superior characterizations of its leading players and the general excellence of its technique.

Long have we desired to see several of our favorite character artists featured. In this play we have that pleasure in one instance, for William V. Mong, whose comedy and pathos are well nigh unsurpassable, heads the cast in the role of Wilkins, the beforementioned bookkeeping insect who, for fifteen years, accepts underpaid drudgery as the inevitable. That his revolt after such an exaggerated patience is all the greater when the final, impossible straw descends upon his load, is but natural—and thereby hangs the tale. Mong is truly beautiful in the part. Each little touch that he adds to poor Wilkins assists him to live pathetically, amusingly, nobly for his audience. There are no oversights in the precise, faithful characterization, and there are no misses when Mong goes after laughs. He gets them! Wilkins is a screen personality who will be remembered.

Helen Jerome Eddy further demonstrates her versatility with Emily, the romantic old maid, whose adoration of Wilkins is fully reciprocated. Her oddly fitting garments and ribbon jabots are marvels to behold, but Emily is lovable withal and has much sympathy in what seems to be an ill-fated love dream.

The young love element of the story which is scarcely necessary but still, as handled, a good touch, is managed by Pat O'Malley and Marguerite de la Motte, who play Jimmie, a regulation juvenile, and Dorothy, an average daughter of the modern business man. There is little to justify their presence save the appeal which always follows good-looking youth.

Lincoln Plumer and Charles Hill Mailes contrast effectively as Bates, a slave-driving employer, who rather gives the impression of being a bit less shrewd than the financial demons of our country have heretofore been stamped, and Stryker, his less aggressive partner, whose thrift is evidently supposed to be demonstrated by the fact that he employs the trolley in lieu of a limousine. If some of the action of these two seems inconsistent it is yet unimportant, for they form the right background for what goes forward in their office.

Hallam Cooley completes the list of players by being well cast in the role of Don Bates, a ne'er-do-well, who, by the way, furnishes the worm's lucky last straw.

"The Ten Dollar Raise," which is presented by J. L. Frothingham through Associated Producers, is an excellent hot weather photoplay and should show gratifying box-office returns.

"THE WHISTLE"

Grauman's Rialto

Unless the lure of the screen proves too much for its most popular western star, we see big Bill Hart for the last time in "The Whistle," which is here for an indefinite run. Many thousands will miss the "good-bad man," whom they have followed for years, but—it means a lot to be missed, doesn't it? And anyway he has given us a humdinger for his farewell offering.

"The Whistle" is an original by May Wilmoth and Olin Lyman, dealing with a laborer and a capitalist. It claims to solve no problems save those of the characters in hand, which it proceeds to "see through" in an at-all-times absorbing manner. The theme of "The Whistle" tells us in a somewhat new way that one wrong has never righted another and that vengeance is not man's heritage.

As usual Lambert Hillyer is responsible for the more-than-satisfactory direction and the camera work is all that it should be.

Hart plays this time, Evans, an efficient factory foreman, whose life's tragedy comes in the form of what he considers his beloved son's unnecessary death in the mill's unprotected machinery. With bitter hatred in his soul for the employer who permitted such a condition to exist, he steals his enemy's tiny son to take the place of his own boy, after saving the baby from the river in which it is later believed to have been drowned. Only years and suffering prove the futility of any man's revenge, and restitution is made in the sympathetic way that this actor has of portraying the sorrow and sacrifice of the strong. Robert Evans is a typical Hart character, rendered as Hart may be depended upon to individualize his roles.

Frank Brownlee is well placed as Henry Chapple, the negligent capitalist who isn't too "heavy" to love his family and to reform easily. He makes his part really very human on account of this last. Most of our opposition is inexcusably over drawn.

Myrtle Stedman enacts Mrs. Chapple, a comparatively minor role, in her customarily good form, while some exceedingly natural work is done by Will Jim Hatton and Georgie Stone, who play respectively, Danny, Evans' boy, and Georgie, the Chapple child, who knows the silent man as his kindly uncle and his own parents not at all.

Little Richard Headrick is adorable as Georgie, the baby.

"The Whistle" is Paramount's local, long-run release.

The Screen Writers' Forum — Conducted by William E. Wing

NOT TOO LATE

Sweden has given us something to think about outside of the hired-girl problem.

A film leader from the country which provides Minnesota with its congressmen, has just exploded a truth in our midst which has startled even old Dobbin in his stall.

He says the namby-pamby screen productions and inevitable happy endings, at the expense of suspense and true art, are endangering the whole industry.

Once upon a time old Dad sent Sonny Boy forth with:

"Get money. Get it honestly if you can but—get the money."

But our disturbing guest from afar didn't qualify in the least by adding:

"Let us have art and noble theme—if they will get the money."

Nope.

He forgot the old wail entirely, but he flung a warning into the teeth of commercial production that should rattle the bones of all the Old Dads.

Of course the Swedish film leader didn't realize how much the paid uplifter is interfering blindly with production of stories which should be told. But he actually saw an army of men who, before the days of the cash-register reformer, buried art under a rain of dollars.

Writers are willing —always have been willing—to give to the world the things which are worth while. They should do this on the screen, without swerving from their loyalty to the worthy story itself.

And they are going to do it, despite commercialism, and the censor who would not be if the pay-roll dried up.

JINGLING LAURELS

The well-known victor, who is presumed to have a first mortgage upon the spoils, continues pleasantly in our midst. As in the past, he was trained to the minute. The lounge-lizard of promise ran last, as usual.

Tournaments are mighty interesting things when accompanied by a pleasant jingling sound, say to the tune of $5,000, as in this case of the J. Parker Read contest, when scenarios were asked for Louise Glaum, the film star.

Of the 10,000 and more contestants, dormant talent met with disappointment. All the winners proved to be those who had prepared faithfully for the event. The laurels went to:

Mrs. Frances White Elijah, Santa Barbara, $2,500; A. Earl Kauffman, York, Pa., $1,500; Mrs. Anna Blake Mesquida, San Francisco, $1,000.

So much for education and the trained individual.

O-O-OH! THE POOR EDITOR!

If you are a hopeful in the ranks, try and find the ACTION which the screen demands in ILLUSTRATION of situation, in the following paragraphs culled from actual stories sent to market. Perhaps you will take warning, bubt you better get understanding before making the plunge:

"Mary goes to the restaurant each day, hoping to see Jack, but he does not come. Finally, one day, she sees his approaching."

"Dugan enters his richly furnished apartments, uneasy and furtive. He looks from the window with a frown; he goes to the table and picks up a cigar but does not light it. He finally seats himself and ponders. Will they follow him? No, they cannot do that or the gang will expose itself. He decides to let matters continue as—etc., etc., etc."

"The alarm is given and the cowboys are startled. 'Arm yourselves!' cries the foreman. Jack enters the bunkhouse and paws under his bunk for his revolver. Dick has pawned his Colts, so he secures a shotgun somewhere. Red, as usual, has difficulity in locating his weapon. He can lose more things than anyone on the ranch. Irish doesn't have to hunt for his. He always wears it. Etc., etc."

PAUL WEIGEL
Playing in the "Rubaiyat," under Ferdinand Earle.

"Jane and John get to the city and begin going to parties, balls and auto rides. One day they quarrel and part. Jane is sad but John is stubborn and tells himself he won't make up the quarrel. Etc., etc."

"'Black' Dugan and our hero suddenly discover that they have mislaid the oars and that the boat is drifting towards the rapids. They are helpless. Death looms ahead. What can they do? In the meantime the girl, etc.—(Back to the boat and river). After Dugan and our hero make a spectacular escape. Etc., etc."

EVEN THE ELECT

There is food for thought for the photoplay writer in the little known fact that many successful writers of fiction continually rely upon critics for the aid they can give, before sending their stories to market. Some of the best known authors do this. There is a reason. Criticism is instructive. Each writer views his material with the single eye of the maker. It makes no difference who may provide the other optic, the outsider's views will be of some benefit; the trained observer's views of great benefit. Is this not a tip to the professional photoplaywright?

ADDED STRENGTH

The Screen Writers' Guild of America elected the following new members to the council of 30, at the annual meeting Thursday:

Ruth Ann Baldwin, Thompson Buchanan, Marion Fairfax, Frederick Palmer, Sir Gilbert Parker, Jack Cunningham, Bob Wagner, Elmer Harris, E. Percy Heath, Charles Kenyon, Dwight Cleveland and Lucien Hubbard.

DUSTING 'EM OFF

Always something new ahead.

Why not brush up and be ready?

Once a student, always a student.

Calf brains are highly acceptable in a cafe, but the human kind are appreciated by patrons of the picture theatre.

A story can be red-blooded and yet teach a lesson or convey a moral. Sugar the pill, and send them away happy, though regenerated.

Where is the needed story revealing romance and happiness in old age? You are holding out on a waiting public.

Why rock the boat? There are plenty of stories, yea, even melodramas, that can be written in place of the undesirable kind.

We hereby offer a prize consisting of one bar of soap to the person who will write a regular go-getter or a society drama without a villain. Curse 'im!

There wouldn't be much danger of the imported article if the American product were better. The hope of the screen lies with the well trained writer.

The imaginative but untrained writer has about the same chance of scoring as has the gifted but untrained musician who hopes to create a furore among impresarios of the country.

Slump? Perhaps also the public is getting the false note in the story where we invest the handsome youth and the bob-haired ingenue with the wisdom and psychology of those who have lived out the years.

If you heard some studio manager say: "Personally I do not like this story, but it probably would suit the public. Therefore, I will put it on," wouldn't it startle you? But I said "if."

The tendency to follow up big events with stories they suggest; nursing the senile triangle, and "marry or lose the money" are responsible for one-quarter of manuscript rejections. Are you guilty, or have you reformed?

DID YOU?

What did you get out of "Bill" week?

Did the message of flowers and the inspiration of music awaken something dormant but rather wonderful?

Did you go back to your desk and tear up something which, suddenly, had become unworthy?

And did you write again and put a new something in it?

Then you have added to the music and flowers of life.

PRIZE TITLE OF THE WEEK

(This one from the leading comedy studio.)

"NO ONE HAS EVER KISSED ME SINCE MOTHER DIED."

Darrell Foss refutes the rumor that he is to be married in the near future.

E. Burton Steene is at present in Venice, Italy, en route to Constantinople, Athens and points in the Balkan states.

Edward Kimball has an important role in "What No Man Knows," the latest Clara K. Young picture, which Harry Garson is directing.

The William A. Brady melodramatic production for Paramount, entitled "Life," comes to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of Monday, July 25th.

Pickups By the Staff

SECOND SCREEN EXPERIENCE

Frederick Warde will retire to his home at White Lake, New York, on the completion of the title role in Ferdinand Earle's production of the "Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam. The immortalization of Omar is Mr. Warde's second experience before the motion camera. Some years ago, he impersonated the Vicar of Wakefield, Silas Marner, and King Lear, in screen versions for Thanhouser of the works so titled.

WILL ADVERTISE SOUTHLAND

It is announced that the motion picture industry has planted itself behind the All-Year Club of Southern California in the drive for a $300,000 fund to advertise the Southland to the rest of America.

Producers, distributors and exhibitors of motion pictures unite in a pledge made through the Affiliated Picture Interests, Inc., in whose membership every distinct group of the industry is represented.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the film organization, held at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, the following committee was appointed by the executive chairman, Frank A. Garbutt, to apportion a quota of $7500 among the various interests: W. J. Reynolds (producers), Frank E. Woods (authors), Reginald Barker (directors), Ralph Lewis (actors), J. H. Goldberg (exchanges), Harry Lustig (theatre owners), and Francis R. E. Woodward (theatre managers).

DANCERS PROMOTE AMERICAN BALLET

Desire for an all-American ballet culminated in the organization among young professional dancers of an American Ballet Association recently.

The new organization has named Ernest Belcher maitre de ballet and general adviser. Louis Samuels is president of the Association; Lena Baskette, vice-president, and Warren Lee is secretary and treasurer. The association is planning to stage its own entertainment at a Los Angeles theatre within six months.

AMERICAN LEGION RE-UNION

Active aid of two hundred members of Hollywood's motion picture colony in promoting entertainment for the annual reunion of the Ninety-first division, to be held in Los Angeles shortly, has been promised by Roy H. Marshall, adjutant of Hollywood post of the American Legion.

STUDIO VISITOR

Helen Schneider, Thomas H. Ince's New York representative, was a visitor at the Ince studio this week. Miss Schneider is on a vacation tour of the West.

ACTOR INJURED

Al W. Filson was injured recently when he was run down by a motor car, sustaining a fractured rib.

MILDRED DAVIS—ART STUDENT

Mildred Davis, who is a pupil in a Los Angeles art school, has agreed to write and illustrate a series of newspaper articles. Off-stage, Miss Davis is a pen and ink artist.

ROBERT GORDON

Appearing in R-C Pictures' film version of Balzac's story, "If Women Only Knew."

ELSIE FERGUSON LURED BY FOOTLIGHTS

Elsie Ferguson is on her way to Paris with her husband, Thomas B. Clarke. Before she sailed Miss Ferguson signed a contract with Sam H. Harris to return to the stage in "Varying Shores," by Zoe Akins. She will continue to appear in four Paramounts a year.

CHARLES DANA GIBSON MAKES SCREEN DEBUT

Charles Dana Gibson makes his screen debut in Pathe Review No. 114, in the presentation, "The Masters of American Art," one of the series of screen interviews with the leaders of American art. It is a Pathe Review feature.

Johnny Jones, accompanied by his mother and five-year-old sister, Virginia, has returned after a tour of personal appearances throughout the country.

NEW WILSON SERIAL

Ann Little will be the featured player in the newest Ben Wilson serial entitled, "Nanette of the North," the filming of which will begin at Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming, August 1st. Duke Worne will direct this serial.

CHURCH TO HELP IN CENSOR FIGHT

Regniald Barker has been invited by the Immanuel Presbyterian Brotherhood to attend a meeting to be held in Los Angeles presently to inaugurate a movement to "eliminate destructive censorship and senseless blue laws." William de Mille, King Vidor, Bert Lytell, and other film notables, will participate. Presbyterian brotherhoods throughout the country, with a combined membership of 500,000, are organizing to build closer relationship between the motion picture and the church.

WORLD DISTRIBUTION FOR FIRST NATIONAL

Colonel Fred Levy, member of the executive committee of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and main franchise holder for the stage of Kentucky, sailed recently for Europe on a world journey in the interests of First National.

Mr. Levy will study foreign film conditions as well as make arrangements for distribution of First National pictures throughout the world.

CADMAN COMPOSING "RUBAIYAT" SCORE

The musical score for the "Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam, which is reaching its cumulative point under the direction of Ferdinand Earle, is being composed by Charles Wakefield Cadman.

TAYLOR RETURNING

Wm. D. Taylor, who is on a three-month leave of absence to recover his health after a strenuous year of directing, is expected in Hollywood August 1st.

IN VAUDEVILLE

A trio, composed of Louise Fazenda, Ben Alexander and "Teddy," has recently signed to appear on the Orpheum circuit.

IN ITALIAN PICTURE

Marie Doro has returned from an extended European tour, during which time she starred in "Beatrice," an Italian photoplay, which will be released here by Goldwyn in the fall.

OCTOBER EUROPEAN TRIP

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks announce that they will take a trip to Europe in October. They expect to stop on the Riviera and later to travel through the Orient, where they contemplate making a picture.

GETTING EXTERIORS

The technical staff and principals of "Fifty Candles" are in San Francisco, shooting exteriors for this forthcoming Irvin Willat production.

WARREN CORPORATION NOTES

Reginald Barker, the newest independent producer, will release his pictures through the F. B. Warren Corporation, a new independent distributing company. Mr. Barker will make four pictures each year for world distribution.

The Warren Company will also release annually four pictures by Lois Weber, four by Victor Schertzinger, one big production from each of four European countries, Norway, France, Italy and England, and plans a revival of "Quo Vadis," and the presentation of a Bohemia-made picture and a Will Bradley short feature. The company will release one picture a week, starting September 4th.

HAMILTON-WHITE COMEDIES

Having completed the filming of "The Vagrant," Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton is preparing to start production on a new story, the title and details of which will be announced shortly. "The Vagrant" marks the second of the new series of Hamilton-White Mermaid comedies for Educational release.

Jack White will finish presently the filming of his latest comedy, the concluding scenes of which are being shot at Rancho La Brea.

RAY GALLAGHER WESTERNS

According to announcement from the Arthur Gooden studios, Ray Gallagher, who recently completed a series of two-reel westerns, has started work on the first of a series of five-reel western dramas. The title of the first story is "Injun Gold," by Arthur Henry Gooden. Charles Roberts is directing.

NEW HAROLD LLOYD COMEDY

Location sites are now being selected for the fourteenth Harold Lloyd comedy, production of which will begin shortly. Mr. Lloyd is at present engaged in going over the script of the new comedy, and supervising the assembling of his completed picture, "Look Before You Leap."

TWO NEW ONES

Two new Hallroom Boys comedies are completed and en route East under the titles "Meet the Wife" and "Two Faces West."

PATHE SERIALS

Pathe is offering a schedule of serials, which includes "The Black Secret," with Pearl White; "Daredevil Jack," with Jack Dempsey; "The Third Eye;" "Ruth of the Rockies," with Ruth Roland; "Velvet Fingers," with George B. Seitz and Marguerite Courtot; "The Avenging Arrow," with Ruth Roland; "The Yellow Arm," with Juanita Hansen, Marguerite Courtot, and Warner Oland; "Bound and Gagged," with George B. Seitz and Marguerite Courtot; "Adventures of Ruth," with Ruth Roland; "Trailed by Three;" "Pirate Gold," with George B. Seitz; "The Phantom Foe," with Juanita Hansen, Marguerite Courtot, Warner Oland and Wallace McCutcheon; "Double Adventure," with Charles Hutchison; and "The Sky Ranger," in which June Caprice is co-starred with George B. Seitz.

CHANGES DIRECTORS

A previous agreement with another producing organization prevented Victor Schertzinger from directing Jackie Coogan, and it has been decided that Victor Heerman will handle the megaphone for the little star.

Director Heerman is busy preparing the script, work on which will begin August 1 at the Brunton studios.

Casting will commence this week.

LOCATION SCENES

On the grounds of the Krotona Institute, a Hollywood theosophical community, Ferdinand Earle spent two days filming scenes for the "Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam recently. Frederick Warde as Omar, Edwin Stevens as the chief of Assassins, little Kathleen Key as "Thou," and Ramon Samaniegos, Hedwiga Reicher, Snitz Edwards and Paul Weigel participated.

RAWLINSON VEHICLE IN PREPARATION

Harvey Gates is writing the continuity for "The Black Bag," a mystery story by Louis Joseph Vance, in which Herbert Rawlinson will begin his starring contract with Universal. Mr. Rawlinson is at present in the British Columbia woods, supporting Priscilla Dean in the star's forthcoming Universal-Jewel production, "Conflict."

"BITS OF LIFE" HAS SHOWING

"Bits of Life," Marshall Neilan's latest picture for First National release, was given its first showing at the Raymond Theatre, Pasadena, recently. The negative has been shipped to New York.

The premiere attracted many of the independent stars releasing their photoplays through Associated First National. Among those present were: Charles Chaplin, Allen Holubar, Dorothy Phillips, Buster Keaton and Natalie Talmadge, Katherine MacDonald, Charles Ray, John M. Stahl, R. A. Walsh and Miriam Cooper, Marshall Neilan, Michael Gore, Abe Gore, and John McCormick.

Eunice Vin Moore has been cast for an important part in "Little Eva Ascends," George D. Baker's third production, to be filmed by S-L Pictures.

Tom Wilson and Irene Dalton appear in support of Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton in his latest Mermaid Comedy now being filmed at the Hamilton-White studios, for Educational release.

Eleanor Fields has been selected by George D. Baker for one of the leading roles in "Little Eva Ascends," his third production, to be filmed by S-L Pictures for Metro, with Gareth Hughes in the stellar role.

Will Walling, William Orlamond, Darwin Karr and L. H. King are some of the players engaged in the making of "Sin Flood" at the Goldwyn studio.

Frank Elliott has been engaged by Metro to enact one of the leading roles in Bayard Veiller's newest production, "Lady Fingers," in which Bert Lytell will be starred.

In "Snooky's Twin Troubles," first of the Chester Comedies to be distributed by Federated Film Exchanges, little Jean and Betty Steele (twins) have important parts.

Lige Conley and Marvel Rae are in the all-star cast of the new Jack White comedy just starting.

Claire Adams' mother and sister have come from Winnipeg, Canada, to make their home with her.

Edward Connelly will enact an important part in Rex Ingram's next picture, "Turn to the Right," filming at the Metro studios.

Eddie Linden, who photographed "Kazan" and "The Mask," has been engaged to do the camera work on "The Rosary" for Selig-Rork.

Dorothy Wallack, Dulcie Cooper, and Milla Davenport have been cast in "What No Man Knows," Clara K. Young's current production.

Theodore Von Eltz has an important role in support of Viola Dana in "The Fourteenth Lover," under the direction of Harry Beaumont. Mr. Von Eltz recently finished a part in the latest Bebe Daniels picture.

Current Reviews

"BOB HAMPTON OF PLACER"

Kinema

"Bob Hampton of Placer," Marshall Neilan's latest by Randall Parrish, makes one of the most picturesque historical novels that we have seen celluloided. Without being able to boast much of a story it must be credited with many thrills, much real comedy, and the famous Neilan suspense, which combination is sure to entertain any average audience. The criticism that the story's romantic love interest seems somewhat mixed and is more or less unjustified as it pans out, is due, but that is undoubtedly a minor matter, at least from the standpoint of the youngsters to whom this picture primarily belongs.

From a professional view the greatest art in the production is demonstrated in the quite marvelous photography, awe-inspiring scenic shots and perfectly managed battle action in Custer's last fight. Each scene is a correctly balanced painting in itself and every close-up is a portrait. The direction and Marion Fairfax's scenario are both excellent.

James Kirkwood in the title role is exceedingly well situated. He gathers quite an amount of sympathy for Bob, the genial gambler, who is ever looking for the man the stigma of whose crime he has borne for years. This is quite a characteristic Kirkwood part.

The picture's comedy and, it must be added, probably its deepest tear are provided by little old Wes Barry, who has certainly developed into an artist worthy of the name. As the ridiculously bowlegged little roughneck who resents girls, he keeps the audience quite boisterous, while his death scene is one of the play's most gripping moments.

Marjorie Daw is very pretty as Nadine, Bob Hampton's long lost daughter. She is exactly the type for her part.

Lieutenant Brant, her soldier sweetheart, is enacted by Pat O'Malley, who hasn't the ghost of a chance to appeal or make his character worthy of the romance which descends upon his head from Heaven, as it were.

The exceedingly shiverish opposition is provided by Noah Beery and Frank Leigh, who are excellent in their respective roles of Red Slavin, a crooked gambler, and Silent Murphy, a murdering scout under Custer's command. These two, with what appears to be many hundred Indians on the war-path, offer, as may be expected, a month of thrills.

Dwight Crittenden's make-up as Custer is unusually good, while Tom Gallery, Charles West, Loyola O'Connor, Bert Sprotte and Carrie Clark Ward complete the cast, each in a well handled minor part.

"Bob Hampton" is a First National attraction.

"PENNY OF TOP HILL TRAIL"

New Pantages

An entertaining little comedy-drama entitled, "Penny of Top Hill Trail," is Andrew Callaghan's last presentation through Federated Film Exchanges, starring Bessie Love. It is the celluloid version of Belle K. Maniates' story of the same name, the plot of which is a mystifying one of thieves and others winding up in a fairly strong surprise finish. Although the story is scarcely as firm as it is complicated, it is favorably comparable to the pictures of its type that we have been seeing, while the direction, by Arthur Berthelet, photography and technical effects, are good. Several of the subtitles are really clever, but others should have been cut in more lucidly.

A very good cast surrounds Miss Love, who characterizes with artistry the title role in that inimitable little way of hers, which we remember so well. It is hard to understand why she is not starring at the present time, for in real bona fide cleverness she excels, it is safe to say, seventy-five per cent of our busier ingenues. She makes "Penny," an honest-to-goodness modern girl in search of adventure, as such girls usually are.

Wheeler Oakman is very well established as Kurt Walters, a ranch superintendent with old fashioned ideas. He is also exceedingly picturesque.

Again our contemporaries, who have heretofore been so markedly kind, must handle the review of Joe Gary, the romantic cowpuncher, played by Raymond Cannon.

Herbert Fortier is good as Hebler, while Harry De Vere, Lizette Thorne, Gloria Holt and Georgie Stone complete the cast.

"THE MAN WHO"

Tally's

The screen version of "The Man Who," a Lloyd Osborne Saturday Evening Post story, provides Bert Lytell's latest starring vehicle for Metro release. It is a highly amusing comedy, revolving about a returned soldier who at the instigation of the most attractive girl he knows, sets out to be "a man who"—does things. The girl's displeasure at his ridiculous methods and the sympathy which he finds elsewhere keep the picture travelling pretty evenly once it gets on its feet. The start seems hard to make, somehow, which is always a misfortune. Much of the direction is good, while there are spots where it stumbles a little. Photographically and technically otherwise, it is up to standard.

Lytell as Bedford Mills, "the man who," in this case, walks the streets fully clad save for shoes and hosiery that he may assist humanity by lowering the cost of footwear and thereby be referred to as "a man who"—is thoroughly refreshing in his comedy. His present role means more and gives him far more opportunity to please than has much of his recent work, including "The Message from Mars."

Virginia Valli, who plays the leading feminine part opposite the star, has a distinct personality, which is really charming. We will welcome seeing her again.

Helen Jessop, the society girl who has ambitions for Beddy, is ridiculously exaggerated for comedy by Lucy Cotton. As it happens, however, her part is so placed that all is well.

Very small parts are done by Frank Currier, Tammany Young, Fred Warren, Clarence Elmer, William Roselle and Mary Louise Beaton.

"The Man Who" is a Maxwell Karger production.

A. D. A. OFFERS ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM AT BARN DANCE

Wallace Reid and his Jazz Band will form one of many features of the Annual Dance of the Assistant Directors' Association, to be given Saturday evening, July 30th, at the National Studios. This aggregation consists of three drummers, four saxaphone manipulators, two violinists who use all of Max Fisher's latest gymnastic stunts in playing, one cello player, and one pianist, all of whom give promise of a most interesting and amusing collection of jazz music under the personal direction of "Wallie."

Pauline Frederick will have charge of the Hot Dog Concession, with three professional girls as her assistants in serving the guests.

Jane Novak has been spending her time for the past three weeks at her favorite soda fountain getting "wised up" on how to mix 'em, for she will manage the Soda Booth.

Wallace Berry has been rounding up all the Hawaiian Girls and Boys in California to appear in his Honolulu Village, but when questioned as to what he was going to put on in the way of a show, he just pulled a Theda wink and smiled. However, we all know Wallie.

The merchants and business men of Hollywood and Los Angeles have shown their appreciation of the pep and push of the Association by buying a block of tickets to give to their employees, and through the co-operation of these firms the Association has been able to complete the thousand and one details of what is expected to be the biggest dance of the film year.

IDA RUBINSTEIN FILM

"The Ship," Italian photoplay recently acquired by Goldwyn for distribution in this country, is a screen version of Gabriel D'Annunzio's novel of the founding of Venice, "La Nave."

In the leading role is Ida Rubinstein, Russian dancer. Gabriel D'Annunzio, the poet's son, directed this film, which required a year in the making.

NEW COMPANY

Mary Savage, president of the Mary Savage Corporation of New York, the American Vesta Tilly boy impersonator, will arrive shortly from the East, and will start at the head of her own company, producing "The Impossible Boy," from the book by Nina Wilcox Putnam, for which she has acquired the screen rights.

CHILDREN IN HUGHES' STORY

Johnny Jones, Lucille Ricksen, Buddy Messenger, Marshall Ricksen, Robert DeVilbiss and Billie Cotton, previously in "Earthbound," are the six children players cast in "The Old Nest," receiving a pre-release showing at the Astor Theatre, New York.

KERN PRODUCTIONS AT FORD STUDIO

Harry Ellis Dean, business manager for the Producers Pictures Corporation, filming the George H. Kern productions, has moved the office of that company from the Hollywood Studios to the Francis Ford Studios, where he has been appointed attorney and general manager. Dean will divide his time between the two organizations awaiting the return of George H. Kern, who left recently for St. Louis for a preview of his "Unfoldment" with the executive officers of the Producers Pictures Corporation, located in that city.

Kern expects to return to Los Angeles shortly and start production on "The Scarlet Avalanche," adapted from Bulwer Lytton's story, "The Last Days of Pompeii."

C. B. C. FILMS

"The Scorpion's Sting" is the title of the newest of the two-reel Westerns released by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation for the state rights market. The cast includes Aubrey Beers, Hal Ferner, Richard Johnson, Bonny Gray, and Marie Mayo.

A new C. Edward Hatton two-reel Western, titled "Desperate Chances," has been shipped East. Catherine Craig, who has played opposite Mr. Hatton in the last releases on this series, is again his leading woman.

REGARDING NEW COMPANY

Lester A. Michael, Secretary and General Manager of the Precision Pictures Corporation, which is to produce a series of two-reel comedies, states that work on its new studio in Lansdowne, Pa., will be completed presently, when Joe Conway will take possession to direct the series, which will be known as Omar Comedies. Announcement of distribution of the series will be made in the near future.

FINISHES TITLING

Thomas N. Miranda, who wrote the titles in "The Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," has just finished titling Emmett Flynn's current feature, "The Last Trail," a Fox picture. "Shame," (soon to open on Broadway), "Gleam O' Dawn," John Gilbert's first starring vehicle, and "Straight From the Shoulder," with Buck Jones, are other pictures recently titled by Mr. Miranda.

AT LASKY'S

Work was started by Sam Wood lately on the all-star production as yet unnamed, in which Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter appear in the leading roles. Location scenes in Pasadena mark the beginning of the picture. Thompson Buchanan is supervising.

Jack Holt is preparing for his first stellar vehicle, which is to be announced shortly. Rollin Sturgeon will supervise Mr. Holt's picture.

Penrhyn Stanlaws is making progress with his picture, "The Woman in the Case," in which Betty Compson is the star.

INCE STUDIOS

Del Andrews has completed cutting "The Cup of Life," to be released soon by Associated Producers. Hobert Bosworth, Madge Bellamy, Tully Marshall and Niles Welch constitute the all-star cast. Rowland V. Lee directed.

Final scenes of "Lucky Damage," a temporarily titled Ince special, were completed this week, under the direction of Lambert Hillyer.

Lewis Milestone is preparing Douglas MacLean's latest release, "Passin' Thru," for the laboratories. Mr. MacLean is assisting with the cutting.

HOLLYWOOD BOY IN GREENWICH FOLLIES

Following his recovery from a wrenched ankle sustained last season while dancing in the Greenwich Village Follies, Allen Johnson, pupil of Ernest Belcher, is on his way East for the opening rehearsals of this season's Follies at the Village theatre.

Lowell Sherman has been given a part in the new Clara K. Young picture in production at the Harry Garson studios.

Another Phase of the Strike

Now that we have just reached the point where it seems that things are looking up for our gasping industry, we discover, some of us with real discouragement, that another strike has been directed at our professional heads. Of course, we might have expected it! Lowered wages are as inevitably "strike" in troublous days like these, so organized labor has decreed, as two and two are four. Our mechanics' salaries have been cut and our mechanics have struck. If the remedy were as simple to understand as is the situation itself, there would be little cause for apprehension after all.

Indeed, looking only at the surface of things, it might really seem that there has been an undue amount of hue and cry over this occurrence. If such is the case, it is easy to perceive that one of two things should happen quickly. The first has to do with the return of the Union man who is now walking out. That to come back will again be his prerogative is evidently doubted in some quarters where it is argued that there are many not-so-particular and equally competent workers to fill less expensively the places of the departing few. If these outsiders should be hired and the Unions ousted, this incident would mean but a slight interruption in present production plans, and although in such an event a boycott of the product of the organizations who follow this procedure would be attempted, perhaps even put over with effectiveness by the American Federation of Labor, it is somewhat significant to note that a boycott is not feared generally at this time.

From another and just as sane a viewpoint, it would appear likely that the present labor demands will be met by the producer to save a hold-up during this critical period, and to insure a standard class of technical work for the comparatively few pictures now being prepared for release. So it should be settled one way or the other with dispatch and with no great injury sustained by the industry. These are the only logical outcomes.

But—all that we have said applies here only if this controversial condition is a usual one caused by the same old differences. Should it have been precipitated by less worthy and more complicated motives, as has been suggested, we are facing an entirely different and more menacing problem than many of us have previously conceived.

We all know of the advent of the inferior foreign film and of its rejection by the majority. We have also considered much the fact that various big producing corporations are now embarrassed by a large amount of this material which the wary exhibitor is avoiding. It would be a financial feather in some one's cap to figure an unloading stunt, wouldn't it? Such a feat, as we all realize, could only be accomplished by starving the booker into submission with reduced or temporarily discontinued production. But there are many of our independents who, possessing no foreign pictures, would scarcely cease activities to benefit those who have them. And now the possibilities of a general strike present themselves. Even the independents are tied up more or less when it comes to matters of this kind, and a general salary cut for the technical man, along with its results, might easily have been premeditated by the powers that be. Without wishing to insinuate anything which we are in no position to prove, we yet hold that every angle of every situation should be lightened as much as possible. If we have traitors in our midst they deserve nothing so much as exposure. This subject will stand a little thought from all departments of the industry.

A Camera Corner

John Leezer, A. S. C., opens a column for the cinematographer in this issue. Although the articles will be in letter form, Mr. Leezer will also answer questions upon photography. Here's an opportunity for the young camera artist to learn something while the older one may anticipate a "kick" from the challenging which he will be allowed to do at all times unrestrainedly.

Story: $0.00

By Frederick Bennett

It has been my fortune to see four estimates of costs of production during the past week. The average director's salary is quoted at less than one-half of what it used to be; some of the men who were once regarded as essential to the staff of any production have been eliminated, such as assistant camera man and assistant director, and in one case the wife of the producer was taking charge of the dressing of sets and renting of props. In EVERY CASE there was a general slashing in pay. Extras were quoted at five dollars; charactermen and character women who have been getting from fifteen dollars up per day quoted at seven-fifty.

Whether this is justified or not I do not presume to say, but when I saw that the costs of stories were ABSOLUTELY IGNORED, I could not help thinking that the Motion Picture industry is out of infancy and into imbecility. I asked one of the producers about this situation and he said: "Let the actors and the directors dope their own stories, there are plenty of old ones that they can make over."

That is even cheaper than the German films and will do much greater harm. THE PUBLIC REMEMBERS. YOU CAN'T SERVE HASH ALL THE TIME.

Film Capital Production Notes

TARKINGTON PHOTOPLAY

Booth Tarkington has completed the scenario of his story, "The American," which he has written as the initial starring vehicle for Miss Gladys Gentry of Louisville, (Ky.), who recently made her screen debut with Bert Lytell in "The Man Who—." "The American" will be the first of a series of photoplays in which Miss Gentry will be starred, designed especially for churches and schools as well as the cinema theatre, although the subjects treated will be neither educational nor religious in character, but selected solely for their entertainment value.

DORALDINA TO FILM ON CONTINENT

Doraldina, dancer and motion picture star, who has been making a trip through the south and central western states making personal appearances in conjunction with the showings of her latest picture, "Passion Fruit," is about to announce that her next picture, an historical spectacle, will be made by her own company, either in France or Italy.

MOUNTAIN STORIES

The five-reel mountain story titled, "The White Rider," recently completed by D. & M. Productions, featuring Alma Rayford and Denver Dixon, has been accepted by the distributing company for whom it was made and a contract for a series of seven more is now being negotiated.

STARTING

The title of Tom Santschi's next picture, which is the sixth of the Cyrus J. Williams series being produced for Pathe, is "The Spirit of the Lake," by Bob Bradbury, who is also directing it.

The company left recently for Keen's Camp for exterior shots.

BILL AND BOB SERIES

The Bradbury twins and their director, Val Paul, have departed for a fishing cruise to Santa Catalina Island for the second epi sode of the new "Adventures of Bill and Bob" series which Cyrus J. Williams is producing for Pathe.

TITLED

"The Recoil" is the title selected by the Morante Producing Co. for its latest five-reel production featuring George Chesebro. The company, which includes Evelyn Nelson and Virginia Morante, has recently returned from a three weeks' location expedition through the Yosemite country and is at present engaged in preparations for interiors which will be filmed at the Balboa studios in Long Beach.

KEATON COMEDY

"The Goat," starring Buster Keaton, is finished and ready for release. This picture was jointly written and directed by Mr. Keaton and Mal St. Claire for Joseph M. Schenck.

CUNEO COMMENCES WORK

Announcement is made through Charles A. Mack of Doubleday Productions that Lester Cuneo has arranged to produce "Pat O'Paradise," the story by Leo Meehan and Henry McCarty.

IN PRODUCTION

R. A. Walsh has completed arrangements to leave for the north presently with his company to begin the filming of Peter B. Kyne's novel, "Kindred of the Dust."

ALLAN CAVAN

Supporting Dustin Farnum in "The Primal Law"

FORTHCOMING METRO PRODUCTIONS

President Richard A. Rowland of Metro, announces four forthcoming Viola Dana vehicles: "The Cave Lady," "The Five Dollar Baby," "That Girl Patsy" and "Rings and Things"; also four Alice Lake specials, "The Hole in the Wall," "June Jeopardy," "The Making of Eleanor Jay" and "Moonlight"; and three more Geo. D. Baker productions for S-L starring Gareth Hughes, "Barber John's Boy," "The Gay and Festive Claverhouse" and "Tommy Carteret."

TO DIRECT EDUCATIONAL FILMS

George Frederic Wheeler of New York has been engaged to direct the first production for L. H. Ormsby of the U. S. Educational Films Corporation of Los Angeles. Mr. Wheeler's recent connection was with the Atlas Educational Film Company of Chicago.

THOMAS B. WALSH PRODUCTION

Director Thomas B. Walsh has recently completed his first independent production, "Shams of Society," in which Barbara Castleton, Montague Love, Macey Harlan, Lucille Lee Stewart and others are seen.

It was made for Walsh-Fielding Productions and will be released by R-C Pictures. The working title was "Worldly Goods."

AT REALART

Mary Miles Minter is scheduled to arrive from her European trip the last of August and will start forthwith upon "Tillie, the Mennonite Maid," which has been adapted to the screen by Alice Eyton.

May McAvoy is completing "The Happy Ending," by Hector Turnbull, which Frank O'Connor is directing.

AT UNIVERSAL

Marie Prevost has gone to Little Bear to film the opening scenes for her forthcoming photoplay, "The Girl Who Knew All About Men," which King Baggot is directing.

Eileen Sedgwick is on the eighteenth episode of her current serial, which Edward Kull is directing. George Larkin has the principal masculine role in Miss Sedgwick's support.

"Flying Fists" has been decided upon as the new title for "The Reverend Meddler," the William Harper Dean story which Frank Mayo recently completed, under the direction of William Worthington.

"Wild Honey," a story by Cynthia Stockley, has been chosen as Priscilla Dean's next starring vehicle.

The title of "The Butterfly," Marie Prevost's recently completed story, is changed to "Moonlight Follies." It was directed by King Baggot and is scheduled for early release.

AT VITAGRAPH

Larry Semon enacts two parts in "The Bell Hop," his latest comedy under production.

"Steelheart" is the final title selected for William Duncan's latest western picture, which was shipped east recently. The working title was "The Superman."

SCHLANK PRODUCTIONS

"Should Brides Marry," the first of ten two-reel comedies featuring Eddie Barry and written by Frederick Bennett, has been finished by the Morris R. Schlank Productions. Preparations are under way for another Bennett story, "The Bluffer," a five-reel comedy-drama, under the direction of Ward Hayes.

AT GOLDWYN

"The Man with Two Mothers," directed by Paul Bern, will be completed this week. Cullen Landis plays the title role, which was formerly credited to Tom Moore, in this Alice Duer Miller story.

Wallace Worley will presently start "Grand Larceny," recently put into continuity form by Bess Meredith, and E. Mason Hopper will handle the megaphone on "The Wall Flower," an original story by Rupert Hughes. Mr. Hughes also wrote the continuity.

NEW CABANNE PICTURE

Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, who wrote the continuity for "The Wonder Man," has provided the story for "The Barricade," which William Christy Cabanne will produce as his next production for R-C Pictures Corporation, at the Victor Studios, New York. The cast is now being assembled.

TO DIRECT GIBSON WESTERNS

Albert Rogell has severed connection with the Star Ranch Photoplays Corporation, and in the future will direct a series of five-reel Westerns, starring Helen Gibson.

TO MAKE HOUDINI SECOND PICTURE

Houdini is working on the second picture for his own organization, Houdini Pictures Productions. It is an original story by the star himself, the working title of which is "Haldane of the Secret Service."

Burton King will direct this picture.

Current Reviews

"LIFE"

Grauman's

We hasten to suggest that Thompson Buchanan, author of this week's Zukor presentation, and William Brady, the former's co-partner in crime, refer to page five of this issue and learn from the pen of Mr. William E. Wing just what constitutes life and living before they apply those terms promiscuously as photoplay titles. For certainly the screen adaptation of their stage drama, "Life," is about as far as possible from all that its promising label implies. However, this inappropriately christened offspring of the boards and Paramount has a marked degree of entertainment value in the mystery line which is fairly consistent in its development. The story's plot is as antiquated as they get (the innocent hero about to be electrocuted for another's crime, the last minute escape west, his final pardon and all the rest) but its handling somehow redeems it. Photographically the picture is just about average. Technically otherwise; it pleases.

The cast, although mostly satisfactory, probably sometimes due to a lack of opportunity, accomplishes very little in chaaracterization.

Jack Mower makes a good looking and heroic target for the many blows aimed at his defenseless head. However, circumstances, rather than his action, collect sympathy for Billy Reid, his secretarial role. The romantic love interest which he shares is secondary and even a bit vague in the story, which will dissatisfy many.

Arline Pretty enacts the feminine lead or Ruth, the daughter of a man whose murder is charged at her young husband's door. This part may best be criticized by remarking that it cannot possibly either help or hinder her career. It is indiscriminate.

Rod La Rocque as Thomas Burnett, the exceedingly rash young heavy who unflinchingly blames upon another his robberies and murder, is quite convincing. He has always impressed us as possessing some unusual but submerged screen interest. How he should be cast, however, we have not yet discovered to our complete satisfaction.

Nita Naldi's work as Barrisford, a professional dancer, and a menacing vamp (we recognized it from her cigarette) is surprisingly uneven. In places she approaches the striking; again she is amateurish. We do not know any of her previous film attempts.

The unfortunately weak role of Ralph Stuyvesant, Ruth's brother, is made weaker by Leeward Meeker. His opposition is really quite pitiable.

J. H. Gilmore, as Wm. Stuyvesant, the doomed father and financier, is good, while Geoffrey Stein and Effingham Pinto alone make a stab at characterization, no matter how exaggerated, in the parts of Dutch Joe and Monsieur Henri.

Travers Vale directed "Life."

"THE OATH"

Kinema

Another murder drama based upon William Locke's "Idols" is "The Oath," the Mayflower current release, presenting an all-star cast headed by Miriam Cooper. Four such pictures in one week occur to us as rather running the thing in the ground, particularly in "dog days," but booking freaks will come about as do all others. We said that "The Oath" was originally a novel. In reality, it still is, for the story telling is left entirely to the subtitles, which are merely illustrated by the filmed action. Nevertheless, such a procedure may be gotten away with every once in a while without dissatisfaction ensuing, as it does here. R. A. Walsh's direction of this photoplay is in most places excellent. He must be censured, however, for permitting his people to run away with themselves now and again.

It is to be regretted that the camera work is not sufficiently backed up with good lighting to occasion much favorable comment, but a noticeable asset to the production is the cast, which is all that it is possible to be in nearly every instance.

Miss Cooper, as we have said, is featured in this picture in the role of Minna Hart, a Jewess, whose love for a man is greater than her religious obligations. The part is really characterized by its portrayer, who even overdoes it a little that such may be the case; but since in our opinion an attempt to make a role live with a distinct attitude and individual mannerisms must be applauded, no matter what exaggerations it entails, such a slight error is redeemed to us. One very apparent mistake in this actress' work, however, and one which the direction should have rendered impossible is that of "playing out" to an unpardonable degree. If such can be subtly done, it often builds up the position of a part by stealing attention from the others on the screen, but it should never be allowed to become obvious or to injure the action in hand. Aside from this point there is considerably too little sympathy attached to Minna to make her a pleasing heroine. This is because her character is fundamentally weak in resolution and strong in false pride. Nevertheless, it cannot be said that she is anything if not distinct and she will send an impression home in every mind.

The male lead, Hugh Colman, is played in standard form by Conway Tearle. Even Colman's sympathetic interest only results from the unjust accusation of murder which he bears, but certainly that is no fault of the actor.

However, Anna Q. Nilsson manages to grab the actor off the appeal in the small (as far as footage is concerned) but vivid sacrifice part of Irene Merriam, who denies her own honor and loses a husband's love to save an innocent man from the electric chair when his own wife is hesitant. Miss Nilsson's trouper blood comes to the fore as usual and makes some of "The Oath's" big moments.

Robert Fischer's characterization of Israel Hart, the highest type of Jew, who is narrow alone in his religious traditions, is excellent, while Henry Clive does considerable with little in Gerald Merriam.

Ricca Allen in a well handled minor part ends the list of players.

This picture should have a fair drawing power.

"THE FIGHTING LOVER"

Superba

A Ben Ames Williams story which isn't half as bad as its title promises for it, is Universal's local Frank Mayo starring vehicle, "The Fighting Lover." It may be that such a headline pleases the average Universal audience, but "honest, Mabel, ain't it awful?" The plot itself is a fast mover and providing one isn't played out by the time this third murder mystery of the week is approached, it will prove comparatively diverting. The plot of the story hinges upon a wager that gathers three strange girls under a millionaire roof with three variously dispositioned young men, a good natured auntie and—a diamond. The stage thus set, there are plenty of intruders from the outside to complicate things. As might be expected the end leaves one with a "knowing it all the time" feeling, which proclaims the material somewhat thin; but at least one follows it all with some interest.

The direction, by Fred LeRoy Granville, and the photography are up to, possibly a little above, that company's average.

Mayo gives one of his customary performances in the role of Andrew Forsdale, high class gambler. He was evidently more than thrilling to the girl on our right. Indeed, she said so in a stage whisper to Clarisse who sat beside her. The woman immediately behind us was not thus served evidently, for although she remained through to the picture's end, her resentment of what she considered to be the star's attitude of "hating himself" was plainly audible at short intervals. Personally we enjoy Mr. Mayo's management of his work a lot better than the action itself which should be more carefully chosen for him by his company.

Jacqueline Logan is quite entrancing in the feminine lead. She is one of the mystery girls, Helen Leigh, whose unusual movements arouse suspicion in all but the stately hero's unfaltering heart. Miss Logan has marked possibilities.

Jean Calhoun does some very good work as the real "crookess" of the bunch. She is more suited to the handling of opposition than any other kind of thing in which we have seen her.

A representative of the "good sport auntie" is excellently done by Elinor Hancock, who is a very fascinating type of middle aged womanhood, by the way.

Jackson Reade and Colin Kenny are right there as the romantic Ned Randolph and the cynical and ill-fated Vic Ragner.

Gordon Sackville is also good as Helen's butler father, while Gertrude Olmstead, Joe Singleton, Ruth Ashby, Fred G. Becker and Robert Bolder complete the cast.

Everything considered, "The Fighting Lover" is an improvement over several Mayo pictures we have witnessed, from an attention-holding point of view.

"I AM GUILTY"

Horrors and then some more! We hadn't thought that there was a stone age plot left uncovered after those that we have already consumed since Saturday, but in "I Am

FOREIGN PLAYER IN HISTORICAL FILM

Mlle. Narcita, formerly premier luminary of the Patria Film Company of Madrid, and of the Royal Cinema Corporation, Ltd. of Montreal, Canada, has come to this country from Spain to study screen conditions in America.

She represents a group of French and Spanish capitalists, including Louis Nalpas, French director.

Mlle. Narcita will interpret the stellar role presently in an historical production, part of which will be made in France and part in this country.

Her previous vehicles are "A Night of Temptation," by Victoria Cross, "Too Late," "The Crystal Cup" and "The Peacock."

ADDED TO STAFF

Mary Murillo has joined the scenario and continuity department of R-C Pictures Corporation and will work on original stories and continuity at the New York headquarters of that organization.

Miss Murillo's previous connections have been with Sydney Franklin Productions and the Fox Film Corporation.

FITZGERALD MAKES CHANGE

Irving Thalberg has signed Dallas M. Fitzgerald, formerly of Metro, to produce Universal phrotodramas. His first story will be "The Guttersnipe," a comedy-drama by Percival Wilde, starring Gladys Walton.

WITH ROGERS

"Big Boy" Williams, being featured by Charles R. Seeling Productions, Inc., is spending his between-picture vacation at the Brunton studio assisting Will Rogers in a two-reeler.

ADDED TO CAST

Al Christie has added Earl Rodney, Eugenie Ford, and Ward Caulfield to the cast of his forthcoming special, as yet untitled.

IN SANTSCHI PICTURE

Ruth Stonehouse and Bessie Love will support Tom Santschi in his current production entitled, "The Spirit of the Lake," written and directed by Bob Bradbury.

KATHERINE HILLIKER ON GOLDWYN STAFF

Katherine Hilliker, title writer, arrived at the Goldwyn studio recently to title "The Ship," and "Theodora," the two Italian photoplays which Samuel Goldwyn brought back from Italy. She will be at the studio about six weeks.

JOSEF SWICKARD SIGNS CONTRACT

Josef Swickard will be seen in an important part in support of Alice Lake in "The Golden Gift," Miss Lake's first picture under Maxwell Karger's direction.

JOHN BOWERS IN LEAD

John Bowers will characterize the leading male role in "The Golden Gift," in which Alice Lake is starred.

Dorothy Devore will have the leading role in Al. Christie's next comedy, now under production at the Christie studios.

The Screen Writers' Forum —Conducted by William E. Wing

AGAIN THE CRUCIFIXION

There is something the matter with the world when men who base all their acts upon religious principles can originate movements which culminate in the obstruction of those things which are good.

Writers for the rather new industry of motion picture manufacture, have in their hands the lash which could sting the whole world into an uprising for something better; which would right wrongs and put civilization upon a higher plane.

Yet Dr. Crafts and his brotherhood are, in their blind zeal, not only tying the hands of the writer who would preach, but at the same time are putting a weapon in the hands of weak men, which is reacting against things religious.

Dr. Crafts and all his kind are for censorship.

In the state of Pennsylvania—which is a part of these free United States—censorship, among other things of similar wisdom, has declined to allow the motion picture to intimate even that there is such a thing as motherhood.

To mention the birth of a child, merely in words upon the screen, is illegal. It is cut out ruthlessly, even though it may ruin a photodrama which teaches the wonders of mother love, and appeals to the youth who has wandered far from the teachings of that saintly one.

And the mention of an illegitimate child —horrors! More gasps or horror and a holy uplifting of the hands!

Now many other censors, encouraged by the "brotherhood" movement, are rolling their eyes to heaven in imitation, when this defenseless little one is mentioned upon the screen, and then the axe swings downward.

Yet here is a theme which should be preached from every pulpit, from every screen, and discussed in every home, if the world is to stand for right and justice.

Shall it only be told in the pulpit, and be barred from the film?

What then of this newborn babe?

It comes into the world as pure as its Maker, it seems.

It is born through no volition of its own.

It is as pure and sweet as every other infant in Christendom.

But, bending above it we see the form of an imperfect adult, one who must likely has broken man's laws, and who surely has broken the laws of God (for none are perfect); and, as this tainted one bends down, his stained hand is stretched forth to stamp upon that tiny soul the verdict—

Criminal!

Why?

Because this particular infant, who was smiled into the world by a loving Christ, has been born outside of wedlock.

Man-made laws, which make criminals of innocent persons!

Censorship!

Heaven save the mark, and bring the indomitable writer to the rescue, whether or no.

MISERABLE CARDS

We all know the woman who hustles into her bonnet early in the morning, to start on her indigo rounds and visit the sick. Isn't she the cheering individual, though?

She never fails to mention that "lots of people are dying around here lately—dear me, I don't know what we're all coming to!"

After introducing more congested gloom into worrying households than there is thirst in dry America, she returns to her domicile with a heavenly glow in her system, declaring that she hasn't enjoyed a day so much since she saw all those dead and starving people in the foreign picture weekly.

I am a humane, if not handsome man, but I shudder to think of what I would do if I ever caught one of these individuals at the edge of a snorty volcano.

COLETTE FORBES

Now playing an important part with Earle Williams.

There is a place for sympathy and tears in the motion picture, but I believe that any person who enjoys human agony more than a good laugh should be sent to the specialist. There is a crack in the concrete somewhere.

Therefore, being such a peculiar person, I may be pardoned for advancing the astonishing and startling theory that pleasant pictures are slightly preferable to those which boil one in oil, while the management invites you to send in your friends for the same treatment.

Being thus erratically constructed, I also have arrived at the conclusion that execution is far preferable to life imprisonment, especially as they now are running pictures in penitentiaries, and are liable to force upon the merry inmates those film tales whose sole mission seems to be that of killing the dog gently, by starting the meat axe at the less vital end.

The main contention is that the picture, carrying a high percentage of true entertainment value, is the feature which the public wants. The cry for theme, and yet more theme, once was the watchword of many studios. There is nothing wrong with that.

But is has proven up that the gladsome, frisking picture, filled with humans who do things in a human way, is able to frolic away with the goods without resorting to much of a theme or plot.

This may sound like treason, but the vote has been counted upon more than one occasion lately, and "entertainment value" has won. Something more for the writer to ponder.

A little more fraternalism, please.

Work up a little admiration for the other fellow's stories. Jealousy is cheap stuff.

Don't advertise Angel Food in your title, and then hand the poor editor coffee and sinkers.

If the editor turns down your good story but accepts a worse one, don't howl. That's one on him.

The houlier-than-thou clan now claims to be more intellectual than thou. Saving a reluctant world from the sin of pleasure is some job.

The committeeman of a local congregation recently declared that he would have all pictures preach sermons. Would the church support picture theaters in such an event? Experiments in the past have proven not.

The independent market seems to think it needs stories. Some of the big studios are of the same mind. Neither seems to know exactly the character of story desired, but would like to be shown. A meeting of writers and buyers might clear the atmosphere, in a general way, but would Governor Stephens be willing to declare martial law if something slipped?

The reluctance of successful fiction writers to accept the edict having to do with being born again, is a natural thing. "The public accepts our stories in the book, why not on the screen?" is its argument. The public also enjoys baseball, but doesn't want to see it played by tennis cracks. The necessity for training for the somewhat peculiar photoplay art, hangs as heavily upon the fictionist as upon the imaginative but untaught aspirant.

LIFE

(As a man thinketh, so shall he write.)

Did the little dog run away?

Yes, I suppose he did, perhaps with a tin can tied to his tail by a very, very naughty little boy.

The little dog cut quite a ridiculous figure, galloping wildly down the alley, with the tin can thumping along behind.

Some of you laughed.

To you it was comedy.

But did you laugh at the other side of the picture—the little girl who had learned to love the little dog, the little, heart-broken girl, with tears upon her cheek and poignant anguish in her tiny soul?

No, you did not laugh, for—

That was tragedy!

And everyone who looked upon that scene, from a queen upon her highly expensive throne, to the stub-nosed kid munching peanuts in the gallery of time, yearned for that little dog to come back to the little girl, and romp on her, and muss her pretty dress, and insert a moist tongue in her ear, while the little angel hugged the prodigal, and kissed him, with a smile upon her dear, tear-stained face and heaven in her soul.

That is life!

We too, like the little girl, lived in the sunshine while we had our little dog. We never saw how ugly it really looked. We never noticed that one eye didn't match the other, and that aristocracy had overlooked the canine family when this especial kayoodle was born.

He was our little dog, and we loved him.

The other name for our little dog was—

Joy!

When joy fled down the alley because some naughty thing had appended the tin can of misery to its tail, tragedy entered into our lives.

But, when the glad day came, bringing

FILM CENSORS TO CONFER

A conference will take place next month at Universal City, when representative film censors from all parts of the United States and Canada will meet with film producers, directors and executives in an attempt to solve the censorship problems of the moving picture industry. The various delegates from the State and municipal censor boards will be the guests of the Universal Company during the entire trip.

"Foolish Wives," a von Stroheim picture, is in the process of cutting and editing, and the visiting censors will be given the opportunity of viewing the integral parts of the picture and passing upon it scene by scene. It is expected that in the general censoring of this picture, the various representatives will tend to arrive at a common basis for censorship.

Representatives from the censor boards of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and Kansas, and of the cities of Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City, Mo., Toronto, Vancouver, and Montreal, as well as the National Board of Review, will be present. It is expected that New York State will be represented by the newly authorized Commission of Three.

PRESIDENT SEES "GYPSY BLOOD"

"Gypsy Blood," First National attraction, was seen by President and Mrs. Harding at a recent private showing of the film in the home of United States Senator Philander C. Knox at Valley Forge.

SECOND RAWLINSON STORY

"The Substitute Millionaire" will be the second starring vehicle for Herbert Rawlinson, following "The Black Bag," which will go into production at Universal City upon the completion of "Conflict," Priscilla Dean's current picture, in which Mr. Rawlinson plays opposite the star.

ACTOR IS VAUDEVILLE PRODUCER

Arthur Jasmine has written and is staging a musical comedietta, for which he is designing the scenery and costumes. The piece will tour presently.

SCOTTY MACNICOLL

Who has expended his efforts in the advertising department of this publication for many months. Scotty is now taking a much needed vacation.

CLUB WOMAN AGAINST CENSHORSHIP

A movement intended to attract the active interest of the club women of America has been launched in Detroit by prominent club leaders of that city under the name of "The League for the Silent Drama." The league's aims, as announced, are for a national body of women to extend encouragement to the producers of worth-while photoplays and discourage destructive censorship.

The organization was formed at a joint meeting of the members of the Detroit Twentieth Century, Review, Woman's City and Theater Arts clubs and the Cercle Dramatique.

Ethel Harmon has just finished playing an important part with the Campbell Comedies.

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer

Glen Cedar Ranch,
Burbank, Calif.

Dear Nephew:

Your aunt and I went over to see your picture the other night, and while the story did not amount to much, as is pretty usual, we thought your photography was fine. It's too bad though that your director has such a bad case of dissolve fever. All young ones get it, and your's may have it for a year or more if you can't do something to head him off. If I remember rightly you said something in one of your letters about his being rather particular about his clothes and puttees, a sort of animated fashion plate. Well, call a get together meeting, and tell him the dissolve is old fashioned; that Joe Aller is the only one doing it now, and he uses a tank. A dissolve is just as effective as a wood alcohol highball, but you may have a hard time getting your man to look at it that way. He is probably under the impression that it's photography, but you know that good photography does not depend on mechanical stunts.

We noted particularly the makeup on your leading lady. Did somebody throw it at her or did she fall into it? Boy, reason with that young woman. Tell her that you will buy her a new wig if she will put on a makeup according to your idea. She won't like it a bit, but when she sees the difference on the screen, she may write you a testimonial. Motion pictures inherited "makeup" from the stage where it is used to advantage in accentuating the features, and to make grandmothers look like sweet sixteens. In our business not much is necessary. Just enough to cover up freckles, gophers (I mean moles), small-pox marks, mosquito bites, bee stings, wrinkles, hollow cheeks, etcetera, etcetera, etcetera. Portrait photographers don't need makeup because they are able to retouch their negatives. To retouch the number of pictures in a five-reel subject at sixteen to the foot, would be an ordinary sized man's job. Of course if they want a man to look like somebody he doesn't look like, it may be necessary to us quite a lot of makeup. Some folks are mighty touchy on this subject. I know, because I tried to reason with a young lady once who thought that a Theda Bara was the only makeup on the market. I told her that Theda's was the worst that ever went through a lens. Well, it looked like a blue envelope for your Uncle Dudley, but after about five thousand feet, she came out one morning with the most beautiful makeup I ever saw. "If you had only put it on at the beginning," I asked to know. "That's easy," says she, "We will make it all over again." Wow! your Uncle Dudley knew what that meant; nothing but a red, white, and blue envelope. But a Star, as you have no doubt already learned, has a pull all her own, and the party who said something about hitching your wagon to a star was right, for she pulled us through. So much black on the eyelashes that two or three become one, black rings around the eyes, black under the eyes, thick red lips, and anything else which tends to destroy natural good looks, must in time give way to horse sense.

As it's about time to wind up the cat and put out the clock, I guess I'll fade out. I want to say in closing, however, that no matter how well pleased you may be at any time with your photography, don't get so all fired satisfied that you won't feel like doing better next time.

With best wishes in which your aunt joins me, I am as ever, YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY.

Production Notes

PACIFIC FILM NOTES

The production program of the Pacific Film Company, under the management of John J. Hayes, includes fifty-two single reel comedies. These will be released under the White Cap banner and will feature George Ovey in comedy-dramas, and Vernon Dent in "boob" comedies. Arby Arly will support Ovey, while Violet Joy will be feminine lead with the Dent players. Milton Fahrney will direct.

The new administration building of the Pacific Film Company has just recently been finished.

NEW WESTERNS

Work has started on the first of a series of five-reel Western comedy-dramas for McKenzie Productions at the Balshofer studios. Olin Francis is playing the lead in "Freshwater Jack," from the pen of Eva Heazlit. Estelle Harrison is the feminine lead.

This series is being made under the co-direction of Robert McKenzie and Ward Wing. Len Powers is at the camera with Ed Dustin assisting.

ALADDIN COMEDIES

"His Valet," a one-reel comedy, is announced as the first of the series of Aladdin Comedies in which Pearl Shepard, Reelcraft's latest addition, will be starred. Miss Shepard will play opposite Billy Gilbert, who has been retained as leading comedian for the new series.

Dick Smith will direct the new Aladdin vehicles.

HIRSH BACK

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corp., who has just returned from Europe with a feature picture, announces that the Aywon Film Corp. will begin the immediate production of four five-reel jungle features.

TURPIN IN PERSONAL APPEARANCES

Ben Turpin is in Chicago, where he will start his personal appearances throughout the middle west. He will appear first at the Strand Theatre in Chicago.

MIRANDA TITLING

Thomas N. Miranda has finished titling "Hickville to Broadway," starring Eileen Percy, and "Play Square," starring Johnnie Walker, and is at present titling Shirley Mason's current production, "Queenie," from the story by Wilbur Fauley.

ROACH COMEDIES

Craig Hutchinson, comedy director, has been engaged by Irving Thalberg, general manager of Universal City, to direct a series of comedies, featuring Bert Roach, former Sennett comedian, who recently appeared in support of Gladys Walton in "The Rowdy."

NO NEW CONTRACTS

Samuel Goldwyn issued a statement that there will be no new directors', players', etc., contracts at the Goldwyn studios. J. G. Hawkes' resignation has been accepted.

JIMMIE ADAMS

AT LASKY'S

Sam Wood is making progress with "Don't Tell Everything," in which Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter have the featured roles. Thompson Buchanan is supervising the production.

Howard Higgin, recently promoted to directorship by Jesse L. Lasky, is scheduled to begin work the middle of August on "Rent Free," with Wallace Reid as the star. Supervisor-in-Chief Frank E. Woods will personally supervise the picture.

JONES FEATURE PRODUCTION

Grover Jones has finished his first feature production, "The Scar," with Ora Carew as the star. Besides Miss Carew the cast includes Jack Richardson, Charles Mason, Allan Garcia, Dwight Crittenden, Josie Melville, Camille Astor, Murray Miller and Ray McMann.

JACK PICKFORD IN SCREEN VERSION OF STAGE SUCCESS

Jack Pickford, on the completion of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which he is co-directing with Alfred Green, will enact the leading role in the screen version of "The Tailor-Made Man," soon to go into production.

The T. R. Film Company will start production shortly, featuring Teddy Repay, the child actor, in educational stories.

NEW COMEDIES READY

New Vanity and Gayety single-reel comedies for release during the months of August and September have been completed by the Christie Film Company.

The Vanity Comedies include: "Chicken-Hearted," with Earl Rodney and Dorothy Orth; "Eat and Be Happy," with Irene Dalton and Francis Feeny; and "Paying Patients," with Dorothy Devore and Al. Lloyd.

The Gayety comedies are: "Wild and Willie," with Henry Murdock and Josephine Hill; "Oh Brother!" with Vera Steadman and Earl Rodney; and "Say Uncle," with Miss Steadman and Jay Belasco.

The pictures were directed by Scott Sidney and Frederick Sullivan.

CAMERAMEN ASSIGNED METRO PICTURES

Cameramen for forthcoming Metro pictures have been signed as follows: John Arnold will photograph Viola Dana in "The Fourteenth Lover;" Arthur Martinelli will do the camera work for Bert Lytell's new picture, "Lady Fingers;" Rudolph Borgquist will photograph "Little Eva Ascends;" Roy Klaffki will serve behind the camera for "The Golden Gift," Alice Lake's next starring vehicle; while John F. Seitz will photograph "Turn to the Right," Rex Ingram's new Metro production.

FINISHED

Thomas H. Ince's latest special feature for Associated Producers release, temporarily titled "Lucky Damage," which has been in production for the past nine weeks, is completed. Milton Sills, Florence Vidor and Tully Marshall head the all-star cast.

Screen Writers' Page

back the mussed and bedraggled little one, we found that, despite its experience, it was whole, inside.

With joy returned, the sun shone once more, and we wiped away our "foolish" tears.

We were content.

But, we were the better for having lost the cuddling one, for when it returned it brought to us a sweetness we didn't know was there before.

For we had loved, lost and suffered.

And, without these three things to stir the placid pool, one does not live.

THE WEEK'S BEST

A trusting soul, thirsting for knowledge, has brought up the subject of true-to-life stuff as photoplay material. In a letter of inquiry the seeker propounds as follows:

"Would it be all right for me to use the experiences of my mother and father in a story? All I have to do is to change the names and, presto! I have all the trouble I would need for a feature."

Current Reviews

Guilty," J. Parker Read's latest Associated Producers release, we view murder-spasm number four, for this week. That means that for the fourth time we have seen an innocent individual accused of manslaughter, and believe us, their various weird and wonderful trials have contained about everything in the world but the happenings in an honest-to-goodness court room. It is scarcely fair to blame all that has bored us, however, upon a little of it, so we proceed. Outside of the somewhat hackneyed plot of the picture in hand, starting off with the neglected wife and ending with "the other woman killed him" (from behind the proverbial curtain) which Bradley King has employed for her story, the production isn't half bad. Its sets are exquisite and the lighting and photography of them are both exceptional, while the strong cast is also handled beautifully by the Jack Nelson direction. These elements, as it would seem, go a long way toward making "I Am Guilty" a pardonable offense.

Louise Glaum is starred in the role of Connie MacNair, the ex-chorus girl wife of a wealthy lawyer. During her husband's long absence on business trips she reverts to her old acquaintances for companionship and meets fate in the form of an insistent roue. There is no doubt but that in appearance Miss Glaum fails to fit into the demure little mother whom she plays. That she gets it over at all is due alone to her ability.

Opposite the star, Robert MacNair, the negligent but upright husband, is interpreted by Mahlon Hamilton, who is always good in the straight, strong masculine things.

George Cooper gives what is to us the most interesting as well as completely finished performance in the cast. He does Dillon, a man who nearly pays the penalty of murder for his thievery. He is the one very appealing note in the drama.

The old reprobate, Teddy Garrick, whose evil desire kills him, could be made by no one quite as loathsome as he is by Joseph Kilgour, whose work is always vividly wicked and whose technique is just as admirable.

Ruth Stonehouse, as Dillon's little cockney sweetheart, is a good touch, while the jealous mistress of Garrick is done quite well by Claire DuBrey.

Little Mickey Moore, as the MacNair baby, and May Hopkins in a minor chorus girl part, complete the list of players.

"I Am Guilty" cannot have a very general appeal, due to its unpopular "hokum" strenuosity; so it really doesn't justify the money which is apparent in its sets and cast.

KELSEY WITH VEILLER

Fred Kelsey has been selected by Bayard Veiller to play an important part in "Lady Fingers," in which Bert Lytell is playing the title role.

RETURNING

Paul Powell and Mary O'Conner, working on the Famous Players-Lasky lot in London, will return to this country on the completion of their current production which is now in the process of cutting.

Director Fred Caldwell is engaged in preparing the continuity for his forthcoming production, which will be titled "The Eyes That Know."

General Manager Charles Eyton announces the construction of an additional building to house the added directors and members of the scenario staff at the Lasky Studio.

The Story Idea
that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

Palmer Photoplay Corporation,
Department of Education,
570-90 I. W. Hellman Bldg.,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Please send me, without cost or obligation on my part, your questionnaire. I will answer the questions in it and return it to you for analysis. If I pass the test I am to receive further information about your Course and Service to authors.

Priscilla Dean's new vehicle will be Cynthia Stockley's story, "Wild Honey." At present Miss Dean and her husband, Wheeler Oakman, are on location in the woods of British Columbia, where they will remain for two months.

FORSAKES SILENT ART

Frances Eldridge, previously in the all star cast of the screen version of the Ralph Connor story, "The Foreigner," produced by Dominion Film Company, is considering an offer to enter vaudeville.

COMPLETING SCRIPT

George Dubois Proctor, responsible for the story and scenario of "On the Back Lot," the initial starring vehicle for Anetha Getwell, which Pantheon Pictures Corporation recently completed, is at work on a second script for the company for the same star, entitled "Idle Eyes."

HATTON WITH METRO

Raymond Hatton has been chosen by Rex Ingram to enact one of the leading roles in "Turn to the Right," Mr. Ingram's new production for Metro.

Charlie Murray is entering upon an engagement touring one of the leading vaudeville circuits. A decade ago he was a partner in the comedy team of Murray and Mack.

Dick Sutherland is cast in "The Deuce of Spades," Charles Ray's forthcoming picture. Mr. Sutherland was recently in Ray's "Gas Oil and Water," now cutting.

Fred Malatesta enacts the role of "Dick," the Italian bootblack, in Mary Pickford's picturization of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which is being made at the Brunton studios.

Tomorrow's Entertainers

Every now and again we find ourselves party to a discussion which has been given rise to by the question, "What will be the source of supply for our next generation of entertainers?" and "Who will fill the emptying screen and stage ranks of tomorrow?" We have always been vitally interested in this problem, which we believe to be worthy of the gravest consideration, even though it appears to be solving itself, as such things have a way of doing.

First of all, we must assume that our future dramatists and comedians will be the products of a far more stringent training school than that which prepared their histrionic forefathers for public careers. This is because the theatre-going public has done some progressing on its own through the years, as it will, in all probability, continue to do. All right! Where is this instruction to be received and by whom? The answer is simple. Los Angeles is the place and hundreds of its talented little folk the subjects.

For several weeks past Sid Grauman has been entertaining his audiences with twenty-minute kiddie revues, containing fifteen or eighteen diminutive singers and dancers, costumed after the regulation musical comedy plan. These literal "jazz babies" are without exception unusual characterizers as well as finished showmen, and this at from four to twelve years of age.

The fact that clever children form a big drawing card with their almost universal appeal is naturally sufficient reason for Mr. Grauman and a half dozen other local theatre directors to exploit so many of them; but the real importance which we must attach to their thus recognized ability is the fact that here is the material for which we are searching already in an advanced stage of theatrical education. Nor is it limited in numbers or scope. This is, of course, largely due to the presence in this city of the world's biggest picture colony, which has attracted hundreds of mothers with their many more young hopefuls even as honey invites the proverbial bees. An occasional unusual one among these importations combined with the profession's own offspring makes up an almost unbelievable assemblage of primary talent. Therefore, just consider our picture babies, and still your worries for the theatre's future. Among them we have a list of at least twenty-five performers who excel, headed by Jackie Coogan, Wesley Barry, "Itchie" Headrick, Pat and Mickey Moore, Peaches Jackson, Jean O'Rourke, Frankie Lee, and Ben Alexander. It is significant to note that most of these youngsters are equally as well suited to the stage as to the screen. (We have in mind several very mature stars of which this can hardly be said with any element of truth.)

Moreover, every month reveals at least one new prospect; while the juvenile art which appears in our local prologues alone will easily fill a 1935 vaudeville circuit.

No, we needn't bother much about Progress—any of us. Precedent has proven it capable to care for itself always. In this instance it is already laying an admirable foundation for the greater entertainment which is to lighten our declining years. F. R.

Salaries for Service

The following editorial comment in The Moving Picture World by Arthur James presents a sane though not very strenuous angle of the salary situation. It interested us; maybe it will you:

"The fifth industry in the United States has no right to accept without compensation the services of leaders who sacrifice their time, money and effort in construction work from which all the industry benefits. We as an industry pay salaries to stars and salaries to directors that make the wages of a President puny by comparison. In many cases these salaries are swollen and out of proportion, but it must be remembered that competition has brought the high pay conditions into being.

"In times of prosperity these big sums have meant little in the general result, and they will continue to mean little when normal conditions are restored. They should, of course, be revised so that the box office value is the final gauge by which salaries are determined.

"In the meantime, despite temporary depression, there is a need for a fair judgment of salaries for men who are laboring incessantly and successfully for the common good of the business. As an industry we are not so low in finances that we need to accept these services as a charity contributed by individuals.

"We are looking at the situation from the industry's point of view. Is our appreciation to be expressed solely with hand-clapping, complimentary dinners and an occasional loving cup?

"Can we feel like men when we permit service to go unrewarded save by conversation?

"No other great business in the United States is on such a basis, and ours would not be were it not for the politics that continually affect the policies of our industry.

"Leaders are practically forced to describe their efforts with a humility that is almost ridiculous. They speak of their "small share" in the furthering of great movements. They must tell of their "humble work" in behalf of all. This sort of address, this minimizing of personal service is of course distinctly the political type of speech. We find no fault with those who use it, but it should not be necessary.

"We believe that the three big branches of our business should each maintain an organization with offices and staff fully financed and regularly paid. Then the business would have a right to their time and brains and effort. Any other course is belittling to us as a business."

Film Capital Production Notes

TEXAS GUINAN WESTERN SERIES

The Texas Guinan Productions has been organized to produce a series of twelve two-reel Western dramas starring Texas Guinan. These attractions will be released by way of the independent or state-right market, commencing September 15th.

In addition to these pictures Miss Guinan will also produce during the year two five or six-reel western specials.

The eastern executive offices of The Guinan Productions are located in New York City, but production activities will be on the west coast.

The first six stories have been acquired and will be photographed at the exact location named by the author of the stories.

It is also planned that for a period of eight weeks after the completion of the first series of twelve releases, Miss Guinan will make a personal tour throughout the United States, appearing in principal motion picture and vaudeville houses showing her productions.

BORZAGE TO PRODUCE HERE

Frank Borzage, director of "Humoresque," "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," "Back Pay," and other stories for Cosmopolitan, is expected in Los Angeles shortly to assume charge of his own productions.

NEW PATHE SERIES

A new series of Homan Day two-reel dramas of life in the Maine woods has been contracted for by Pathe and production is progressing under the direction of Phil Carle.

"THE HALF BREED" RELEASE ARRANGED

George Bentle, general manager of the Oliver Morosco Productions, is in New York, where he has definitely concluded arrangements with Associated First National officials for the release of "The Half Breed," a western drama by Oliver Morosco, directed by Charles A. Taylor, in which Wheeler Oakman has the principal role.

STEWART PICTURE RETITLED

Louis B. Mayer has selected "Her Mad Bargain" as the releasing title for the Anita Stewart vehicle recently produced under the working title of "The Price of Happiness." It is an Associated First National attraction. The screen version was written by Josephine Quirk and it was filmed under the direction of Edwin Carewe.

Walter McGrail, Gertrude Astor, and Arthur Edmund Carew are the principals of the star's supporting cast.

ANOTHER KEATON COMEDY

Buster Keaton has just finished for First National release another of his comedies, as yet untitled. In it Keaton has, as his feminine vis-a-vis, Virginia Fox.

Lou Anger, production manager, and Mal St. Clair are at present preparing his next.

"SLIPPY McGEE" FINISHING

"Slippy McGee," the Oliver Morosco production under the direction of Wesley Ruggles, is approaching completion. Heading the all-star cast are Wheeler Oakman, Colleen Moore, Pat O'Malley and Edwin Stevens.

"Good for Nothing," a John Emerson and Anita Loos story, will be Constance Talmadge's next starring vehicle.

UNDERWOOD PHOTOPLAY

Lawrence Underwood will begin presently the production of the photoplay entitled, "Repaid," written and prepared by himself for Sunflower Feature Films in Kansas.

TO BE SEEN SHORTLY

Five special productions are about to be released here through Associated First National. They are: Whitman Bennett's "Salvation Nell," Oliver Morosco's "The Half Breed," Charles Ray's "A Midnight Bell," Constance Talmadge's "A Woman's Place," and John M. Stahl's "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

AT UNIVERSAL

Editorial work will begin presently on "Conflict," the Priscilla Dean production just completed. Director Stuart Paton will work in collaboration with Frank Lawrence, film editor-in-chief, in assembling the footage for the screen.

After locationing on the Mojave desert, Harry Carey has arrived at the studio to conclude "The Fox," his newest production. The star wrote the story himself and it is being filmed under the direction of Robert Thornby from Lucien Hubbard's continuity.

Frankie Kiolet has begun work at Universal City as a reward for having won the "Seattle Star"-Universal brains, beauty and popularity contest.

ROBERTSON-COLE NOTES

Comes the announcement of resumption of activities at the West Coast studios of the R-C Pictures Corporation.

The new schedule calls for a series of productions with Pauline Frederick, Sessue Hayakawa and Doris May; and a star series to be directed by L. J. Gasnier and Christy Cabanne. A number of other features will be announced later.

Doris May has already started work on "The Foolish Age," the first of a series of comedy-dramas in which she is to be starred. They will be known as Hunt Stromberg productions.

Louis J. Gasnier and a staff of assistants are at Lake Tahoe preparing to film "Mam'selle Jo," an adaptation by Winifred Dunn, from the novel of the same name by Harriet T. Comstock.

Pauline Frederick is expected to begin work shortly on "The Lure of Jade," an original story arranged for the screen by Marion Orth.

AT REALART

Chester M. Franklin has arrived from New York, where he went recently to make a picture with Constance Binney. Mr. Franklin is at present making preparations for "Spring Fever," a Bebe Daniels' starring vehicle, which he will handle.

Director Maurice Campbell is completing arrangements for the filming of "The Heart of Youth," by Sonia Levine, which will star Constance Binney.

NEILAN TO MAKE "PENROD"

Marshall Neilan will next produce Booth Tarkington's "Penrod," with Wesley Barry in the title role.

Neilan has already started work on the adaptation of the story, which work he will personally handle, and "shooting" is expected shortly.

"Penrod" will be distributed by Associated First National Pictures following "Bits of Life," just finished.

NEW FIVE-REELERS

The Border Feature Film Corporation has finished its fifth two-reel western, written by William R. Lighton. This company will start the first of August on a series of five-reel westerns, which Harry Moody will direct.

STAHL TO LOCATION AT MOJAVE

Arrangements are made for the John M. Stahl company to leave for the Mojave desert shortly to film location scenes for "The Song of Life," a future First National attraction.

Current Reviews

"CRAZY TO MARRY"

Grauman's

Frank Condon's "Crazy to Marry," adapted by Walter Woods, serves Roscoe Arbuckle for his newest Paramount offering. It is a surprisingly logical combination of the farce and slapstick which reaches the highest in its line of entertainment with a half dozen excellent gag lines, repetition action and other forced comedy situations. Its laughs always hit the audience forcibly and interest in the general plot never slackens. James Cruze "steps right on it," showing some of the best farce direction of his career and the cast could not have been improved, while technically "Crazy to Marry" is up to Lasky's best form.

Arbuckle has a veritable gold mine in Dr. Hobart Hupp, the good natured brain specialist, whose own mental movements are a bit light. We might also mention that the rotund Hupp's physical agility in itself is a seven-day wonder when his geography is considered. Taken altogether, "Fatty" has rarely been more entertaining, due largely to the exceptional situations with which he has to work.

Quite a little "speed" is shown by Lila Lee in the role of Annabelle Landis, Dr. Hupp's beloved. Miss Lee, we observe enthusiastically, is learning how to act. She has also improved her screen personality, and the result of these two achievements is, in this instance at least, perfectly satisfactory.

A superior piece of work is done by Lura Anson, who plays Hupp's tearfully unwilling bride, Estrella De Morgan. She has great comedy possibilities.

Two other clever troupers assist this picture to success. They are Lillian Leighton and Edwin Stevens, in the roles of Estrella's domineering parents, who wish her on to Hupp that society may be at their disgustingly wealthy feet. The points of these performers are more carefully watched and executed than it is often one's privilege to observe.

Bull Montana as Pansy, a "nut" thief paroled in the Doctor's care that he may be operated upon and reformed, provides a hilarious note, while Sidney Bracy, Genevieve Blinn, Clarence Burton, Charles Ogle and Charles Wildish back up the more principal roles with capital support.

The individual to whom Arbuckle's stuff appeals in any degree will proclaim this the weighty star's greatest.

"THE GIRL IN THE TAXI"

Kinema

Stanilaus Strange's stage farce, "The Girl in the Taxi," scenarized, serves Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven as their current long subject for First National release. All those who dote upon the farce in its most ridiculous aspect will be more than delighted with this rapidly moving comedy, which just about reaches the standard of "Twin Beds," the De Haven's last effort, in entertainment value. Of course, this perilously-near-unto-slapstick type of thing hasn't a universal appeal by any means, but that is far from necessary to any production's success. If it pleases its own element it gains its ends.

Considering the chaos of the situations through which the cast frisks backward and forward, Lloyd Ingraham has kept the plot very lucid with his skillful direction, and the photography and general technique is irreproachable, besides which the subtitles form one of the picture's most valuable notes.

Carter De Haven heads the list of players as Bertie Stewart, a very young man with "heart" trouble. Bertie is both realistic and riotously funny in De Haven's hands, which surprisingly versatile actor dispatches with the youngster as easily as if he were yet in the "first long pants" stage himself. He reveals unexpected angles with Bertie, who is really adorable in his unsophisticated devilishness. We developed a great affection for him by the second reel.

EVELYN McCOY

Supporting Pauline Frederick in "The Sting of the Lash" at the California this week.

Mrs. Carter De Haven, although filling the play's title role, is prominent only in the plot's complications, but she is chic and dainty as the petite Mrs. Mignon Smith, a perfume manufacturer's somewhat indiscreet wife.

As Major Frederick Smith, the young woman's irate husband, who is "most ferocious in uniform," King Baggot shows us some highly amusing comedy exaggeration, which was well received by Saturday's matinee audience.

Very clever work is offered by Tom McGuire, Margaret Campbell and Lincoln Plumer, who play papa and mama Stewart and Cousin Percy, a triangle which operates at cross purposes to general hilarity, while Otis Harlan as Alexis, a different waiter, has his own ideas of comedy, the execution of which is not excelled in the picture.

Minor roles are filled by Grace Cunard, Freya Sterling and John Gough.

"KEEPING UP WITH LIZZIE"

Clune's Broadway

Al and Ray Rockett present their second independent production locally at this time. It is the screen version of Irving Bacheller's "Keeping Up With Lizzie," a fairly well handled picture which, however, is richer in atmosphere than in action, and considerably slower in progress than its title would lead one to expect. The camera work on this production varies decidedly and is really miserable in places, but an exceptional cast offsets in large part these deficiencies.

It is headed by Enid Bennett, who does Lizzie herself, a country miss whose education sets a town agog and bankrupts her father. Miss Bennett handles the role competently and looks younger in it than she did in her last Ince starring vehicles. She has a wistfulness in her personality that is invaluable in this type of thing.

The juvenile, Don Pettigrew, Lizzie's faithful lover, is done by Edward Hearn, who nearly always takes complete advantage of the situations which he is given, while the preposterous villain, Count Louis Roland, is managed in Leo White's good form.

Otis Harlan, as Sam Henshaw, in our estimation runs away bodily with his sequences and very nearly takes the entire picture. His characterization of the village groceryman, who has aspirations for "his Lizzie," beats anything that we have seen recently for both subtle and straightforward comedy.

Landers Stevens as the village philosopher is more than pleasing, while good work is done by Victory Bateman, Harry Todd and Lila Leslie, who complete the cast.

Lloyd Ingraham directed "Keeping Up With Lizzie," which should prove very gratifying from the box office viewpoint, everything considered.

"A WISE FOOL"

California

We have said so much about the adaptation, particularly the celluloided novel, that we have exhausted our vocabulary and since repetition rarely proves entertaining we will merely mention that "A Wise Fool" is such a one, or rather, Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Money Master," scenarized in this instance by its creator and produced by George Melford. To the end it remains the narrative with many interesting incidents, but far too little suspense to result in a wholly satisfactory photodrama. An early subtitle tells us that the story is based upon a man's changing philosophy, but the assertion fails to find sufficient proof in the action to bring conviction. However, the picture is marked by excellent performances and some of the best locations (presumably in Quebec) that we have seen in many moons.

The direction, although a bit ponderous in spots, progresses more easily than is always the case in Melford's productions. Peculiarly enough this director's atmosphere always hangs heavily about his characters.

The photography and technical effects are pleasing with the exception of several misplaced and shiningly apparent spot-lights When will the ordinary electricians do more diffusing?

The central figure in "The Wise Fool" is Jean Jacques Barbille, a personage of note in St. Savior's Parish, Quebec, who is in reality a simple soul enjoying a placid and unwavering trust in his own importance and the world's good faith toward him. The story is based upon the troubles which descend upon the unwitting head of this role, which is lent much of appeal by James Kirkwood, whose performance was more touching to us by far than any other in which we have seen him. It is an achievement to gain sympathy for a not-entirely-admirable character. Kirkwood here proves himself an artist at pathos with his interpretation of poor Jean Jacques' disillusionment and following anguish.

A no less artistically rendered portrayal is Carmen Dolores, Barbille's Spanish wife, which is done by Alice Hollister. Carmen's discontent with and desertion of Jean Jacques and her final realization of her own sin is quite beautiful, although the novel never succumbs to the photoplay in this character or in any other. Miss Hollister, however, makes up for any discrepancies in Carmen's action with her unusual characterization of the petulant, resentful woman. It is truly excellent.

Ann Forrest and William Boyd lend quite some interest to the story and complicate

The Screen Writers' Forum —Conducted by William E. Wing

WRITE IT!

I do not believe that writers should become panic-stricken because of threatening censorship. They should refuse to be stampeded. Strong, virile stories should be told now, just as they have been told throughout the centuries, in Bible and history even.

We are hearing alarming reports of this censorship rule and that which militates against bandits, killings, thrills, marriage questions and high dramatic episodes. Many writers are asking:

"What shall we do? Everything seems to be under the ban."

If this is true, then the picture industry is the victim of the greatest piece of intolerance that ever faced an oppressed nation. There is nothing left to do save to fight.

I do not mean that sex stuff, murder for murder's sake and other crime should run rampant. That has been the trouble with the stage, fiction and life itself throughout the past.

But, in all such cases, the law for one has been sufficient to attend the other. Police regulation of entertainment has never had a dire effect upon legitimate enterprises. The authorities quietly grasped the sinful offender by the neck and removed it, as was deserved, just as the hypocrite of the church or any business deserved exposure and punishment.

Because of the hypocrite, neither business nor church went under the swinging axe, however. Neither received general condemnation. Only the enemy, with an object in view, arose to denounce the whole fabric as bad, because of the filthy one who had sneaked in under the tent.

The laws of the United States and its various municipalities, are considered ample for the protection of 100,000,000 people. Officers of the law are deemed sufficient to contend with murderers, highwaymen, revolting criminals of lowest type and the whole sordid mass of offenders of the nation.

But the self-appointed reformer has declared that motion pictures, which preach sermons, teach high ideals and only touch on bits of the great, teeming life of a people, are in need of special policing because of their alleged "crimes."

It is time for the revolution, and the writer should begin it.

That kind of a challenge, flung into the face of justice itself, should cause the statue guarding the gates of the Atlantic waters to crumble with shame, while the picture hosts gather for battle.

Then let the virile story be written, and you will find that all studios are not surrendering without striking a blow. Many manufacturers will stand behind you and purchase your wares. Only the few will seek cover, and allow the special policeman to have his way.

JUST MILLING AROUND

Have you a little plot in your system?

Lots of people didn't know they had a thirst until Mr. Volstead came along and began removing temptation.

You will never know that you lugged that screen idea around all these years unless you corkscrew it out with a lead pencil.

There are three things which we do not understand. They are: the aim of a woman, the rejections of an editor, and the inside of a censor's dome.

The writer who weakens because of rejections is going to leave many a fat purse for the fellow who will not surrender to obstacles.

If, as you say, you are "just full of plots" but don't know how to write them, why fuss for the answer? Get a move on and chase the knowledge you thirst for.

If many more independent productions jump up, the photoplay writer will have to begin sitting up nights in order to meet the new demand.. Most of them want plenty of comedy with the drama.

Don't write stories of the glacier country, of the pyramids or scenes which demand the Atlantic fleet in action. Use that thinker and you will save lots of postage many times.

JOHN T. PRINCE

Formally casting and assistant director, again donning the grease paint. Finishing with Geo. Baker in "Little Eva Ascends."

If you "know" you are writing good plots, but constantly have your manuscripts returned, why not employ a critic? He can help you if he is competent. Studio editors are not in the business of aiding writers in the matter of proper form.

WHEN TO WRITE 'EM

There is a tendency of certain journals to explain how various fiction writers grasp time by the forelock and juggle around into a cramped position for the composition of another screamer. Perhaps a vivid paragraph, filled with sparkle and originality, anent the joyous photoplaywright in action, will come as a godsend to the few million persons who are only awaiting this final piece of information before breaking the barriers themselves.

Such entrants should not be deceived by the actions of professional authors. For example, Sinclair Lewis writes whole novels on trains. Scenario writers do not pursue this course. While it is true that trains motivate and sometimes frolic from the track, producing thrills and other pleasing situations, the fare still is 3 cents a mile. As no one ever knew of a photoplaywright to cease photoplaywriting, and trains average 30 miles an hour, er—well, scenarists do not write their screen plays upon trains.

The best time for some is midnight. If they do not wake up they write it the next day. Others can only write after a meal of tripe. When tripe is out of the market, the unfortunate writer is that way himself.

The pleasant story about Rupert Hughes writing his scenarios upon his cuffs, ran out about the time that his supply of linen was exhausted. You see, he had to proceed farther than the cuffs. He says he does not care about the expense, but a careless washerwoman eradicated a $10,000 tale with a 5-cent bar of soap once, and now he's off the cuff system for life.

Thompson Buchanan waits for an inspiration. When it arrives he gets his golf clubs to go out and sweep the cobwebs from the attic. After he has bribed the caddie and made the rounds, he finds his mind so obsessed by thoughts of food, that he drops the idea of writing for the day and proceeds to follow the dictates of conscience and table tools.

Frank E. Woods, who doesn't have to write, frequently cannot be restrained from seizing some one else's lead pencil and a tab of very yellow paper, after which nothing can tame him. His hours for doing this are after evening visitors have left his home and a tired larder. He writes until his movements happen to awaken his better half. Then he ceases very abruptly.

Our friend, J. C. Hawks, became a victim of the time habit very early in life. He wrote when his parents were absent, using charcoal upon any convenient wallpaper. He has abandoned the system now, so this will be of very little use to aspirants.

June Mathis never writes during mealtime excepting the meat course and dessert. All the other hours of the day are devoted to idly jotting down synopsis and continuity. It is supposed that she pauses to grasp a little slumber, now and then, but this is only a conjecture.

We could continue the list, but there should be sufficient information in the above to cover the subject fully for the burning genius who is hot on the trail.

CASH OR POSTAGE STAMPS?

If the student of photoplay writing could be privileged to glance through certain organs printed for the benefit of fiction writers, he would find many surprises and much encouragement therein.

Articles and letters from contributing writers speak of such things as sketches which bring $2 and $3; features which command from $8 to $15, and stories which bring the enormous returns of one cent a word, which would total $25 for a complete story of 2,500 words. They report that 2 cents a word is "unusual for the cheaper magazines." Last week, the gleanings of several of these publications found the high spot to be a story published in one of the better magazines which (with great triumph) commanded $125.

Even the beginner in photoplay writing, who had any knowledge of studio prices would be offended if offered $125 for a successful feature photoplay. Little comedies, written in brief synopsis form command from $50 to $100 when used for one reel productions.

While absurd prices for novels and fiction stories which must be adapted to screen needs are tumbling, good, healthy checks still are awaiting writers of original photoplays, and the supply is not equal to the demand.

ARE YOU PLAYING?

"To write for a livelihood, even on a complete misapprehension of our powers, is at least a respectable impulse. To play at literature is altogether inexcusable; the motive is vanity, the object notoriety, the end contempt," says George Henry Lewis, in his first treatise to be published in "The Editor."

Listen further to him:

"Literature is at once the cause and effect of social progress. It deepens our natural sensibilities, and strengthens by ex-

RETURNS TO LOS ANGELES

Tula Belle, child actress, will arrive in Los Angeles presently after a season with the "Whirl of New York" at the Times Square Theatre, New York.

Miss Tula Belle will be remembered as "Mytel" in Maurice Tourneur's production of "The Blue Bird;" also with "The Little Players Company" of Hollywood. On her arrival Miss Tula will take up her screen work again before returning to New York later for a new stage production.

MEIGHAN PICTURE

"The Conquest of Canaan," Paramount's picturization of Booth Tarkington's novel of that name, comes to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of Monday, the 8th, with Thomas Meighan as the star and Doris Kenyon as leading woman.

EQUITY ANNOUNCEMENT

The Actors' Equity Association announces the engagement of Mr. Bennie Singer, formerly Metro casting director, as field representative for that organization. Mr. Harry Weil will continue in charge of the casting office.

Equity states that it is necessary to resume the commission charge, which was rescinded on June 1st. After August 6th, a five per cent commission will be charged on all engagements. This decision is the result of action by its Executive Committee, which was approved by the New York Council.

LINDER ON WORLD TOUR

After completing his present contract, Max Linder expects to make a world tour as a vacation. The whole trip will consume about a year. It is announced that Linder will make personal appearances in every large city on the way.

GOLDWYN, HOST

Present at a dinner recently given by Samuel Goldwyn were Vice-President Lehr and his assistant, M. D. Gardner; H. E. Edington, business manager; Mr. Bern, Mr. Block and Mr. Hamilton; Charles Kenyon and Julien Josephson, of the editorial department; Lewis W. Physioc, head of the laboratory; Cedric Gibbons, art director; J. J. Cohn, production manager, and Joseph A. Jackson, manager of studio publicity.

Kathleen Ley will play the part of Sherin in Ferdinand Earle's motion painting of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

MYERS COMPILES FILM NOTES

Harry Myers has prepared a sketch-book of the film life in Hollywood, which will soon appear on the market. The copy is being published by an Eastern concern.

ANDREE TOURNEUR

Playing "Annette" in "The Conquering Power"

CHARITY PREVIEW

A national preview will be held in the interests of children's charities at the Ambassador Theater presently, when the Assistance League will have charge of the presentation for the first time in America of the Italian film, "Rigoletto," adapted from Victor Hugo's novel.

Leading producers and stars will witness the picture and attend a tea dansant which is to follow.

SURPRISE PARTY

The technical staff of her supporting company tendered Wanda Hawley a surprise birthday luncheon recently. Included in the party were Director Heffron, Cinematographer Collins, Burton Hawley, Sylvia Ashton, Warner Baxter, Mae Busch, Dick Rosson, Tay Malarkey and Josie Von Deski.

FOR ONCE THE CRITICS ALL AGREE

In regard to the work of the man on the cover—Ralph Lewis.

WID'S: "Ralph Lewis gives one of the most unusual character portrayals that the screen has had lately, a performance that ranks with Barrymore's 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' and George Arliss' 'The Devil.'"

N. Y. Review: "Balzac certainly would have acclaimed Mr. Lewis' characterization in which all the greed, avarice, hardness of heart, selfishness and hatred of the old skinflint is minutely and powerfully revealed."

M. P. News: "All acting honors go to Ralph Lewis as the miserly and demented stepfather."

Zit's Weekly: "Ralph Lewis does some really capital work as the miser."

Variety: "Ralph Lewis, as the old miser, gives one of the best character delineations seen in many a day."

M. P. World: "Ralph Lewis as Pere Grandet gives a supremely able impersonation of a man whose miserly instinct grows until it destroys him, without resorting to the facial contortions and bodily indications of decrepitude which generally accompany the acting of such a part."

TITLING STEWART PRODUCTION

Having completed the art titles for Selig-Rork's "The Ne'er-to-Return Road" and Louis B. Mayer's "Her Mad Bargain," Frank F. Greene is at present designing a series for the Anita Stewart production, "A Question of Honor."

FINISHES LOCATION SCENES

George Chesebro has returned from Yosemite, where the Morante company has been shooting exteriors for the screen version of J. Inman Kane's book, "The Recoil," in which Chesebro is being featured.

CHAPLIN RESTING

Charlie Chaplin has deserted his studio and is vacationing at his new Hollywood home.

MAKING PERSONAL APPEARANCES

Lura Anson has recently returned from the East, where she has been making personal appearances in connection with "Crazy to Marry," starring Roscoe Arbuckle.

MEXICAN TOUR

Frank Mayo expects to vacation until September, when he will resume picture activities on the "U" lot. A personal appearance tour through Mexico is included in Mr. Mayo's summer plans.

HERE ON VACATION

Saul S. Harris, president of the Kempner chain of theatres of the South, has arrived in Los Angeles for a vacation. As the guest of Marshall Neilan, Mr. Harris is making a tour of the studios, accompanied by his wife and two children.

FOR CO-OPERATION

The following film notables were the invited guests at the Brotherhood dinner of the Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Monday evening, and spoke on "Shall We Have Censorship?": Reginald Barker, Bert Lytell, Thomas N. Miranda, June Mathis, Kathlyn Williams, Charles Eyton, and Wanda Hawley. Plans were effected for a larger meeting to be held in August, when dennite action will be taken to extend the co-operation between church and film producers already begun.

CHRISTIE SCHEDULE

Christie releases will hereafter be made on a basis of two each month.

This new series is Al Christie's third year in the two-reel field. During the first year twelve two-reel comedies were made, and the yearly schedule now includes twenty-four pictures.

HAYAKAWA PREPARING

Sessue Hayakawa and his wife, Tsuru Aoki, have recently returned from their Eastern trip, and Hayakawa is engaged in supervising the preparation of his next story, the name of which will be announced within a few days.

SANTSCHI'S SIXTH COMPLETED

Tom Santschi has recently completed filming "The Spirit of the Lake," the sixth picture of his new series under the Cyrus J. Williams banner for Pathe release. Bob Bradbury wrote and directed this picture.

FOREIGN RELEASES

Harry Owens, special representative for Thomas H. Ince and the Associated Producers, is in the Orient, making arrangements for future Associated Producers' showings.

A preview of "Lotus Blossom," a Leong But Jung production, just finished, was shown at Miller's recently.

Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton has recently completed the production of "The Vagrant," the second of his new series of two-reelers for Educational.

Clark Irvine's services have recently been secured by the Pacific Film Company to handle press books and publicity material at its Culver City studios.

Ramon Samaniegos, who interprets the juvenile role in Earle's production of "The Rubaiyat," also composed and directed the dances which the production contains.

Victor Potel is a member of the all-star cast of "Lavender and Old Lace," now playing at Tally's. Mr. Potel will be remembered as Slippery Slim of Snakeville, principal comedian for the old Essanay Film Company.

CONFERS WITH CURWOOD

Dorothy Farnum, scenario writer for Whitman Bennett, is in conference with James Oliver Curwood regarding a series of Curwood pictures, which she is adapting for Pine Tree Films, Inc., of Portland, Maine. Miss Farnum has been loaned for the occasion by Whitman Bennett, with whom she is under contract.

GOLDWYN COMEDY

Goldwyn has purchased the screen rights of "His Back Against the Wall," a farce-comedy by Frederick Faust, better known under his pen-name of John Frederick, which will go into production at the Goldwyn studios in the near future.

RELEASED

"The Last Raid" is the title of episode fifteen of the Seitz serial, "The Sky Ranger," which Pathe will release August 7th. June Caprice is co-starred in the chapter play with George B. Seitz.

NEW STORY

The Charles R. Seeling Productions, Inc., which has completed its second five-reel Western feature, is at present selecting the story for its next production.

Herbert Rawlinson, who is to be starred by Universal, has returned from Canadian locations with the Priscilla Dean company.

"Braco," the golden Dane, has finished with Geo. Baker in "Little Eva Ascends" and is at present with Alice Lake in "The Golden Gift."

Charles Meakin, Jr., has finished his engagement with Gareth Hughes in "Little Eva Ascends," in which he has been playing the leading child role.

Muriel MacCormac, child actress, may be seen at the Symphony in "Miracles of the Jungle." Miss Muriel has recently finished a picture with Century Comedies.

"The Great Moment," Gloria Swanson's first starring production, and Elinor Glyn's initial screen story, will be given its western premiere at Grauman's Rialto Sunday, Aug. 7th.

Little Walter Wilkinson has recently finished six weeks with Larry Semon in "The Bell Hop" and has left for Catalina Island to join the Rock Company in the filming of four pictures.

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer

Glen Cedar Ranch, Burbank, Calif.

My Dear Nephew: Your letter with the sad news at hand. Your Aunt and I both registered grief. Maybe your company will start again in two weeks, but it will be the first one I ever heard of doing it. I know all about those two-week lay-offs. It usually means two years. Better look around quick for an opening. Am sorry I can't suggest something likely right now, but the business is in a bad way. Your Aunt is wondering how you are going to finish paying for the Henry F., but I told her you are lucky it wasn't a Pierce Arrow or a Cadillac. That is what the Broadway twinklers will have to pay for.

I understand that the Privates of High Finance say that pictures cost too much. That there must be a cut of from twenty-five to fifty per cent in salaries of all departments. If they can get an actor for five hundred that's just as good as the one they have been paying a thousand, and if they can get a director for three hundred who's as good as the one they have been paying six hundred. And if, if you understand, they can get a photographer for a hundred that's just as good as the one they have been paying two hundred—if they can do all these I say, go to it. The market has been shy of good pictures for some time, but now it's even low on poor pictures. So while the exhibitors and big producers are putting over a few gas attacks, it's a good time for the little bit of a fellow to put over a few pictures. Some of the boys and girls, as you have probably heard, are cooperating in this. They are taking a small-part salary while a production is being made, and the rest when it is sold. If you run across this kind of a proposition, give 'em a hand. It will all help bring a little closer the day of the Independent Producer and Independent Exhibitor. I want to say in passing that everybody, photographers in particular, should get what they are worth. What they are worth depends upon what the employer realizes from their services. If we are offered less than what we think we are worth, we can take it or get a job at something else. But if we do take the lower salary, pride in our profession demands that we give the same service we would have given for the larger salary. Speaking commercially, if you don't do any more than you get paid for, you will never get paid for any more than you do.

Just how long in days and months this condition of the business is going to continue, nobody seems to know. Only one thing seems certain, and that is the passing of big business. The exhibitor wants pictures, but he wants them at a price which will enable him to reduce admission prices. If it costs about as much to see a screen production as it does to witness a stage production, neither show will do a very big business. The price of admission made screen entertainment popular, and there is no reason why it should not be as popular as ever right now. So far as the foreign picture is concerned, I am in favor of allowing only a certain per cent of such films to be shown during the year. And I don't think it is necessary for American producers to go to Europe or any place else to make pictures simply as a matter of economy. Sets with three dollars a roll wall paper, and airplane salaries for so-called heavenly bodies, have made pictures expensive. The producers can't blame any one but themselves for this cost because they have bid against each other for the services of the different screen favorites. One producer creates a star, and by advertising makes her Valuable (?) to some other producer. I am willing to put up my Catalina goat against a jack rabbit that the picture we are told cost seventy-five thousand that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

The Lyllyan Cushman Productions, filming an as yet untitled five-reel drama, the first of a series of three such, starring Lyllyan Cushman, is on location at Manitou, Colorado, where the company will remain for a fortnight.

M. T. Steward is directing the southern girl in these pictures, which will be largely produced at a Hollywood studio.

WILL DELIVER WILLAT PRINT

C. A. (Doc) Willat, who left some time ago with the print of Irvin V. Willat's last feature, "The Face of World," for the Hodkinson Corp., New York, is remaining in that city for the print of Mr. Willat's current production, "Fifty Candles," which is nearing completion.

Ray McKee is building a home in Hollywood Park.

Henry Updergraff is now assisting Art Rosson in the direction of Bill Russell in "The Desert Shall Bloom" at the Fox studio.

Arthur Redden is playing a part in "Winners of the West," under the direction of Edward Laemmle.

J. P. McCarthy, who produced "Out of the Dust," has started production again at the Russell & Russell studio, featuring Russell Simpson.

Billie Rhodes' next picture will be "The Star Reporter," a five-reel special in which she will be co-featured with Truman Van Dyke.

Larry Semon, Vitagraph comedian, was named as stage announcer for the Woodcrafters' vaudeville show, recently held in the Philharmonic Auditorium.

Forest Robinson and Ralph Bausfield are playing in support of Richard Barthelmess in "Tol'ble David," being produced at the Biograph studios in New York.

Wesley Barry has arrived from New York after several months' absence, during which time he starred in Gus Edwards' "Schooldays" before the camera, and also played with John Barrymore in the Neilan picture, "The Hidden Paradise."

Vol. IV. SATURDAY, AUGUST 13, 1921 No. 18

Music in the Cinema Theatre

There are two classes of cinema-goers: that which attends the motion picture theatre for the enjoyment of the drama and another which is attracted by the musical presentations that, due to the commendable shrewdness of the modern showman, may be found in all up-to-date picture houses. The exhibitor has wisely spent huge sums of money to maintain first class orchestras, install instruments and pay for the preparation of elaborate orchestrations to accompany his bookings which the public, dazzled by the film drama's rapid rise from the penny arcade to its present elevation, a plane which may be safely risked now and again by even the most soaring of highbrows, attends in greater numbers as a result. We all realize that the presence of good music in the theatre has done much to advance the popularity of the screen by appealing to its students and lovers.

But—today our foremost dramatists and musicians tell us that this very combination, as it is being handled, is proving detrimental to both arts. Their general argument seems to be this:

Although one art may be rendered more effective, oftentimes, by the assistance of another, the combination must not be obvious lest the position of the first be weakened and the second become meaningless in the jumble.

In the picture theatre the first consideration is, quite naturally, the drama, and anything that detracts from the attainment of the highest interest for that drama is bad art. With a large percentage of the average audience, incessant music with its film plays does just this. A familiar strain, in all probability having little or no bearing upon that which is before one on the silversheet will, particularly in a case where its subject knows music, often give rise to interference in the form of an associate train of thought which immediately proves ruinous to the individual's study of the play. On the other hand, there are many among us to whom indiscriminate music means comparatively little and who are therefore unimpressed by it in the theatre save that its persistence and oftentimes inapplicable ponderousness weighs upon senses that should be alert for the subject in hand.

Heretofore, in almost every instance, our music scores have injured some part of their photodramas, an unfortunate fact which must be blamed upon the ordinary conductor's lack of dramatic knowledge and the exhibitor's somewhat natural instinct to get his money's worth out of his orchestra by keeping it continually "at it."

There is not a doubt but that, were producers willing or in a position to expend the required time and money, that an original music score might be composed for each production and wisely applied where it is necessary, as for instance in the establishment and development of a character, or in the event that an effect might be assisted to vividness by it, the real note in this much discussed problem would be sounded. Handled appropriately in this way and more sparingly (there are dramatic actions which should never be set to music) it may be made invaluable to the film; as it is managed today, the best in each is mutilated.

Being an unprecedentedly progressive industry, we should not fail to remedy such a marked defect as the one here presented. Advance alone justifies the existence of anything.

The Panic Artist

We reprint here from the Exhibitor's Herald a few remarks concerning a recent statement by one of our industry's officials. We all know the sort of fellow it refers to, and if his own panic crying will eliminate him, we are almost tempted to encourage it.

"A particularly appropriate statement was made last week by S. R. Kent, Famous Players distribution chief. Mr. Kent sees in the present situation an inevitable tendency toward the elimination of what he describes as the 'yellow streakers' and the 'quitters' of the business.

"The Kent statement is particularly appropriate because it focuses attention upon the certain failure to survive of that type of person who seizes upon the first indication of a slower pace in business to shout panic in the desperate hope that his individual failure will be attributed not to his own unfitness but to the general conditions.

"This type of person is the commercial counterpart to the one who shouts 'Fire' in a crowded theatre. In each instance it is a case of lost nerve.

"An unusual combination of unfortunate circumstances has resulted temporarily in a condition which is a test of the men and the companies of the industry. When the full course of this test has been run it will be found that the industry is rid of a lot of personal and corporate deadwood that under less drastic procedure might take many years to eliminate. And when this is done the way will be cleared for the realization of Mr. Kent's prophecy that 'there is no industry so fortunately situated to reap the benefits that will accrue through deflation and sane reorganization in the business world.'"

Film Capital Production Notes

BAKER SIGNS NEW CONTRACT

George D. Baker, who has just completed a series of three comedies, starring Gareth Hughes, has signed a contract under which he will make another series of pictures with the same star.

"Little Eva Ascends" is Mr. Baker's most recent production with Mr. Hughes. The other two pictures of the series were "Garments of Truth" and "The Hunch."

TO MAKE FIVE-REELERS

Ranger Bill Miller recently signed a contract with Cinart, Inc., whereby he will make twelve five-reel Northwest Mounted Police pictures, two of which have been completed.

Walter Bell is directing the star, and production on the third of the series will begin immediately.

"FANNY HERSELF" RETITLED

"No Woman Knows" is the title finally settled upon for the Universal-Jewel production directed by Tod Browning from Edna Ferber's novel, "Fanny Herself," in which Mabel Julienne Scott is featured.

CHRISTIE NOTES

"Saving Sister Susie" is the title of a new two-reel comedy which has been started under the direction of Scott Sidney, featuring Dorothy Devore.

Bobby Vernon is being featured in a two-reel comedy now filming, titled "Pure and Simple," which William Beaudine is directing.

Neal Burns and Viora Daniel will appear together in the next Al Christie comedy, soon to go into production.

MACDONALD PICTURES

"Stranger than Fiction," the Katherine MacDonald picture which has arrived for exhibition at an early date, is the forerunner of other MacDonald releases, which will soon come west, among them, "Her Social Value," "Man's Game" and "Peachie."

SANTSCHI MAKING WALKER STORY

In the San Jacinto mountains, exterior scenes are being filmed of Robert Walker's story, "Hard to Catch," Tom Santschi's fifteenth picture under the Cyrus J. Williams banner for Pathe. Bob Bradbury is directing.

HAYAKAWA PRODUCTIONS

Norman Dawn is directing Sessue Hayakawa in his forthcoming R-C production, entitled "The Street of the Flying Dragon," which will be followed by "The Vermilion Pencil," the continuity for which is being written by Edwin Warren Guyol.

TENTH EPISODE RELEASED

"The Water Peril," tenth episode of the Pathe serial, "The Yellow Arm," has been scheduled for release by Pathe, August 21st. Juanita Hansen is starred in the serial, with Warner Oland and Marguerite Courtot prominently featured in the cast.

GREY STORY FINISHED

Zane Grey is working on his new story to be filmed presently by Benjamin B. Hampton. E. Richard Schayer, scenario chief for the Hampton interests, is working on the continuity.

The First National picture, "What Women Love," with Annette Kellerman, has recently been released in Australia.

Ward Caulfield, Virginia Ware and Mary Wynn are cast in the present William Beaudine comedy in production at the Christie studios.

AT LASKY'S

Wallace Reid will presently begin work on "Rent Free," the story which Elmer Rice is scenarizing and which Howard Higgin will direct.

Jack Holt begins Monday on "The Call of the North," by Stewart Edward White. The original novel was called "Conjuror's House." Joseph Henabery is the director and Rollin Sturgeon supervisor of this picture. The cast has not as yet been announced.

August 22d is the date assigned for the beginning of Ethel Clayton's new Paramount picture, "The Cradle," adapted by Olga Printzlau from Eugene Brieux' play. Julia Crawford Ivers will supervise the picture.

Shortly after the completion of "The Sheik," in which Agnes Ayres has been appearing with Rudolph Valentino, Miss Ayres will begin work on her first starring vehicle, the nature and title of which have not yet been announced.

Thomas Meighan arrives this week from New York and is scheduled to begin work presently on Geo. M. Cohan's success, "A Prince There Was," which Tom Forman will direct.

AT UNIVERSAL

"Foolish Wives" will be released in October. Erich von Stroheim is at present making the first screen cut and the picture will be ready for its preview on August 15th when censors will arrive from all over the country to view the production.

Eddie Polo has returned from Catalina, where location scenes were shot for "The Secret Four," his new serial, which Albert Russell is directing.

Art Acord, making "Winners of the West," is on location in the Chatsworth hills with the entire unit.

Frank Mayo will begin on "Dr. Jim," his forthcoming special attraction, September 1st.

Marie Prevost is completing her second comedy-drama, in which she is being directed by King Baggot. The story is called "The Girl Who Knew All About Men." Harry Myers appears opposite the star.

AT REALART

Mary Miles Minter will arrive from her European trip sometimes in August and will start work on "Tillie," which is scheduled to begin August 22d. "Tillie" is from the story, "Tillie, the Mennonite Maid," by Frank Howe, Jr., based on the novel by Helen R. Martin. Alice Eyton wrote the scenario.

Constance Binney has started work on "The Heart of Youth," the story by Sonya Levine, scenarized by Percy Heath and Aubrey Stauffer.

Bebe Daniels is busy on "Spring Fever," by Katherine Pinkerton and Grace Drew, which Chester M. Franklin is directing.

AT VITAGRAPH

Larry Semon and his company are locationing at Lake Hume, where practically all of the next Semon comedy will be made.

Director David Smith, Pauline Starke, Henry B. Walthall and other members of the "Flower of the North" cast, returned this week from Truckee, Calif.

FINISHES FIRST

Bert Roach has finished the one-reel comedy called "His Unlucky Berth," under the direction of Craig Hutchinson. The comedian and his director are now at work on another short reeler entitled, "Copped."

Current Reviews

"THE CONQUERING POWER"

Mission

Rex Ingram comes back after his very successful "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" with another unusual photoplay of, however, an entirely different type. "The Conquering Power," as most of us know, is June Mathis' screen adaptation of Balzac's "Eugenie Grandet," a literary work containing much valuable picture material which has been used to excellent advantage in the scenario. Being the story of a man's great avarice and his final destruction by the gold he worships, it contains pronounced possibilities for the utilization of many wierd effects, such as the dying miser's terrifying hallucinations. These artistically managed visitations are ghostly enough to hand a shiver to the "blase-est" of mankind, but that it may be rescued from the classification—uncanny, the production's love theme is treated with a very human, wholesome sweetness.

Any inconsistencies in the French village life of "Eugenie Grandet's" time are quite cleverly excused by the editors in explanatory titles at the picture's off-set, wherein it is stated that no attempt at absolute detail accuracy has been made in the telling of this story of the ages; consequently there is nothing mentionable on that score. The photography and lighting are causes for continual joy, and some almost startling effects are obtained with them.

Ingram has already proven his sense of the dramatic, but he re-proves it here with his superb direction of a delightfully "trouping" cast.

From the standpoint of vivid characterization the picture belongs to Ralph Lewis, who interprets Pere Grandet, a miser whose death is as fascinating as it is repellant. Moreover, it is a masterpiece in the hands of this actor, who has long been forging his way to the highest pinnacle in dramatic achievement. Lewis' interpretation makes Pere live for us today as he unquestionably once lived in Balzac's sensitive mind. To us Grandet is both abhorrent and pitifully childlike in his passion for his beloved plaything—gold. Indeed, there is almost a tear where he glees over the cradleful of glittering pieces, and it is possible that this action strikes the really big note in the play. Throughout, Lewis' tempo is consistent in this performance, which ranks among his best, if there are any to approach it.

Alice Terry's most convincing work is also seen here as Eugenie Grandet, Pere's stepdaughter, whose unselfishness finds her love and whose patience restores it after the intervention of years and misunderstanding. Infinite care in the direction of this part is continually perceptible without, we may say, being obvious. In any event Eugenie more than gets the sympathy she goes after and her romance is exceptionally beautiful in its tenderness.

Charles Grandet, the gallant young Parisian who captures Eugenie's heart, is rendered quite picturesque by Rudolph Valentino, whose Latin characterizations are coming so much into prominence.

A well chosen type to play Charles' ill-fated father is Eric Mayne, and Carrie Baumery, adds a significant touch as Eugenie's mother, who is but another possession of her dominant husband, Pere.

Edward Connelly assists the opposition in the role of the notary, Cruchot, who would marry his son to Eugenie, the heiress, while that nondescript young man himself is made the ridiculous village lout by George Atkinson.

Some carefully placed comedy, bordering the slap-stick, is handled by Mary Hearn, who plays Nanon, the Grandet servant.

Willard Lee Hall and Mark Fenton each have a few good scenes as the Abbe and M. des Grassins; while Bridgetta Clark and Ward Wing complete the list of players as des Grassin's wife and son, save for C. E. Collins, whose make-up for the ghost of gold is more than hideous.

Playing "Stella" in "Short Skirts"
at the Superba This Week

Whether or not "The Conquering Power" will prove a sensation is a matter for speculation, but it is a well rounded drama, more than happily comparable with those which are being foisted upon the public this summer. Of it Ingram has made no spectacle—he intended none. It is enough to do what one sets out to do.

"SCRAP IRON"

Kinema

Hundreds of fans and no mean representation of the profession turned out to see Charles Ray's "Scrap Iron," which re-opened the Kinema theatre this week, that their curiosities might be satisfied regarding this actor's directorial ability, for in this picture we have Ray's first personally-directed production. Oftentimes we find a star's pictures deteriorating when he undertakes the megaphone holder's job in addition to his own, but in this particular instance we have a knockout story with several new twists correctly put over to gain the desired effect, so that we have only the best to report. One thing is certain, this picture will bring Ray a new host of admirers in the country's mothers, for "Scrap Iron" concerns a boy whose mother is his only sweetheart. Of course this story of Chas. E. Van Loan, from the Saturday Evening Post, includes the inevitable girl, one who hurts the lad with her disloyalty, only to return rapidly to his side when success is his, but oh!—what a relief it is to see our hero in the last sequence literally give the little roughneck "the gate." We were intensely afraid he'd open his arms and stand there dumbly, as they have a habit of doing. Aside from this decided "kick" there are several more, and far greater suspense than Ray's productions have been able to boast lately. Technically "Scrap Iron" is very good.

The star is seen this time in a somewhat different role. He does John Steel, who is dubbed "Scrap Iron" by his associates because he respects a mother's wishes sufficiently to refrain from a boxing career. All of that sensitive youth that is so individually Ray is brought into play in this youngster, who is endeared to the audience by the homely details which surround him. A rare appeal is created by the actor for this boy and much heart interest is a result. The Ray fans will get much of joy from Johnny Scrap Iron.

The girl next door is cleverly characterized by Vera Steadman, who makes her a very human, very wicked little minx. She has little sympathy, however, which makes her final abrupt exit an occasion for great satisfaction rather than otherwise.

Lydia Knott is lovely as John's beloved mother, while Tom Wilson offers some rich comedy with Bill Dugan, John's faithful trainer.

Tom O'Brien, Stanton Heck and Charles Wheelock are well placed in Battling Burke, Tim Riley and Matt Brady, an "athletic club" triangle.

Al Ray assisted the star in his direction of "Scrap Iron," which is a First National release.

"THE GREAT MOMENT"

Grauman's Rialto

There are unquestionably thousands of our less classically inclined brother and sister (particularly sister) readers of fiction who will welcome to the great benefit of the box office the release of Elinor Glyn's initial photoplay attempt, "The Great Moment." They always get a kick out of Elinor and to make the prospect of this entertainment even more attractive they know that this production also serves as Gloria Swanson's first star picture. It is to be readily admitted that the psychology of this combination is worthy of considerable admiration, due to the fact that both of the artists in question appeal largely to the same class of fans, which forms, by the way, no mean piece of the general populace.

That "The Great Moment" has for the most part an annoyingly aged and exceedingly sheer plot which has difficulty in holding its elaborate sets and superior cast together, will probably detract not one whit from the picture's value so far as the majority of its audiences are concrned, for hasn't it all of the madly impassioned moments that its authoress' name guarantees, not to mention the bizarre costumes and barbaric head-dresses that they affect for Miss Swanson out at Lasky's? These flesh-pots will be accepted avidly by many even at this stage of advanced fan education, but the profession is going to emit one resounding laugh over it all. Speaking of garments, in this instance, it is agreed that there is a great value attached to the sensational in any fiction, but it must not out-distance reason, as has Mrs. West, who seems to be running away with herself in the designing line. Detail must not kill drama, as it does here.

The star fills quite typically the role of Nadine Pelham, a daughter of England's nobility, who comes to America to meet a man and a fatal serpent. Gloria may be depended upon to be exotic always. Her followers will be delighted with Nadine.

Milton Sills' portrayal of Bayard Delaval must be reviewed the same way, i. e., he convinces with his role, which is perhaps better played than written. Delaval should not have been dropped for such lengthy stretches in the story. It loses him value.

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS' ASSOCIATION

At the next bi-monthly meeting of the A. D. A. it will resume its regular program of having a feature speaker top the entertainment. The next meeting will be held Friday evening, August 19th.

The Third Annual Barn Dance, held July 30th, was a success, and the Assistant Directors' Association wishes to thank the public for its attendance and the studios and merchants and others of Hollywood and Los Angeles for their co-operation, which helped the dance go "over the top."

Harry Tenbrooke is assisting Reggie Morris in completing the fifth of a series of 26 two-reel features. They expect to go to Tia Juana to view the Dempsey fight films, next week.

Scott R. Beal has started a two weeks' vacation and on his return will be with Director Wray, who will direct Wray Special Productions.

William Crinley is scheduled to start next week assisting Director Scotty Dunlap in the production of Mary Anderson Feature Films at the J. D. Hampton studio.

Eugene DeRue will finish this week his first production as co-director with Eddie Lyons of the well-known team of Lyons and Moran. Their new picture will be a two-reel comedy, produced at the Berwilla studios for the Arrow Productions. Mr. De Rue was with Lyons and Moran for five years as co-director at the Universal studios.

Dick Sherer is preparing the script of Elinor Glyn's book, "Six Days." The director has not been decided on, but it is understood that Miss Glyn will supervise, personally, the direction of the production.

Claude Camp has returned from a vacation at Catalina.

Virgil Hart started August 3d, assisting Director George Marshall in the production of five-reel Johnny Walker pictures at Fox.

Charles Huber arrived in the city on the 3d from Catalina, where he has been busy on the K. C. Entertainment Committee.

DEXTER WITH GOLDWYN

Elliott Dexter has joined the Goldwyn forces, having been loaned by Famous Players-Lasky, and will play the leading male role in "Grand Larceny," by Albert Payson Terhune, which goes into production soon under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

JOINS R-C STAFF

Ace Berry, formerly with Selznick, First National, and Mayflower, has joined the publicity staff of R-C Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Berry is attached to the home office personnel in New York and will handle special exploitation of productions for exhibitors.

IN WORSLEY CAST

Tom Gallery, Richard Tucker and Roy Atwell have been chosen for important parts in the forthcoming Goldwyn production, "Grand Larceny," which Wallace Worsley will direct.

CHANGE

The child playing "Cupid" in "Crazy to Marry" is "Maxine," not Jackie Young, as previously announced.

Kenneth Harlan will be seen in support of Constance Talmadge in "Good for Nothing," her latest picture for First National.

ENACTS HEAVY

Victor Rottman is playing the heavy role in "Pure and Simple," filming at the Christie studios, under the direction of William Beaudine.

COULDN'T STAY AWAY

The famous feline of ancient song, who always returned, despite such things as very fatal bricks and other treatment reserved for that kind of pesky critter, seems to have nothing at all upon the tough old bird: "How long shall the synopsis be?"

This time-honored query has been led to its last resting place so many times that one would suppose it would eventually give up its ninth life and remain content as a decedent. But it refuses.

An enthusiastic reader again has fired the query at the writer of this department, while an able professional magazine has, in recent issue, devoted two pages to the matter.

Risking the same kind of a brick mentioned above, and denying not that the mission of the same is entirely praiseworthy, we hereby take the plunge, defending our position only on the claim of charity. We mean the brain-frazzled studio editor who has been sentenced to read these same synopses, and who cannot evade the issue without jumping from luxury to penury.

If, perchance, this article induces one guilty wretch, even, to see the light and change his ways, the effort will not have been in vain.

A motion picture synopsis should be as long as that demanded by the dramatic situations, not the incidentals. Each situation, which must advance the plot, should be written fully and in action. That is all. For a feature there should be about 50 of these situations.

Some can be told briefly. Significant situations require longer paragraphs. The average feature synopsis, written by a trained writer, will average around 10 pages of single-space typewriting, or about 20 pages of double spacing.

The editor is not a mind reader. He cannot see actualities which are in the writer's mind, but are not on paper. Therefore he cannot "read between the lines," if special action is intended. But he doesn't care to read a few thousand words which reveal people indulging in thought, or making journeys from one place of action to another, or long wordy arguments between principals, or anything else which has no screen-story value.

HERE IS THAT ANSWER

Taking an unfair advantage of a humble writer who suggested that he would reply to queries which were not over his head, a few of the studio "boys" have seemed to bunch their troubles, passing them along with the suggestion that the reply column prod the would-be scenario writer upon the various common points involved. Therefore:

"Situations" in a story are the steps by which that story climbs. Each situation aids in the further expansion of the plot. At times the situation may be a crisis, but the term "dramatic situation" is less puzzling to the student than the term "crisis." The real crisis of your story is the climax, which should conclude the tale, although precedent allows a quick fade to the scene of final happiness where the climax is rather mussy.

The fifty situations: Some person, with kindly intent, has told the uninitiated to have 50 situations in his synopsis. Evidently this was intended as a definite guide as to length. Without some such understanding, many persons write stories which could be played in a reel or two. "Not sufficient material" has been the cause of many a rejection.

Mexicans: Writers are advised against using Mexican characters in their melodramatic stories because the government of these United States objects. The rule stands as to the Japanese.

Murder: Stories based upon crime itself are avoided by studios because of the activity of the self-appointed censor, who would save us all from our own folly.

GENEVIEVE BERTE

Costume plays: Mr. Exhibitor himself is the protestant. He says that costume and period plays "kill" his line at the box office.

Heart interest: Replying to a definite query. If heart interest is so strong that it holds the audience throughout the presentation of the picture, it will serve in place of high dramatic action. The same is true as regards the story which carries a very high percentage of entertainment value.

Sex stuff: Makes too much trouble all around; being done to death. Public as well as censor objecting.

WE'RE SORRY FOR HIM

Now comes the rumble of the low groan from our friend, the successful fiction writer, who objects to the rejection of his masterpieces offered to the studio market. He violently resents these "fool" turndowns upon the ground of logic. What do people of the new art know about logic, anyway? He raves when climax, dramatic conflict, or any of the hard-and-fast rules demanded by the photoplay are tossed back at him with his manuscript. He knows full well what he has gone by all his life, in print, without being hampered by these dod-rotted objections, and the public has "eaten his stuff." Then comes his natural inquiry: "Why will not the public accept the same stuff, written in the same way, upon the screen?" It is a new game, my brethren, and must be played under new rules. Your stuff has been played your way, and the box office has torn its hair in consequence. The "same public" is not out on a reading jaunt this trip, Mister Fiction Writer; it is out for mental athletics and won't pay for anything else at the picture theatre. Then why not be a good sport, acknowledge you have something else to learn, and become a student of the "other" profession that is going to fatten up the old bank account?

SACKCLOTH

It occurs, now and then in the lives of department writers, that they are derided and held up to scorn by those whose wisdom has given pro bono publico the advantage over his fellow-man.

Just what should constitute the makeup of a photoplay department in such a publication as "Camera!" or other magazine which has a professional following, is a moot question. It never can be settled by the human jury—only the gods could make such a decision. And in that case—heaven help the gods!

Therefore, when an eminent critic writes from "general delivery" and signs his august name with a leadpencil which could not have cost more than a dime, reviling the editor for failing to operate a free scenario school upon this page, we are cast down and abashed.

Because we are not teaching this aspirant how to write 'em for Griffith and others, we are rebuked and all our efforts are as dust.

We are very sorry that we cannot fly to the rescue of this homeless one but we will firmly declare that—

The department which attempts to operate a school of instruction by means of a printed page per week, is off the track, and any weak son of Adam who attempts it is worthy of his sire—the man driven out of Eden because he dallied with the unknown.

THE THIN PLOT

Entertainment of the people, that world-old problem of he who would make mankind happier and better, is so kaleidoscopic in its nature, that only he who Paddocks may read. The writer who seeks to provide first aid in the business of giving the movie lover what he wants today—and especially tomorrow—should be the first to read the signs of the times. The popular demand in this direction now seems to have turned heavily to the comedy-drama. It has been discovered that it is not always the great theme that cleans up. Somewhat to the surprise of the manufacturer himself, it now is found that a sparkling feature, chock full of entertainment value, is the money-maker of the season, even though the cheer-'em-up photoplay hasn't much of a plot. It is the secret the writer should hug up, the one embodied in that meanful word, "entertainment." Smother your subjects with sunshine and make them laugh. Gloom never cured an ailment.

IN FILM ALSO

"The difficulty of literature is not to write, but to write what you mean; not to affect your reader, but to affect him precisely as you wish," says Robert Louis Stevenson in "Truth of Intercourse." He continues: "This is commonly understood in the case of books or set orations; even in making your will, or writing an explicit letter, some difficulty is admitted by the world. But one thing you can never make Philistine natures understand; one thing, which yet lies on the surface, remains as unseizable to their wits as a high flight of metaphysics—namely, that the business of life is mainly carried on by means of this difficult art of literature, and according to a man's proficiency in that art shall be the freedom and the fulness of his intercourse with other men. Anybody, it is supposed, can say what he means; and, in spite of their notorious experience to the contrary, people so continue to suppose."

J. H. Richardson, formerly with Mack Sennett, is at present engaged in supporting Chester Conklin at the Fox studio.

Pickups By the Staff

DOUG AND MARY TO ATTEND PREMIERE

Douglas Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers" has been completed, and comprises ten reels. When its first showing takes place at the Lyric Theater, New York, both Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks will occupy a loge.

WANTS STORIES

Irving Cummings Productions, Inc., is in the market for two-reel Northwest Mounted Police stories. Applicants are referred to Dick L'Estrange, general manager.

STARS IN CHARITY VAUDEVILLE

A vaudeville show under the direction of Jimmy Mitchell will be staged presently in Sunland by the Sunland Chamber of Commerce and the Council of Community Service of California to raise funds for needed equipment for Monte Vista Lodge, a vacation home for needy children.

Vaudeville and film stars will appear personally on the program.

TRIP TO ORIENT

Norma Talmadge and her husband, Joseph Schenck, will start soon for Hawaii and Japan for a few weeks' vacation, and it is probable that the star will proceed to India and Egypt, where she will make a picture for Associated First National release.

MOTION PICTURE EXPOSITION

The Ethical Motion Picture Society of America announces the First Annual Motion Picture Industry Exhibit, to be held in Los Angeles, in January, 1922, for the welfare of the motion picture industry.

This exhibition will present the motion picture industry from its inception to date, and its chief purpose is to inspire better film standards and thereby lay deeper foundations for this industry.

SILVER SHEET CLAIMS MRS. WALLACE REID

Mrs. Wallace Reid (Dorothy Davenport), has signed a contract with Lester Cuneo whereby she will appear opposite Cuneo in his forthcoming production for Warner Bros., "Behind the Mask." She will appear on the screen as Mrs. Wallace Reid.

Alex Troffey, who recently finished the cutting and editing of the T. Hayes Hunter special production, "The Light in the Clearing," left recently for New York, where he will cut and edit two productions of foreign make.

GOLFING

George Ovey, Pacific Film company star in White Cap Comedies, is entered in the picture players' national golf championships, scheduled to finish September 25th.

Production of Charles A. Logue's play, "The Infidel," will begin presently at the Ambassador studio.

AT TAHOE

Louis J. Gasnier, with his company, has gone to Lake Tahoe to film exteriors for his forthcoming production for Robertson-Cole, entitled "Ma'amselle Jo."

LITTLE MIRIAM BELLAH

Who Will be Seen in John M. Stahl's "The Song of Life"

COSMOSART BUILDING

The Spanish unit of the Cosmosart studio is nearing completion and work is progressing on the Italian unit. Foundations for the third (English) are being laid and rapid work is being done on the lake, which will be ready for shooting presently.

Mr. Bowen, president and manager of Cosmosart, welcomes visitors.

HICHENS WRITES FOR SCREEN

Robert Hichens, English author, is preparing an original story for screen adaptation by Famous Players-Lasky British Prod., Ltd.

AT CATALINA

Cyrus J. Williams' two youthful stars, Bill and Bob Bradbury, will prolong their stay on Catalina Island for another one of the series of adventure pictures which Val Paul is making for Pathe.

Col. H. H. Stewart is leaving for a two months' Eastern trip, during which time he will visit New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore.

"The Hell Diggers," from the story by Byron Morgan and starring Wallace Reid, will be the attraction at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of Monday, August 15th.

Harry Lustig, Metro's Western district manager, has departed for a tour of the western exchanges. Mr. Lustig recently returned from the Metro convention held in New York.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

FRED MALATESTA

Signor Fredrico Marie Malatesta, or rather Fred Malatesta, is an Italian by birth, an American by adoption. He was born in Naples about thirty years ago and has been an actor on the stage and screen ever since he was seventeen, that being his age when he left military school for his first part, a butler.

He played small parts for two years with splendid success for he was a good looking chap and very versatile. Motion pictures were then just starting in Paris, where he played with both the Gaumont and Pathe companies. He appeared in the two great feature pictures of that time, "Quo Vadis" and "Cabiria."

Becoming restless then chance took him to South America, where he appeared with a dramatic stock company for four years. Here he received much training, for he was kept playing in French, Italian and Spanish.

Returning to Italy Malatesta became a motion picture exhibitor, but luck was not with him, so he again went to Paris, where he directed Max Linder, the comedian, in many comedies.

Mr. Malatesta came to America for the Essanay Company with which he worked in Chicago for three and a half years. Since his arrival in Hollywood he has appeared in D. W. Griffith's "The Greatest Thing in Life," "The Mask," "The Best of Luck," "Big Happiness" and the "Sin of Rosanne." In these stories he has invariably been cast as a society villain, with little opportunity to show his versatility as a character actor.

Now, however, he rejoices to step out of a dress suit and portray the role of "Dick," the Italian bootblack in Mary Pickford's picturization of "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

ALLAN DURNELL

A clever juvenile, who is going up the cinema ladder via the Paramount route, is Allan Durnell, who was seen recently as Arthur Simmons in Roscoe Arbuckle's "Crazy to Marry," which was directed by James Cruze. Durnell, who goes in for simp lover roles, will next appear in "Should a Man Marry," playing Tommy Jones.

ON CHARITY PROGRAM

Geoffrey Bering has recently finished with Betty Compson in "The Woman in the Case" under Director Penrhyn Stanlaws.

Mr. Bering will appear presently in a one-act sketch with June Dawn at Monte Vista Park, Sunland, for the benefit of the children's hospital.

TITLED

"For Land's Sake" is the title of the latest Hamilton-White Mermaid comedy, the third of the new series for Educational that has just been completed with an all star cast, including Lige Conley, Marvel Rae, Karl Montgomery, Frank Coleman and others.

GERMAN RELEASE

Donald Campbell, who controls in the foreign markets the Selig serial, "Vanishing Trails," featuring Franklyn Farnum and Mary Anderson, has sold the film for Germany.

Production Notes

FIRST NATIONAL RELEASES

The following plays have been completed by the Eastern independent producing organizations releasing their product through First National:

Norma Talmadge's "Regeneration Isle," "The Wonderful Thing" and "The Sign on the Door;" Constance Talmadge's "Woman's Place" and "Wedding Bells;" Hope Hampton's "Star Dust," produced by Hobart Henley; Jewel Carmen in "Nobody" and Whitman Bennett's "Salvation Nell."

First National also has acquired the distribution rights to the Oliver Morosco production, "The Half-Breed;" the Hepworth production, "Alf's Button;" an Australian play, "The Sentimental Bloke;" Harry Raver's "Cabiria," and is negotiating regarding four south seas productions by W. F. Alder.

PREPARING CONTINUITY

George Chesebro, being featured by the Morante Producing Company in a series of northwest mounted police stories, is vacationing at Coronado Beach while the continuity for his second picture is being written. The company will leave next week for Big Bear Lake, where it will location for about a month.

ROCK SCHEDULED FOR FIFTY-TWO

Joe Rock, former Vitagraph comedian, has started work on a series of fifty-two comedies, the first of which has been completed at Catalina Island. Lillian Biron, former Christie player. is playing opposite the star. Miles Overholt is writing the stories and "Kitty" Howe is directing.

CUMMINGS PRODUCTIONS

Irving Cummings' production, "On the Trail," had a recent showing at the Rialto in New York, followed last week by his second picture, "Tricked."

Work will start presently on production nine, which was written by Ruth St. Claire, and is as yet untitled.

ROBERTSON-COLE NOTES

Pauline Frederick started production this week on "The Lure of the Jade" (working title), under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Sessue Hayakawa is busy completing final arrangements for his forthcoming production, "The Street of the Flying Dragon," written by Dorothy Goodfellow, and adapted to the screen by Eve Unsell and Garrett Fort. Norman Dawn will direct.

GOLDWYN STARTS "GRAND LARCENY"

"Grand Larceny," from the pen of Albert Payson Terhune, will be put into production at the Goldwyn Studios this week under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

R. A. Chapman has finished his first production, "Call of the Pines," and preparations are under way for the second, which will be directed by Fred G. Hartman.

The filming of "Omar, the Tentmaker" has been deferred by Richard Walton Tully, the author.

REED STORY FOR SCREEN

"The Sign of the Jack O' Lantern" will be the next Myrtle Reed story to reach the screen. Lloyd Ingraham will direct this production.

LURA ANSON

WITH McGOWAN

Lillian Rich is at present playing the leading feminine role in the current feature production which the Herald Company is producing at Universal City under the direction of J. P. McGowan, and which is in its third week of production.

DORETY COMPLETES SERIES

The first three of Charles Dorety's sixteen comedies to be made for Universal are "The Cleanup," "Third Class Male," and his recently filmed comedy, "Hold Your Breath!"

"THE KID" IN SOUTH AMERICA

Wm. M. Vogel, New York exporter who controls the Charles Chaplin six-reel production, "The Kid," in the foreign markets, announces the sale of this latest Chaplin release for Argentina, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Uruguay and Paraguay to the firm of Max Glucksmann, with headquarters in Buenos Aires. The deal with Mr. Vogel was negotiated in New York by Jacob Glucksmann.

FRANZ PRODUCTIONS

J. Joseph Franz has contracted to make a series of pictures for the Western Photoplay Corporation, the first of which will feature Beatrice Burnham.

FINISHED

William P. S. Earle, Selznick director, has completed "The Way of a Maid," starring Elaine Hammerstein. In the supporting cast are Niles Welch, George Fawcett, Diana Allen and others.

FOX CONTRACTS

Fox recently closed long term contracts with Al St. John and Chester Conklin, who are to appear in comedies. He also signed a long term starring contract with Barbara Bedford.

part of Sir Edward Pelham, Nadine's intolerant father. Francis is equal to any role in which he finds himself.

A really unusual piece of unsympathetic comedy is the work of Arthur Stewart Hull, who enacts Hopper, a wealthy roue.

F. R. Butler, Raymond Brathwait, Helen Dunbar, Clarence Geldart, Julia Faye and Ann Grigg number among the remaining players in this picture, which was directed by Sam Wood from Monte Katterjohn's scenario.

"THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN"

Grauman's

We never read Booth Tarkington's story, "The Conquest of Canaan," but we do know its author sufficiently to imagine his feelings upon being shown Paramount's screen version of this, his very popular brain child. For in it, he will see the slowest possible film story, lacking the human interest that is always the chief characteristic of his work, with, we are forced to say, not one particularly redeeming feature from the photoplay standpoint. What must have been long and intensely interesting chapters in the novel are often covered in Frank Tuttle's scenario by a flash and a subtitle, or possibly only the latter, while in other instances the play fairly shrieks its original classification with detail and monotonous action. Outside of the unusually unsatisfactory scenario, however, this production is technically about average. Its photography is good, as are several of the subtitles, and an invaluable comedy touch is provided in the art titles upon which various makes and models of dogs are used to symbolize the characters and situations in hand.

It is not always perfectly clear just what William Neil intended with his direction but it is evident that he was decidedly handicapped by the script.

We almost forgot to mention that "The Conquest of Canaan" is a Thomas Meighan starring vehicle. That he makes no very definite impression with Joe Louden, his stalwart young hero, whose continual fight is with respectability, is also largely due to deficiencies in the material as presented. Some way or other Joe's introduction and early action do not include the opportunities for characterization which might have gotten him twice the sympathy that his later, somewhat exaggerated abuse by Canaan's entire populace accomplishes. In any event, this is just another role of fiction that isn't made especially admirable anywhere, or even amusing save in one intoxicated sequence which will cause many to sweetly reminisce. Meighan is getting too far along in years to afford any misses or even mediocrity in his work.

Ariel Tabor, the girl who alone believes in Joe, is played by Doris Kenyon. This actress has always been handicapped by a displeasing personality and an absolute lack of taste in dress. Her wild and woolly "Parisian" costumes as the resplendent Ariel just in from Europe detract considerably from her scenes, while in her early sequences, Miss Kenyon's country girl awkwardness gives the impression of being forced and therefore a little silly. This last may get over the general fan public, however.

Judge Pike, Joe's chief persecutor, is played with probably more violence than realism by Louis Hendricks, but the old heavy "hokum" is yet swallowed with relish by many, which lets him out.

A few real comedy scenes, which will be generally appreciated, are done by Cyril Ring, who is cast as Joe's half-brother, the very respectable second heavy.

Alice Fleming and Paul Everton complicate things with their more minor roles of Claudine and Happy Farley, while Charles Abbe, Malcolm Bradley, Henry Hallam, Charley Hartley and Jed Prouty are excellent village types.

Diana Allen, Ann Egleston, Mary Harlam, J. D. Walsh and Riley Hatch complete the cast.

Truly there is much in being able to choose a story which will adapt easily to the screen; there is equally as much in being able to scenarize that story after it is chosen. We believe that it is the latter ability that was lacking here.

"THE STING OF THE LASH"

California

Robertson-Cole's current Pauline Frederick release is Harvey Gates' "The Sting of the Lash," which has been adapted for the celluloid by H. Tipton Steck. This filmplay is a very strenuous drama which depends more upon one or two effective situations and some artistic characterizations to hold the attention than upon anything different in the plot. The story is merely the depiction of three chapters in a strong woman's life. They are all subtly handled by Henry King, who directs the production. However, in an apparent effort to get down to footage things are cut rather short at the end, leaving the plot seeming someway underdeveloped.

Miss Frederick's interpretation of Dorothy Keith, a sweetheart whose love makes of her a drudge before she finds her real womanhood, is exactly the sort of beautiful work that we have come to expect from this actress. The fine little "naturalnesses" which she inserts into the drama of her women fairly make them breathe.

Possibly Clyde Fillmore has a broader scope upon which to display his versatility as Donald Keith, a prospector whose failure and wrongs degenerate him, than he has had heretofore. We seen him here as the manly lover and young husband, the drink-sodden beast who terrorizes his family, and lastly the man who has experienced and meditated upon that which he has lived through. Fillmore is a capital opposite for the star.

Lionel Belmore is good as Ben Ames, the conniving sheriff, and Lawson Butt does satisfactorily Steven Rhodes, a "harmless sympathizer" part.

Betty Hall and Evelyn McCoy make a very interesting little girl of Crissy, whom they play at the ages of five and ten, respectively.

Edwin Stevens and Jack Richardson complete the cast.

"The Sting of the Lash" has to its credit considerable in entertainment value.

OLD ATMOSPHERE

They call me "Old Atmosphere" and that's all I am,
A played-out, worn-out, tired old ham.
With little to eat, drink, smoke or to wear,
I came west to act, but was cast in the air.

I thought when I got here I'd choose a nice part
At a few hundred a week, just at the start.
Call up the big ones, and tell 'em I'm here,
Then name the salary I want for the year.

So I put on my "dickey" and pinned on my cuff,
Got out my old snipe to keep up the bluff,
And sallied forth, "Ye Gods!" to see.
Ten thousand actors that looked just like me.

There were actors large, and actors small,
And some that could not act at all.
Now and then a fine old face,
That lent the mob a little grace.

There were actors thin and actors fat,
Some were round and others flat.
Some were silent, and some were talking,
But I did not see the old ghost walking.

My "pipe dream" was over, and I laughed out loud,
As I stood and gazed on that vast actor crowd.
So day after day, and year after year,
I stand or sit in "just atmosphere."

Just a word of advice from one old and fat,
Who was once an "up stage" but now is broke flat.
Who has chased pretty chickens, drank wine and such—
Save some of your coin—or you'll land "in Dutch."

For when you are old, you will surely find,
That the best of your acting is just in your mind.
And the day will come, be it far or near,
When you'll be playing in "just Atmosphere."

And when that day shall end, don't let it appal,
But say to the greatest Director of all:
"O Lord, please take me just as I am,
A worn out, played out, tired old Ham."
—Dr. Charles Lang.

The Story Idea

that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

LETTERS OF A SELF MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer

Glen Cedar Ranch, Burbank, Calif.

My dear Nephew,

Was not at all surprised at the contents of your last letter. In fact I have been expecting something like it ever since you went to work on that lot. That laboratory has a soot and whitewash reputation, and I knew sooner or later you would put up a holler. Don't try to argue with them, because it won't do any good. Try to get your work sent off the lot. Make a couple of shots of the same thing and send one of them outside. That will tell the tale, and if your director has any backbone where a backbone ought to be, why all will be lovely.

Until conditions are different, I am in favor of the commercial laboratory. Competition is a great thing because the concern doing the best work, gets it. I am reminded of an experience we had once with the superintendent of a strictly commercial laboratory. The people I happened to be with at the time had arranged to take the work there, for they had been made a rate of a fourth of a cent off providing they had the release made there. As I wanted to know how they wanted the stock sent in, and how they handled it after it did get in, I had a little talk with the aforesaid official. "Young feller," he says to me, "It don't matter to us how you expose your film, or how you light your sets. We don't want any tests either. The soup we use here will take care of anything, and if you don't want to separate your interiors from your exteriors that will be O. K. with us. After your stuff is racked and in the soup, it can stay there twenty minutes or longer. If the boy goes out to smoke a cigarette, and forgets to set the clock, it will be all right anyhow." There is one thing lacking in the motion picture business, and that is an emblem. The one we ought to have has been appropriated by the manufacturers of a famous smoking tobacco, and I suppose this is the reason we haven't any. Well, anyhow, when I suggested to the superintendent of this soup kitchen, as you call it, that he tie the animal outside, he became real peeved. I don't doubt but that the developer he mentioned would do all he claimed for it. Where he and I differed was on the result.

The test system is the only system. Otherwise if the negative developer comes to a light effect, he is just as liable to figure that the photographer was playing in hard luck, and do his best to bring it up to density, thereby ruining the effect worked for. Most negative developers have an aversion to taking a rack out of the tank. Once in, they seem to thing it ought to stay there. When they finally do take it out to make room for another, the detail you have been lighting to get has come and gone.

We believe the time is coming, and it may soon, when a photographer will be allowed to personally superintend the developing of the negative and making of the sample print. Then animated photography will have that stamp of personality which is peculiar to the work of the still life photographer. Then there will be more photographers and fewer crank turners.

In reply to your question about spuds will say, "That's something we ain't got nothin' else of but." Everybody sends best regards.

Write soon and often.

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY.

Walter Wilkinson, four years old, and Les Bates, late of the spoken stage, are in the cast of the first Joe Rock comedy, recently finished at Catalina Island.

Publicity Due

During the much-publicized undersea search recently conducted by the county to recover from the unconscious Pacific a gun which was supposed to have figured conspicuously in Los Angeles' latest sensational murder, a local newspaper, either through negligence or intent, laid itself open to much severe criticism by the picture colony. The circumstance was this: Having learned that the authorities were in need of deep sea divers and apparatus to aid in their project, the Irvin Willat Studio magnanimously offered them, free of charge, the paraphernalia which had been acquired for use in a late Willat production and which was at the time forming a lobby display for the theatre running that filmplay. At great expense the equipment was transported to the beach and studio divers furnished to assist those in charge.

At a somewhat later stage of the game, attaches of the naval base at San Pedro joined forces with the searchers. Then it was that the daily previously mentioned, seeking perhaps a little self-aggrandizement, stressed in remarkably lengthy stories the strenuous though ineffective effort of the navy and itself to reclaim the fatal weapon. One was left with the impression that this enterprising sheet was personally responsible for the whole show. Meanwhile the Willat organization, having done a great portion of the first and hardest work, was scarcely mentioned in connection with the affair.

Good publicity, although we happen to know that its prospect had nothing to do with the affair from the studio's standpoint, would have been invaluable, not only to the company in question but to the entire industry. On the other hand, it meant nothing to the navy, which isn't recruiting at this particular time and therefore in no need of boosted stock.

And yet how many times have we picked up this same journal to be met with headlines to the effect that some beautiful Movie Queen has turned shoplifter, etc., etc., etc. The inevitable "queen" may or may not have illuminated a mob scene once; the point is that the title makes a good story.

The local press should make more of our virtues and less of our alleged sins if they would retain our support. What about it?—F. R.

English Productions

Ordinarily statistics for statistics' sake absolutely fail to appeal to our imagination, but occasionally they suggest things and at other times they are downright enlightening. The compilation below, for which we are indebted to London's "The Motion Picture Studio," is of such value. It tells us what England is doing in the production line; it also locates some of our missing friends. We feel that the various interests attached to each consideration justify the space we expend upon it.

J. Stuart Blackton is filming "The Glorious Adventure," a seven reel drama starring Lady Diana Manners at Bush House, Aldwych. He is being assisted by Clifford Grey with Nicholas Mursuraca at the camera. The scenario is by Felix Ormand.

A British and Colonial drama, "The Puppet Man," is being directed by Frank Crane. Molly Adair and John Reid are being starred, Cosmo Gordon Lennox is the scenarist and I. Roseman is the photographer.

Broadwest is producing a drama, "The Imperfect Lover," directed by Walter West and starring Stewart Rome. J. Franguelli is the cameraman. The same company has just finished "Christie Johnstone," a Norman MacDonald production starring Stewart Rome and Gertrude McCoy. W. G. Clifford scenarized this costume romance; G. Pauli photographed it. "Vi of Smith's Alley" is being cut and assembled by director Walter West. This drama, which stars Violet Hopson and Cameron Carr, was scenarized by J. B. Bertram Brown and Charles Barnett. It was shot by Franguelli. Casting has commenced on "Levity Hicks."

"The Bigamist," a George Clark production, directed by Guy Newell, starring himself and Ivy Duke, is being assembled. Newell scenarized the story which was photographed by Bert Ford.

I. B. Davidson is cutting its production of "The Fifth Form at St. Dominic's," directed and scenarized by A. E. Colby, with D. P. Cooper at the camera.

Famous Players-Lasky has completed "Dangerous Lies," a Paul Powell production, starring Mary Glynne and David Powell. Mary O'Connor adapted this society drama; R. J. Cullen assisted in the direction and C. McDonell photographed it. Donald Crisp, assisted by Claude H. Mitchell, is directing himself in "Bonnie Brier Bush," a Margaret Turnbull scenario.

"The Haigh Serial" being produced by Frederick White under the direction of Edward R. Gordon, is working on schedule. It stars Ernest Haigh.

"Roses in the Dust," a Gaumont production, starring Iris Rowe and Gladys Mason, and directed by Captain Calvert, is now being photographed by Basil W. G. Emmott. H. Morgan wrote the scenario.

An untitled comedy drama is being made by Harma, under the direction of Bernard Dudley. Marjorie Villis and James Knight are being starred in this comedy drama, with J. McKenzie photographing.

Director G. Greville has completed a costume drama entitled "All Sorts and Conditions of Men" for Ideal. Rex Davis and Renee Kelly are starred in this Colden Lore scenario. "Sonia," featuring Evelyn Brent and Olive Brook, is nearing completion under the direction of Deni-

BLACKTON PRODUCING ON OTHER SIDE

The British production, "The Glorious Adventure," a drama of the seventeenth century, is being produced and personally directed by J. Stuart Blackton in England. Blackton is using the color camera in the making of this picture.

He has chosen Lady Diana Manners to interpret the leading role, and the all-artist cast, which Mr. Blackton has assembled, includes Gerald Lawrence, Alice Drawford, Cecil Humphreys, Lennox Pawle, William Luff, Flora Le Breton, Haidee Wright, Lois Sturt, Elizabeth Beerbohn, Victor McLaglan, Marjorie Day, Tom Heselwood, Fred Wright, Rudolf de Cordova, Gertrude Sterroll, Rosalie Heath, Lawford Davidson, Violet Virginia Blackton and Charles Stuart Blackton.

RELEASING PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

National Exchanges, Inc., announces that beginning with next month, one five-reel feature picture will be released through its exchanges monthly. "Shadows of the West," presented by the Motion Picture Producing Co. of America, Inc., will be the September release.

"The Lotus Blossom," produced by the Leong But Jung Production Co. and starring Lady Tsen Mei, Chinese film star, will be published in October. Other releases will be announced later.

Simultaneously with the feature program, National Exchanges, Inc., will begin the release of one two-reel King Cole comedy monthly. These are also presented by the Motion Picture Producing Co. of America, Inc., and feature Bobby Burns.

FIRST FLATHEAD PICTURE FINISHED

The first of a series of feature length North woods pictures, being made by the Flathead Producers Corporation, at Columbia Falls, Mont., has been completed and titled "Rough Bark le Noir." The same cast, including Art Staton and Hazel Hart, has started work on the second of the series, which will be made in the Glacier Park district. C. O. D. Blanchfield will distribute these productions on the State Right market.

STARTING

Yellowstone National Park is the locale of the newest Ann Little serial, being directed by Duke Worne.

Supporting Miss Little are Joseph Girard, Leonard Clapham, Hal Wilson, Edith Stayart and Howard Crampton. William Nobles is in charge of the photography, and the story, which is being tentatively called "Nannette of the North," is by Karl R. Coolidge.

"DISRAELI" FINISHED

Eleven weeks of studio work and "Disraeli" is finished, starring Geo. Arliss. Director Henry Kolker is cutting and assembling the picture, which will be released presently.

READY FOR RELEASE

"The Playhouse," written by Buster Keaton and Eddie Cline, is Keaton's latest comedy. Virginia Fox plays opposite the comedian and Joe Robert enacts the heavy.

"The Playhouse" is on its way to New York.

AT UNIVERSAL

Production will start sometime in September on "Man to Man," by Jackson Gregory, starring Harry Carey.

Simultaneously with the start of "Man to Man," Priscilla Dean will begin work on "Wild Honey," a drama of the African veldt, from the novel by Cynthia Stockley.

Gladys Walton will commence the fall season with "The Guttersnipe," by Percival Wilde, for which Wallace Clifton is writing the continuity. It is expected that Dallas Fitzgerald will direct this picture. "Sandman" will be used by the star for a forthcoming vehicle.

Upon the completion of "The Rage of Paris," Miss Dupont will film "You Can't Live on Love," a comedy-drama by John B. Clymer, which has been scenarized by Geo. Hively.

Frank Mayo has a sea story for his first post-vacation starring vehicle, called "Dr. Jim," written and directed by Stuart Paton, following which he will star in "The Altar Stairs," a romance of the South Seas, written by G. B. Lancaster.

Herbert Rawlinson will start work presently on "The Black Bag," by Louis Joseph Vance. Mr. Rawlinson's following vehicle will be "The Substitute Millionaire," purchased recently from the estate of the late George Loane Tucker.

Marie Prevost's next story will be "Princess Virtue," which Doris Schroeder is adapting to the screen.

Hoot Gibson's next starring vehicle will be "Headin' West," an original story by Harvey Gates, which it is expected that Jack Ford will direct.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

"White Eagle," the Ruth Roland serial, is nearing completion under Director W. S. Van Duke.

Eddie "Bo" Boland began production this week on a new comedy, under the direction of Bob Kerr, in which Ethel Broadhurst plays opposite the star.

Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, which is in its third week of production, will have for its releasing title "A Sailor-Made Man." Mildred Davis is playing opposite the star, as usual. Lloyd's recently finished two-reeler, "Don't Weaken," is having the art titles added to make it ready for shipment to New York.

Harry "Snub" Pollard recently finished a "beach" picture, as yet untitled, with Marie Mosquini playing opposite and Noah Young and "Tiny" Ward as chief supports.

Harry "Snub" Pollard's three recent releases for Pathe are: "No Stop Over," "At the Ringside," and "What a Whopper."

NOVO NOTES

Adele Buffington, author of "Apples of Sodom," in which Gladys Brockwell is being featured, has been advanced to the position of secretary of the Novo Film Syndicate, which is starring Miss Brockwell in a series of society dramas. This Syndicate has purchased through the Photoplaywrights League two future stories for Miss Brockwell.

In addition to her duties as Scenario Editor for the Novo Film Company, Adele Buffington has been elected Secretary to the Board of Directors, and left recently for a conference with Mr. Glasgow, head of the corporation, in St. Louis.

George Cooper will enact the part of "Mugsy" in "Turn to the Right," at Metro.

Current Reviews

"THE LOST ROMANCE"

California

A simple little story naturally told, depicting the struggles of three souls for the attainment of lasting romance is William de Mille's production for Paramount of Edward Knoblock's story, "The Lost Romance." Following a now-very-popular trend, this screenplay depends more upon its humanness than upon the inclusion of any particularly startling situations to carry it over. Excellent use has been made of the original's invaluable familiar touches by both the direction and the Olga Printzlau scenario, each of which moves carefully, avoiding quite gracefully the to-be-dreaded pitfalls—sticky sentiment and inconsistency. The picture's sets, photography and lighting are pleasing throughout, while the cast is of the high standard that is almost invariably found in a Lasky drama.

Heading it, at least from a sympathetic standpoint, is Fontaine La Rue, playing Elizabeth Erskine, a middle-aged maiden lady whose own loneliness has made her very tender toward the youth, especially the troubled youth, about her. This character is interpreted with great delicacy, which renders it the utmost in gracious refinement and lends its philosophy, which so often makes for prosiness in a picture, a great poetic appeal. As the aunt or friend of the story's other principals, whose heartbreaks she shares helpfully, this woman appears to be yearning over their misunderstandings and weaknesses. Elizabeth Erskine is a sweet impression filmed, that any actress might claim with pride. She demonstrates Miss La Rue's great versatility.

Lois Wilson is exceedingly well cast in the young feminine role, Sylvia Hayes, a girl with whom two young men fall quickly in love under a June moon. Her marriage with one of them and their lost romance is the real starting point of the story. Miss Wilson is doing some really remarkable work in the every day woman line that should not be overlooked. Sylvia is a good representative of it.

It has been some time since we have happened upon Conrad Nagel in a straight, almost juvenile part on the order of Allen Erskine, Elizabeth's nephew and Sylvia's husband, to be seen in this picture. As might almost go without saying, however, he makes his portrayal of the young doctor entirely worthwhile from both a dramatic and human interest consideration.

Jack Holt is also placed advantageously in the role of Mark Sheridan, an adventurer whose misfortune it is to love another man's wife.

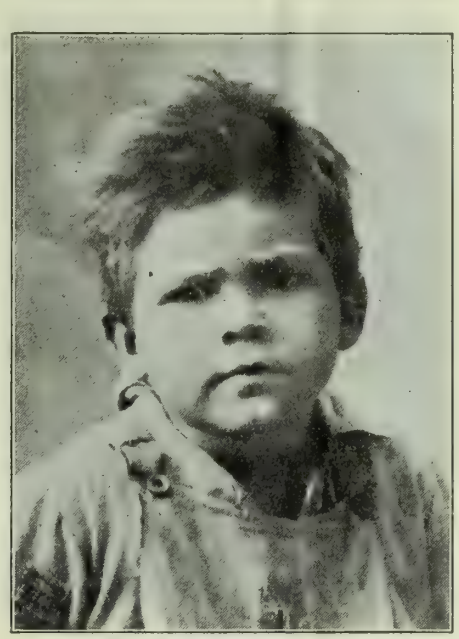
Little Mickey Moore as Allen Erskine, Jr., Lillian Leighton, Robert Brower, Clarence Geldart, Mayme Kelso, and Clarence Burton compose the remainder of the cast, which is in every instance satisfactory.

"The Lost Romance" has many smiles and several tears to offer the public, which always enjoys a well balanced combination of the extremes.

"SHORT SKIRTS"

Superba

A more different photoplay than "Short Skirts," Universal's current Gladys Walton starring release, is hard to imagine. By the foregoing remark, we do not mean that its plot, if indeed it possesses anything worthy of that much abused title, is at all new fundamentally, but this picturized version of an Alice Tildesley story is mostly remarkable on account of the fact that it deserts the comedy-drama routine to form merely an incident in the life of a modern girl-child. Of young love interest it has practically none; of that more sordid but enthralling element, excitement, this time parading under the fascinating caption, Romance, there is considerably more present. This picture, which on the whole is very entertaining, has been well handled by the direction, which was in the hands of Harry B. Harris. His management of the "kid stuff" is unusually good. It is, therefore, a pity that the cutter should have been permitted to mutilate some sections of the production with a pair of indiscriminately slashing scissors. (Do they employ scissors to smear most Universal and a lot more photoplays or is the tortuous instrument a lawnmower?) Photographically, "Short Skirts" is standard.



MALCOLM CRIPE

Again we forecast a big future for a clever little star, Gladys Walton. Much of her material has been against her, but in Natalie Smith, the affected little flapper (and a ridiculously childish flapper at that) in this picture, she has a very fair opportunity for characterization, which she accomplishes with much young charm. Poor Natalie's almost laughable independence, her lack of very good sense, her loyalty, her resourcefulness, and general good intentions all remind us peculiarly of little girls whom we have always known and in fact, of a little girl that we once were. Because this will be true for many more who see her, Miss Walton will derive much of popularity from Natalie, a little parcel of femininity which she portrays truly.

Jack Mower is convincing as Lance Christie, the inadmirable young man who inveigles Natalie into the theft of a very political paper. This actor should stick to heavies. They suit him better than juveniles.

Jean Hathaway and Edward Martindel are both pleasing as Natalie's mother and her fiance, a reform candidate for governor, while William Welsh, Harold Miller, Howard Ralston, Scotty McGregor and Ena Gregory are all well placed in the remaining roles.

"Short Skirts" will beguile an hour much more pleasantly than the ordinary program picture of its type.

"THE HELL DIGGERS"

Grauman's

A regulation story done in the same old way is "The Hell Diggers," Byron Morgan's Saturday Evening Post story, which serves as Wallace Reid's latest starring vehicle. It contains much action, a rather slim thread of romance, and possibly a superfluity of the inevitable Morgan machinery. However, some people like machinery and a whole heap of their wives adore Wallie sufficiently to overlook anything for the sake of observing his handsome face on five reels of film and an occasional glimpse of his expert love-making. "The Hell Diggers" is technically beyond reproach and more seriously, quite entertaining. Its author scenarized it.

Teddy Darman, a young engineer who invents a reclamation dredge because his best girl orders it, is another typical Reid hero. Fortunately, it is Wallie's ability to variate his lighter business now and again which adds interest to his work. We will be glad to see him pull out of his rut in "The Affairs of Anatol" and "Peter Ibbetson." Monotony is killing, anywhere.

Very little is required of Lois Wilson in the leading feminine part, Dora Wade. She is merely Teddy's pretty stimulus to greater things. Miss Wilson fits into the role easily, which in consideration of her heavier work speaks well for her adaptability.

Frank Leigh makes an exceptionally villainous heavy. He enacts Masters, the crooked manager of a big dredging company.

More laughs are produced by Lucien Littlefield, who does Silas Hoskins, Masters' comedy bookkeeper, than any other member of the cast.

Alexander Brown in a set of ridiculous false whiskers, Clarence Geldart and Bud Post fill more minor parts.

Frank Urson directed this production for Paramount.

"HER STURDY OAK"

Clune's

An Elmer Harris photoplay which we took to have been meant for a farce but which approaches the tragic from the viewpoint of an entertaining motion picture, is "Her Sturdy Oak," Realart's present offering, starring Wanda Hawley. It is a sickly, uninteresting, domestic affair which fishes frantically for laughs and obtains very few. At that, some of its business might have been rendered amusing had it been efficiently handled by the leading members of the cast. There is, however, only one clever performance in the play. Technically the production is about its company's average.

Probably there is a place for Miss Hawley in the picture business, but it is certainly not the position of a star, particularly a comedy star, anywhere. All of the dainty beauty which this actress represented in her old Lasky stock days has become over-run with a slovenliness as to personal appearance and manner that results in a real displeasure to most audiences. Moreover she gives the appearance of knowing her technique but slighting it through indolence, an error which the profession will not tolerate. She is utterly ineffective as Violet White, the heroine of this picture. This is especially unfortunate because a sprightly performance here might in some part have justified the whole.

Walter Hiers also disappoints in his portrayal of Samuel Butler, Violet's heavily poetic husband. This ordinarily beguiling comedian renders his character's laughs very evident by forcing them in places, while again they aren't made recognizable.

"SHORT SKIRTS"

Superba

A more different photoplay than "Short Skirts," Universal's current Gladys Walton starring release, is hard to imagine. By the foregoing remark, we do not mean that its plot, if indeed it possesses anything worthy of that much abused title, is at all new fundamentally, but this picturized version of an Alice Tildesley story is mostly remarkable on account of the fact that it deserts the comedy-drama routine to form merely an incident in the life of a modern girl-child. Of young love interest it has practically none; of that more sordid but enthralling element, excitement, this time parading under the fascinating caption, Romance, there is considerably more present. This picture, which on the whole is very entertaining, has been well handled by the direction, which was in the hands of Harry B. Harris. His management of the "kid stuff" is unusually good. It is, therefore, a pity that the cutter should have been permitted to mutilate some sections of the production with a pair of indiscriminately slashing scissors. (Do they employ scissors to smear most Universal and a lot more photoplays or is the tortuous instrument a lawnmower?) Photographically, "Short Skirts" is standard.

Again we forecast a big future for a clever little star, Gladys Walton. Much of her material has been against her, but in Natalie Smith, the affected little flapper (and a ridiculously childish flapper at that) in this picture, she has a very fair opportunity for characterization, which she accomplishes with much young charm. Poor Natalie's almost laughable independence, her lack of very good sense, her loyalty, her resourcefulness, and general good intentions all remind us peculiarly of little girls whom we have always known and in fact, of a little girl that we once were. Because this will be true for many more who see her, Miss Walton will derive much of popularity from Natalie, a little parcel of femininity which she portrays truly.

Jack Mower is convincing as Lance Christie, the inadmirable young man who inveigles Natalie into the theft of a very political paper. This actor should stick to heavies. They suit him better than juveniles.

Jean Hathaway and Edward Martindel are both pleasing as Natalie's mother and her fiance, a reform candidate for governor, while William Welsh, Harold Miller, Howard Ralston, Scotty McGregor and Ena Gregory are all well placed in the remaining roles.

"Short Skirts" will beguile an hour much more pleasantly than the ordinary program picture of its type.

"THE HELL DIGGERS"

Grauman's

A regulation story done in the same old way is "The Hell Diggers," Byron Morgan's Saturday Evening Post story, which serves as Wallace Reid's latest starring vehicle. It contains much action, a rather slim thread of romance, and possibly a superfluity of the inevitable Morgan machinery. However, some people like machinery and a whole heap of their wives adore Wallie sufficiently to overlook anything for the sake of observing his handsome face on five reels of film and an occasional glimpse of his expert love-making. "The Hell Diggers" is technically beyond reproach and more seriously, quite entertaining. Its author scenarized it.

Teddy Darman, a young engineer who invents a reclamation dredge because his best girl orders it, is another typical Reid hero. Fortunately, it is Wallie's ability to variate his lighter business now and again which adds interest to his work. We will be glad to see him pull out of his rut in "The Affairs of Anatol" and "Peter Ibbetson." Monotony is killing, anywhere.

Very little is required of Lois Wilson in the leading feminine part, Dora Wade. She is merely Teddy's pretty stimulus to greater things. Miss Wilson fits into the role easily, which in consideration of her heavier work speaks well for her adaptability.

Frank Leigh makes an exceptionally villainous heavy. He enacts Masters, the crooked manager of a big dredging company.

More laughs are produced by Lucien Littlefield, who does Silas Hoskins, Masters' comedy bookkeeper, than any other member of the cast.

Alexander Brown in a set of ridiculous false whiskers, Clarence Geldart and Bud Post fill more minor parts.

Frank Urson directed this production for Paramount.

"HER STURDY OAK"

Clune's

An Elmer Harris photoplay which we took to have been meant for a farce but which approaches the tragic from the viewpoint of an entertaining motion picture, is "Her Sturdy Oak," Realart's present offering, starring Wanda Hawley. It is a sickly, uninteresting, domestic affair which fishes frantically for laughs and obtains very few. At that, some of its business might have been rendered amusing had it been efficiently handled by the leading members of the cast. There is, however, only one clever performance in the play. Technically the production is about its company's average.

Probably there is a place for Miss Hawley in the picture business, but it is certainly not the position of a star, particularly a comedy star, anywhere. All of the dainty beauty which this actress represented in her old Lasky stock days has become over-run with a slovenliness as to personal appearance and manner that results in a real displeasure to most audiences. Moreover she gives the appearance of knowing her technique but slighting it through indolence, an error which the profession will not tolerate. She is utterly ineffective as Violet White, the heroine of this picture. This is especially unfortunate because a sprightly performance here might in some part have justified the whole.

Walter Hiers also disappoints in his portrayal of Samuel Butler, Violet's heavily poetic husband. This ordinarily beguiling comedian renders his character's laughs very evident by forcing them in places, while again they aren't made recognizable.

James Morrison, Billy Mong and Ethel Grey Terry will play in support of Marguerite de le Motte, who interprets the title role in "The Daughter of Brahma," under production at the Brunton studios.

The Screen Writers' Forum —Conducted by William E. Wing

GETTING CLOSE

What can I do to put myself over as a screen writer?

More than one tormented writer has asked the question, and has done so with much earnestness for he is the fellow who has been told that: "Although you have written a strong story, still—therefore we are sending it back."

Writers of imagination; writers with plot; good creators of dramatic situation, and yet —no way to "put them over."

We might pause here and close by stating that all screen writers, would-be fictionists and others who would spread ink over a fair page, must study and be trained for the work if they would succeed.

However, whether it be the province of this department or not to divulge half-secrets, we will present a formula which may prove a tonic to the fellow who cannot seem to get close enough to lure the festive check to the old domicile.

Continuity Writing An Education

Try continuity.

Do not lunge into the reconstruction of your best stories into numbered scenes that you may feverishly fire them at a helpless market, but try it when you feel your story is very strong. (Perhaps you have not used a critic and therefore cannot see its weaknesses or faults. It may be narrative—which is not screen form—but you cannot realize the difference.) Take this story, begin at your logical opening and write it in action scenes, leading any needy scenes with subtitles.

You will at first be surprised to discover that you are uncovering faults of which you were not aware in your "good" synopsis.

You will be surprised at the number of subtitles you will be forced to use, if you have been writing in narrative form. That will be a warning that you have not an action, or screen story.

More than one-half a photoplay should "tell itself" upon the screen without subtitle.

Every scene you write should advance the plot. You may not write any other scenes or use characters who are not absolutely necessary to these scenes. Get that in mind and proceed with the numbered scenes of your continuity.

Perhaps your story is one of those "up and down" affairs in synopsis. It grows intense, then calms down. Dramatic action leaps in, after which there are tame periods. That is another error.

Your continuity, through which your story should climb steadily, step by step, with the burden of responsibility upon the lead or leads, to say nothing of the sympathy, should increase in suspense or action continually until you have built up to your grand climax, when the story should be quickly finished. A fade from the climax to a single scene of happiness is permitted.

If anxious writer will read these few rules once more and try to hold them in mind while he is writing his continuity, he is going to dig out his synopsis' faults and weaknesses, many of them, so that they are visible to himself.

And, in making this discovery, he is going to warm up to the invisible mark he must cross in order to see his name on the screen.

It would be an untruth—also fatal to the counsellor—to state that such self-instruction as this would actually graduate the uninitiated as a successful photoplaywright.

At the very best the experimenter would be but "trying" at continuity. But, the very fact that he tried, and continued to try, numbering his scenes, keeping up his action, watching his characterization and logic, to say nothing of the other things which have to do with dramatic construction, he would be pounding home knowledge which would keep him more closely to the mark in writing his synopsis.

JACK STRUMWASSER

Author, scenarist, and editor for the West Coast Fox Studios, who is responsible for "Play Square," "The Drifter," "Live Wire," Etc.

Picture Analysis

Another method of "trying" continuity is to go to the picture theater, watch the production carefully and, upon returning home, write the story you have seen, in numbered sequence. You will find many reasons for things you have not understood. Comparison of such stories from the screen with your own efforts will enlighten you; will open your eyes much better as to true form in synopsis.

It is true that you will see upon the screen certain things you have been warned against. You will find weaknesses and mistakes. The logic of certain pictures will cause you to disagree. Some characterizations will appear as faulty or artificial. If so, your education is advancing. You are analyzing.

Inconsistent Characterization

One of the several general faults which may be discovered by rough practice at continuity writing, is the lack of proper characterization. Many earnest writers who have succeeded elsewhere, fail to convince the studio editor because of seemingly inconsistent action upon the part of important characters who aid in carrying his story.

Fiction writing, for example, can cover up such weaknesses by a multiplicity of words Upon the printed page we may "convince" the reader of many things not shown, by reciting the effect of matter upon the mind. The typical law-abiding person, who naturally would do no violence, sometimes figures in the daily press as a principal in one of those front-page shockers.

Why?

Because, unknown to his intimates even, certain tensive occurrences which militate against good judgment, may poison his mind and embitter his soul to such an extent that he will surprise friend and stranger by a violent act.

Such things—the poignant assassination of a man's very soul—may be told in fiction, for words may follow up the vivid workings of the victim's mind.

But, as thoughts cannot be registered upon the screen, save in very specific instances, this chemical change in the soul of a well-regulated person is lost for the writer of narrative story, so far as the demands of the photoplay are concerned.

Therefore, the studio editor will not accept the scenario, wherein the "well-regulated" person of the story, who has been proceeding in his role "true to form," suddenly leaps to what might be called the unnatural, and does things of which his nature never hinted previously in the tale, because he knows that the audience cannot be convinced that the melodramatic sequence could have come about through such a well ordered character.

Continuity, in its true form, reveals early action which begins to warn the spectator that the character is undergoing the change. "Example" is used. Then the growing tensity is augmented through more action until the outburst is received as a natural consequence.

And when subtle action is shown in illustration of that change, we have the difference between narrative—or thought—and screen story.

The Rambler

Continuity practice also will pull up short the writer who rambles; the enthusiast who believes he has a story because he sets down a number of dramatic incidents, each of which is in itself a good, strong situation. An adventure may be put on the screen in a chain of occurrences which will thrill throughout the presentation but, in the end, no story will have been shown.

The one-reel days presented many such stories, as well as the story which opened by a very convenient invention of trouble for the handsome leading man, planted merely for the sake of watching him extricate himself.

But the old days have gone by and audiences are growing so "wise" that they demand at least, a reason for every story that is told upon the screen. They may read the book, but they will not be satisfied with that book story told in narrative form upon the screen.

The continuity itself must transform all that into the satisfactory photodrama; therefore even a crude practice at numbered scenes will bring the hopeful apprentice much closer to true form in his synopsis than an imagination which has not received necessary schooling.

FOR CLOSER UNDERSTANDING

Among those present at the monthly dinner of the Brotherhood of the Immanuel Presbyterian Church, held recently, were Reginald Barker, Bert Lytell, Sir Gilbert Parker, Thomas N. Miranda, Bayard Veiller, William D. Taylor, June Mathis, Josephine Miranda, Eve Unsell, Benjamin B. Hampton, Bryant Washburn, George Beban, Will Rogers, Glen Harper, and a number of visiting State censors.

Pickups By the Staff

WILL PAY FOR PICTURE IDEA

The Grant-Mills Productions, a new company which is financed by Texas capital, although located here, has decided upon an advertising campaign to interest picture fans in their first production.

They are offering a thousand dollars for the best fifty-word idea on which their scenario department can base a big story. Wycliffe A. Hill, President of the Photoplaywrights League; Florence Lawrence, screen star and Miss Bobby Hunter, late of the Lasky scenario staff, constitute the committee which will select the winning idea.

CARL BERCH GOES DOWN WITH "ALASKAN"

Carl Berch, actor of "the old school" for some thirty-five years, was among the forty odd passengers who recently lost their lives on the ill-fated steamship" Alaskan." Mr. Berch was returning to his Los Angeles home after a stock season in the Northwest when the accident occurred. A member of the A. E. A. and B. P. O. E. 906, Mr. Berch will be greatly missed by his scores of friends.

STUDENTS' "LOCATION COURSE"

Sixty-five members of the Commerce Club, Los Angeles Polytechnic High School students of law and business, gained entry to the Hollywood studios recently and worked as extras in the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam to get "inside information" on motion pictures.

Classrooms are deserted for "location" each week by the Commerce Club, to study under the guidance of Charles Edwin Locke, industrial and governmental organizations at first hand.

NEILAN MANAGER HERE

J. R. Grainger, sales manager of Marshall Neilan Productions, with headquarters in New York, has arrived here to consult with Mr. Neilan on a new distributing policy for "Penrod," "Bits of Life" and other fall productions to be handled by Associated First National Pictures.

CHRISTIE DEPARTS FOR EUROPE

Charles H. Christie, general manager of the Christie Film Company, sailed lately on the Olympic from New York for London, England, his business there being the affairs of the Christie London and continental offices, known as the Christie Film Sales, Ltd., an English corporation managed by John H. Taylor and recently incorporated.

Mr. Christie is accompanied by E. W. Hammons, head of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., which handles the Christie pictures in this country, and Mrs. Hammons.

LEASE LONG ISLAND HOME

Norma and Constance Talmadge have leased an estate at Bayside, L. I., where they are spending their leisure time between pictures. John Emerson and Anita Loos are their nearest neighbors.

Constance Talmadge's next First National release, "Wedding Bells," had its initial New York showing at the Strand Theatre, the week of August 14th.

Viola Dana has completed her work in "The Fourteenth Lover," and is taking a short rest before starting her next Metro picture which Harry Beaumont will direct.

WARDE GOES EAST

Frederick Warde went East to his summer home after completing his role of Omar Khayyam in Ferdinand Earle's production of "The Rubaiyat."

NANCY CASWELL

Who is appearing in the Pilgrimage Play.

MOTOR TRIP

Jacques Bizeul is in New York following a motor trip across the continent. En route he shot five reels of scenics. His most recently photographed productions are "Straight from Paris" and "Charge It," Clara Kimball Young pictures.

CLIVE CONTRACT

Henry Clive has signed his exclusive services for poster work for a year with Famous Players-Lasky.

JEAN PAIGE RESUMES SCREEN WORK

At Vitagraph's Brooklyn studio, "The Prodigal Judge" is starting with Jean Paige playing the lead. Edward Jose is directing this picture.

LYTELL CAMPING

Bert Lytell will depart presently for Northern California on a camping trip. Mr. Lytell has recently completed "Ladyfingers," which Bayard Veiller directed.

SEVERS WITH SELZNICK

Martha Mansfield is no longer a Selznick luminary. Miss Mansfield was featured in several pictures and also supported Eugene O'Brien.

Evelyn Kenyon, who has been chosen to head Metro's reorganized reading department, is seeking heart interest stories seasoned with comedy for Metro stars, now at work at the company's West Coast studios.

Edward Connelly plays an important role in "Turn to the Right," Rex Ingram's current Metro picture.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Geoffrey B. Bering

Geoffrey B. Bering, a rising juvenile who is now confining his activities to pictures, originally won his laurels on the legitimate stage as juvenile lead in several of the big hits of recent years. He played in "The Toast Master," "When Teddy Comes Home," "The Amazons," "Neighbors," "Two Crooks and a Lady," "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," and Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen."

Mr. Bering has appeared exclusively in Paramount pictures since leaving the stage, and is soon to be seen on the silver sheet in Cecil B. de Mille's "The Lady and the Laurels," Sam Wood's "Don't Tell Everything," James Cruze's "Freight Prepaid," starring Roscoe Arbuckle, and Penrhyn Stanlaws' "The Woman in the Case."

HOLLYWOOD STUDIO CLUB CAMPAIGN

The Hollywood Studio Club will launch on September 1st a ten-day campaign to raise $5,000, which will be used to build a dormitory. This institution, situated in Hollywood, furnishes a home for girls who come to California to appear in motion pictures. It is under the supervision of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A. The Committee which determines its general policy is composed of Miss Hessica Lawrence, Chairman; Mrs. William de Mille; Mrs. Cecil de Mille; Mrs. Jesse L. Lasky; Mrs. Wilfred Buckland; Mrs. Arthur Heineman; Mrs. Charles Richmond and Mrs. Wilson Martin.

"U" VISITORS

Judge William J. Day of the Municipal Court of Boston, Judge Michael F. Kennedy of the District Court of Natick, Mass., and M. J. Ney, Coast representative of Vogue and Vanity Fair, were the guests recently of Marie Prevost at Universal City.

JOHNNY JONES POPULAR IN JAPAN

Johnny Jones, who played the chief role in the Goldwyn production of Booth Tarkington's twelve two-reel comedies of American boy life, "The Adventures and Emotions of Edgar Pomeroy," was recently voted Japan's most popular motion picture player, having received a letter to that effect from the Yomiuri, Tokio, Japan. Madame Nazimova was his nearest competitor.

Johnny's latest screen appearance is in Rupert Hughes' "The Old Nest," now showing at the Astor Theatre, New York.

LEDERER ENTERTAINS EXHIBITORS

Otto Lederer is entertaining Mr. Frank Goulette from Manila and Mr. Dick Bell from Shanghai, exhibitors and showmen of the far East.

Mr. Lederer, at present playing the Indian heavy in Ruth Roland's serial now being filmed at the Hal E. Roach studios, is building a Hollywood home.

Besides his studio work, Mr. Lederer has four pupils in dramatic expression.

WRITING FOR DOUBLEDAY PRODUCTIONS

Henry McCarty is co-author with Leo Meehan of the five-reel westerns featuring Lester Cuneo, being made by Doubleday Production Company for distribution by Irving M. Lesser.

Production Notes

AT BRUNTON

The B. B. Hampton production, "Grey Dawn," by Stewart Edward White, is nearing completion under the co-direction of Eliot Howe and Jean Hersholt. Claire Adams heads the all-artist cast, which includes Robert McKim, Carl Ganvoort, Claire MacDowell and Maude Wayne.

Work has been started on "The Daughter of Brahma," by I. A. R. Wylie. Marguerite De La Motte has the leading role in this photoplay, which Ed Sloman is directing.

The R. A. Walsh production, "Kindred of the Dust," from the novel by Peter B. Kyne, is nearing its half way mark. Miriam Cooper is starred with Ralph Graves and Lionel Belmore in the supporting cast.

AT VITAGRAPH

Work upon the picturization of the James Oliver Curwood novel, in which Henry B. Walthall and Pauline Starke assume leading roles, is nearing completion.

The second episode of "Breaking Through," the new chapter-play in which Carmel Myers and Wallace MacDonald are co-starring, is finished, and Robert Ensminger is making rapid progress on episode three.

Larry Semon, director Norman Taurog, and members of the company are at Hume Lake filming the next Semon comedy.

AT METRO

Alice Lake has completed work on her first picture under Maxwell Karger's direction, "The Golden Gift," and has been selected to star in "The Hole in the Wall," by Fred Jackson, now being scenarized by June Mathis. She will again be directed by Mr. Karger.

George D. Baker has selected "Stay Home" as his next production, to be filmed by S.-L. Pictures, in which Gareth Hughes will be starred.

Bert Lytell's next production will be "The Right That Failed," a Saturday Evening Post story from the pen of J. P. Marquand.

AT GOLDWYN

Raymond Hatton and company left Sunday for Randsburg, Calif., where two weeks will be spent making exteriors for "His Back Against the Wall," under the direction of Rowland V. Lee.

The photography on "The Sin Flood" was finished recently under the direction of Frank Lloyd. Richard Dix and Helene Chadwick enact the leading roles in this photoplay.

RANGER BILL PRODUCTIONS

Victor Hugo Halperin has recently completed "Dead Man's Boots," an original story, for the Ranger Bill Miller Productions. This is the first of a series of ten stories of the Northwest Mounted Police. The next entitled, "Never Say Die!" is in progress.

Reginald Barker's production, "The Old Nest," will be released to exhibitors September 11th.

FOR RELEASE

"Little Eva Ascends" and "Garments of Truth," comedies, in which Gareth Hughes is starred, complete the first series of three Baker productions soon to be seen in New York.

WALLACE MacDONALD

Who is being co-featured with Carmel Meyers in Vitagraph Serials.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE TOUR

Douglas MacLean, under the auspices of Associated Producers, Inc., is making a tour of personal appearances in the key cities of the Middle West and the East. The present trip follows closely on the heels of MacLean's recent tour of the Southern States which was conducted by the Famous Players-Lasky Exchange.

FAZENDA IN DRAMA

Louise Fazenda, eccentric comedienne, is temporarily deserting comedy to go into serious drama with Cosmopolitan Productions in New York.

"LINGER LONGER LETTY" TO BE FILMED

Charlotte Greenwood is on her way here to be starred in the film version of "Linger Longer Letty." Miss Greenwood created the Letty role in the stage presentation.

William D. Taylor's production of Henry Arthur Jones' first original screen story has been entitled "Beyond." It stars Ethel Clayton, and will be released late in October by Paramount.

Madame Nazimova has completed the cutting, editing and titling of her new Metro production of "Camille," which will be ready for release in the near future.

AT LASKY'S

Thomas Meighan is working on George M. Cohan's "A Prince There Was," from the novel by Darragh Aldrich.

William deMille has completed his cast for "Miss Lulu Bett," his next production, and work will start around the last of August. This is Zona Gale's prize play, based upon her own novel, and was adapted for the screen by Clara Beranger. Mildred Harris will appear in the title part and Milton Sills will have the leading male role.

Gloria Swanson will begin work September 5th on a new production under the direction of Sam Wood.

George Melford is completing his production, "The Sheik." Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino are the featured players in this offering.

Paul Powell, who has been directing pictures for Paramount at its London Studio, returns presently and will start work upon Eugene Brieux's play, "The Cradle," with Ethel Clayton as star. Julia Crawford Ivers will supervise the production, which Olga Printzlau adapted for the screen.

"The Melancholy Spirit" is the working title of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's next screen vehicle. James Cruze will again direct, and work is scheduled to begin shortly.

INDUSTRY CONTRIBUTES $10,000 TO CHARITY

The motion picture industry in Los Angeles has "contributed" $10,000 to children's charities in the last six months, according to Robert E. Wells, manager of the Assistance League location bureau. This sum represents rentals paid by picture companies for locations obtained through the bureau, which in turn hands the money over to various charitable causes.

FARRA FEATURES

Farra Features is the banner under which a new producing company appears, headed by Charles Farra, who is the star and producer. Working headquarters will be in Globe, Arizona.

Miss Ethel Ritchie, Edward Coxen and Sid de Grey will play in the Farra pictures while A. J. Scott, business manager; Miss Bob Hunter, scenarist; George Elder, Ray Adams and E. J. Kerr, cameramen, complete the staff.

The first story is based on O. Henry's "The Caballero's Way." It is now being directed by Mr. Mitchell under the supervision of Edward Alexander.

Release will be through the Producers' Securities Corporation, New York City.

"Mice at War" is the title of the next of the series of "Aesop's Film Fables," produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., and created by Cartoonist Paul Terry, which Pathe has scheduled for release during the week of August 28th.

Bill White has been cast to play an important role with the Ben Wilson productions under the direction of Roy Clements.

Current Reviews

Something must have slipped up for Walter.

The one redeeming feature in "Her Sturdy Oak" is the sturdier Sylvia Ashton, who enacts Belle Bright, Samuel's persistent pursuer. Ashton's scenes are well proportioned and each one means just what its interpreter intends. Nor does she stop at comedy, for one or two daring approaches to the pathetic are accomplished and successfully gotten away with by this dependable "old-timer."

Mayme Kelso is a good type for Violet's political mother.

Leo White and Frederick Stanton complete the cast in good positions.

Thomas Heffron directed the production.

son Clift, who also wrote the scenario which is being photographed by William Shenton.

Director John Glidden is producing "The Night Hawk," starring Malvina Longfellow and Henry de Vries for International Artists Films. Gerard Ford Huckle is responsible for the scenario and Will Howse is at the camera.

Master Films is cutting and assembling a drama entitled "The Marriage Lines," which Wilfred Noy wrote and directed. Barbara Hoff is starred; Theodore Thrumwood photographed.

Minerva Films is making "The Beggars' Syndicate," a comedy drama featuring Mary Patterson, Bert Darley, and Crispin Hay, under the direction of Adrian Brunel, who also wrote the scenario. Frank Hoffman is the cameraman.

"The Mayor of Casterbridge," starring Fred Groves, is being made by Progress. Sidney Morgan, who wrote the scenario, is directing the production, which is being photographed by Stanley Mumford.

Samuelson will start a new picture under the direction of Rex Wilson shortly. In the meantime "Dick's Fairy," the drama recently completed by Bert Wynne, starring Hargreaves Munsell, Joan Griffith and Albert Brantford, is being cut and assembled. Elliot Stannard scenarized the story, which was photographed by L. Protheroe.

Screen Plays is producing one short reel melodrama a week under the direction of Fred Paul and Jack Raymond.

Stoll is producing "The Fruitful Vine," under the direction of Maurice Elvey and the camera of Germaine Berger. "General John Regan" is also being made for this company by Director Harold Shaw. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" was finished some time ago by Director Maurice Elvey. Elle Norwood and Catrina Campbell are starred in this production.

H. W. Thompson is producing "The Wonderful Year," a French drama directed by Kenelm Foss, starring Marie Odette and Lionelle Howard. Frank Canham is photographing this picture, which was scenarized by the director.

Zodiac has recently completed a two-reel comedy starring Walter Forde, entitled "Walter Finds a Father."

PLAN TO BEGIN FIGHT ON CENSORS

From "Moving Picture World."

The first gun to be fired in the practical war, which has as its object the wiping off of the censorship law from the statute books of the State of New York, was fired by Major F. H. La Guardia before a largely attended meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at Browne's Chop House on August 4th. A practical plan is being put in shape by the directors of the association, and it is their desire to work in co-operation with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

The first attack is to be made by the direct method of calling on every candidate for Assembly (there are no Senators to be elected this year) to express his attitude in writing regarding moving picture censorship, and whether or not he will pledge himself to work for and vote for the repeal of the censorship law.

The campaign is to be absolutely non-partisan, and it is the purpose of the leaders in the movement to ask that support be given, regardless of party, to those who will work for and vote for the repeal of censorship, and to oppose the candidates who are against the liberty of the screen.

To take censorship "lying down," to curry favor with the board which holds in its hands the power to make it hot for any producer or distributor who shows any inclination to be a "bad boy" in the matter of presenting propaganda pictures in opposition to the policies of the party in power, is of course the line of least resistance. It is the easiest way and already there is a strong indication that the passive course is the popular course.

The absolute folly of becoming driven sheep with no definite plan of resistance to an out and out menace to our liberties both as moving picture men and as American citizens should be evident even to those who subscribe to the false theory that "the easy way is always the best."

Suppost our forefathers had said of King George III, when he sought to impose taxation without representation, "Oh, the easiest and best thing to do is not to make a fuss about it. We can all make a nice living by hard work so why should we worry about a little thing like that." Where would our liberties be today?

In fact and in effect the censorship law is even more of an enslaving measure than all the policies of George III combined because it seeks to enslave the brain. Any man in the moving picture business who subscribes to legalized pre-publication censorship is either mistaken or too soft to fight.

Now that a definite, workable, practical plan has been prepared in structure, the only present need is a full, complete and militant support of that plan. The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in preparing this plan are acting within their province because among their membership are those whose especial work it is to whip into usable shape the ideas of their chiefs and to add ideas of their own which will appeal to the public. They are a body of experts in the originating of this material.

Their plan, as we are advised of it, calls for a co-operation between the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and other organized bodies, and they stand ready to offer their services for such of the work as falls within their especial line of training. They have no glory to seek and no politics to play. They desire to be of actual service and their hunger for work is not fed by perfunctory resolutions, passed and forgotten.

In view of the differences which from time to time arise and stand in the way of co-operation, this organization has made a fortunate entry into the situation and a complete working program with a united front should not be difficult to secure.

NAZIMOVA STOCK

Nazimova is negotiating for the use of the Earl Carroll theatre, New York, almost completed, where she hopes to head her own stock company next winter.

SWANSON RESTING

Having recovered from a minor operation, undergone in a local hospital, Gloria Swanson is preparing to leave Hollywood for a short vacation in New York.

Harry Myers has one of the principal roles in Rex Ingram's "Turn to the Right."

Baby Jackie Condon may be seen in "Miracles of the Jungle," recently released by Warner Bros.

Betty Compson makes her debut as a Paramount star in "At the End of the World," directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws, which will be the attraction at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of August 22d.

HEARINGS SOON

The Senate Finance Committee will hold its hearings on the tariff bill presently. It is expected one day, or a part of one day, will be given to representatives of the picture industry. Foreign producers, as well as those interested in the importation of films and raw stock manufacture, will be heard.

Saul E. Rogers of the Fox organization is among those who will appear when the committee starts work.

PINE TREE OFFICIALS CONFER

Fred W. Hinckley, president and Carl E. Milliken, treasurer of Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., will confer with James Oliver Curwood on the next production to be made for Arrow release. Milliken is former governor of Maine.

NOVEL REVIEW

Charles C. Burr will sponsor a series of short subjects in which will be incorporated Pen and Ink Comics, Rollin Lester Dixon's "Scenic Poems," natural color fashion studies and cartoons on timely topics by Edwin Marcus. The series will appear under the title of "Burr's Novel Review."

"THE ATHEIST"

The second feature produced by the United States M. P. Corp., entitled "The Threshold," is to be renamed "The Atheist."

TO PRODUCE HERE

Iris Pictures will hereafter make their pictures here. Walter Steiner, director general, is finishing the company's initial film, "Tangled Hearts."

RESUMING ACTIVITIES

David Horsley, "pioneer" in the industry, has reopened his New York office, and will reissue a series of 20 two-reel Bostock Wild Animal dramas in which Patricia Palmer and all-star casts are featured.

SINGERS REPLACE MUSICIANS

Choruses are being trained to replace the striking musicians in various New York picture houses. A chorus of 75 has replaced the symphony orchestra at the Capitol. The deadlock still continues.

LEASES ESTEE PLANT

Ray C. Smallwood has leased the Estee studio for one year. Smallwood will make pictures for Pyramid Pictures, Inc., of which Walter E. Greene is president.

CHICAGO ACCEPTS "ANATOL"

The Chicago Board of Censors has passed "The Affairs of Anatol" intact.

E. M. Asher, Sennett representative, has left for New York with a print of "Molly-O."

Dorothy Richards, who was in "Deburau," has joined the cast of "The Barricade," being made at the Victor studio by Wm. Christy Cabanne.

RAY PRODUCTIONS

Charles Ray has finished "Gas, Oil and Water," his latest comedy for First National release. "Two Minutes to Go," Mr. Ray's football story, is cut and ready to be sent to New York.

This star will begin work presently on "The Deuce of Spades," a Charles E. Van Loan story.

AT REALART

William D. Taylor is making preparations for the next May McAvoy production for which Julia Crawford Ivers is writing the scenario.

Alice Eyton is finishing the scenario which will be the next vehicle for Mary Miles Minter. It will be a January release.

THEDA BARA PICTURES

Theda Bara will resume the production of pictures presently; Lee A. Ochs will be the sponsor for the former Fox star's pictures, three of which will be made a year.

VIGNOLA DOING "BEAUTY'S WORTH"

Robert G. Vignola, with assistant director Philip Messi, Luther Reed and cameraman Ira H. Morgan, are en route here where scenes will be taken for the Cosmopolitan Production, "Beauty's Worth."

Production on "Sisters," which had been assigned to Vignola, will be in charge of Albert Capellani at the International Studios, New York.

SHIPS PRAIRIE PRODUCTION

Bob Horner, who is writing and directing a series of western dramas for the Prairie Film Company, has finished cutting his current subject and shipped it to the C. B. C. Sales Company, in New York. Fred Hirons, formerly with Selznick, has arrived here to take over the business management of this concern.

MAJOR JACK ALLEN'S JUNGLE PICTURES

Major Jack Allen, of wild jungle beasts, will make his bow to the motion picture public on September 25. Pathe announces this date of release of "Netting the Leopard," the first of a series of one-reelers prōduced by Adventure Films, Inc., in which his savage four-legged captives "play the star parts."

MORE WESTERNS

Director Fred Caldwell has as his guest Louis Boston of Washington, D. C. Mr. Boston is combining a pleasure and business trip, having in mind the formation of a company in Los Angeles to produce five-reel westerns.

TITLING FOX PICTURES

Tom Miranda has completed titling Dustin Farnum's current release—"The Primal Law," and Johnnie Walker's "The Drifters," and begins Monday on "Bar Nothin'," starring Buck Jones.

MORANTE NORTHWESTERN

Milburn Morante will shortly start production on a five-reel story of the Northwest woods written by J. Inman Kane, purchased through the Photoplaywrights League of America.

The Story Idea

that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer

Glen Cedar Ranch,
My dear Nephew: Burbank, Calif.

Your very interesting letter at hand, and I hasten to answer because one of the things on which you dwell at some length seems to need special and immediate attention. We are sorry that there seems to be a little zero weather between you and your director. You had the best intentions, of course, but don't let it happen again. Some directors like to have their photographers offer suggestions as to the direction of the story, but not many. Even if the suggestion is a good one, it hurts the director's pride or ego. He considers it outside interference, and more especially when it hasn't been asked for. Your Aunt says, "The worst kind of vice is advice," and I have found that she is usually right.

I was working with a director at one time who was just breaking into the business. He had been an actor of ability, and had a splendid foundation upon which to become a first-class director. Well, I offered quite a few suggestions during the course of the picture, because I felt it was up to me to give him the advantage of what I had learned from other directors. It began to wear on him, and while he would never say in so many words that I was making a mistake I finally became aware of it myself. We made three pictures together, but I have wished many times since that I had "let the director direct the picture." Of course, when the two can work together on both sides of the fence, there is no question but what a better picture will result. Many directors are artistic, and on the other hand a photographer has an angle or view point also. If I were you I would have a nice little talk with your man, and assure him that it will never occur again, unless he desires it. Just say, "Let's you and I get along together." I don't care what business we're in, it seems awfully hard to acknowledge we're wrong, but it does everybody concerned a lot of good when we say it out loud where everybody can hear it. Even where it affects your own department; all directors are not photographers, and many times they are from the state south of Iowa. Its all in the way you go about getting your point over. If they insist, then ask them if they will let you shoot it both their way and your way. It may be that the next time you would only have to shoot it one way. If you are making a five-reeler in two weeks, I guess that's the only way you could shoot most of the scenes. They say that two heads are better than one. I'll go so far as to say that even four or five heads are better than one. We have in mind one of the big directors. He was nearly six feet, and labored no doubt under the impression that he was making ideal pictures because every one on the staff agreed when any point was discussed, that his opinion was the best. As a matter of fact none of them had the courage to suggest what he thought was better. It's a great life though, after all, if you don't weaken.

I have been "shooting" some of the animals here on the ranch. Have a monkey and a turtle for leads, and I am here to state that no peroxide ever had anything on either one of them for temperament.

Write again soon.

Your affectionate
UNCLE DUDLEY.

Vol. IV. SATURDAY, AUGUST 27, 1921 No. 20

The Co-operative and the Industry

The financial depression which has been, is, in fact, still being experienced by big business all over the country, has brought many changes of methods in its conduct. The picture industry has not been an exception. With money for the production of anything nearly impossible to procure, some energetic film promoter conceived the idea of adopting the much discussed "co-operative" plan" to effect a photoplay. His result must have been gratifying, or so it would seem, if we are to judge from the promiscuous following enjoyed by the theory which he sponsored. For dozens of organizations have sprung into being in the past few months, each one with the intention to make independent pictures upon this basis, i. e., that their talent, technical men, directors, etc., render their services in return for the receipt of a sufficient amount of stock in the company to meet their ordinary salary figures.

Quite naturally there are as many opinions in regard to the advisability of encouraging this method of procedure as there would be in any other line of endeavor. A review of the situation, therefore, is not inopportune.

It is a fact that up to the present writing about fifty per cent of the attempts made in the co-operative direction have met with a greater or less degree of failure. There have been various reasons for these misadventures, but probably the majority of them trace back to a lack of ability in some one, or several, departments of their respective companies. It is simple to perceive that as long as our most capable actors, photographers, electricians, etc., can keep employed for cash they are unlikely to favorably consider an entrance into less certain agreements; hence the liability of inferior work somewhere.

Of course, we all recognize blatant errors in the program turnout of our big corporations and we repeatedly complain at being inflicted with them, but in the end our grumblings mean little other than perhaps discouraging theatre attendance, for the Wall Street affiliations all control their own channels of release and even hundreds of the houses. The independent cinema play, however, with no such assurance of purchase and distribution, must "go the magnates one better," admittedly an undertaking of which very few are capable.

For the achievement of success, then, the company operating upon this plan must be proficient in all departments. The other half of our co-operatives have apparently measured up to this standard, for they are selling their material at a decided profit. They have on their side thousands of exhibitors who in return for injustices of the past are fairly aching to tear holes in our financial demons the moment that they are afforded an opportunity to slide acceptable independent productions into their houses.

Anyway we take it, this activity among the industrious but "uncapitaled" class will prove beneficial. Besides increasing competition, always a good thing, it will bring to the fore the man in our profession who through lack of opportunity has been assigned only mediocre positions. Moreover, it will weed out of the business the promoter who either through unworthy intent or inability steers a bark containing a crew of trusting artists onto the rocks of disaster. It is an unusual project that proves equally advantageous to an industry in its success or failure.—F. R.

Foreign Atmosphere

By Harry E. Nolan

A party of Americans, of which I was one, took in a picture show last winter at a certain resort on the French Riviera. Sandwiched in between an Italian film and a Pearl White serial was a "Drame du Wild West," as they call it. It was sure enough wild! Hardly had it gotten on its way before we began to feel that something was wrong. I, for one, felt a disconcerting sense of unreality and began to ask myself in what studio and in what part of the United States that film could have been produced. Soon some rank discrepancies in the props and costumes, and especially in the action, made us all burst out laughing. No bunch of cowboys in real life, or before the camera, ever acted in any such manner. Any of our Mix's or Harts or Farnums would have undertaken to catch between their teeth the bullets from their cunning little revolvers. Something—everything—was wrong with that Western mining town. The bartender overplayed his part, the bottle which he shoved out on the bar may have once had some "vin rouge" in it, but never any real American whiskey, and the hero that he served had evidently never taken a drink of said stuff. You felt that you could look right into their brains like an X-Ray, and know that they weren't any of them thinking as any true Westerner ever thought. In spite of plenty of action, some splendid riding and some really dramatic incidents, the picture was a roaring farce-comedy to us. But some of the audience went wild over it.

We found, of course, that the picture was produced right there in France, and that everyone connected with it, from the author of the story to the donkey ridden by the (French) Chinaman, had never been any nearer the "Far West" than Bordeaux. It was an earnest, but pathetic, attempt to picture something that they could not correctly visualize. No doubt they thought that their picture was a true-to-life copy of the real thing, as judged by all the Western dramas they had seen and all the dope that their combined researches could dig up. But they had seen with French eyes, and established their values according to French standards. The result was

MERIT FILM COMPANY BUYS GUINAN WESTERNS

The Texas Guinan Productions announces that a contract was recently closed with I. E. Chadwick, representing the Merit Film Company of New York and the Merit Film Company of Baltimore, whereby the first series of twelve Texas Guinan two-reel Western and Northwestern productions were acquired for the territory of Greater New York and New York State, Northern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia.

In addition to the two-reelers, and during the course of the making of the first series, one special five-reel production will also be made, the story having been acquired from Mildred Moreno.

NEW STAHL STORY

Louis B. Mayer has secured the film rights to Hulbert Footner's "The Fur Bringers," and it will be made by John M. Stahl as his third independent unit production for Mr. Mayer.

"The Fur Bringers" will have an all-star cast, and will be presented through Associated First National.

SANTSCHI TO HEAD HIS OWN COMPANY

Having terminated his Pathe contract, Tom Santschi is sojourning at his California mountain resort. Preparations for his own company are now in progress, and it is likely that his first picture will be made in New York.

WILL TAKE MORE WESTERNS

As a result of his country-wide canvass showing that Western pictures are in keen demand by exhibitors, Irving M. Lesser, general manager of the Western Pictures Exploitation Company, is looking for more Western pictures with California backgrounds.

FORTHCOMING STEWART PICTURES

Anita Stewart's next two starring vehicles for First National release will be "Rose o' the Sea," by Countess Barcynska, and "The Woman He Married," by Herbert Bashford. Miss Stewart intends to terminate her vacation in the East and is expected here shortly.

Madge Tyrone, who edited "The Child Thou Gavest Me" and wrote the scenarios for "Habit" and "The Invisible Fear," is working on the script of "Rose o' the Sea." The film version of "The Woman He Married" is being prepared by Josephine Quirk, who scenarized Miss Stewart's last two pictures, "Her Mad Bargain" and "A Question of Honor."

LONESOME LUKE COMEDIES PREPARED

Arrangements have been completed to launch Gaylord Lloyd, brother of Harold Lloyd, as a comedy star. He will impersonate the Luke character originated by his brother. Four pictures, to be released soon, will mark his debut. The Gaylord Lloyd comedies thus far delivered are: "Trolley Troubles," "The Lucky Number," "A Zero Hero" and "Dodge Your Debts." The last three were directed by Erle Kenton, with Estelle Harrison as leading lady.

Jean Calhoun will enact an important role in the current Frothingham picture, entitled "The Daughter of Brahma."

LITTLE ON LOCATION

Ann Little and company are at Yellowstone Park making exteriors for the Ben Wilson serial, which is in its third week of production.

Harry L. Kerr

Who was formerly studio manager for Mack Sennett and general manager for Mabel Normand during her production of "Mickey" and who has been more recently with Willis and Inglis, is now filling the position of assistant to the general manager of Universal City.

AT VITAGRAPH

Director Robert Ensminger has finished the third episode and started upon the fourth of the new Vitagraph chapter play, "Breaking Through," in which Carmel Myers and Wallace MacDonald are co-starring.

Continuity is being prepared for the next feature in which Antonio Moreno will appear.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

The title of Katherine MacDonald's photoplay, most recently completed, formerly "Man's Game," has been changed to "The Woman's Side." J. A. Barry, who directed Miss MacDonald in "The Woman's Side," is cutting and editing the picture, and will have it ready presently for shipment.

Charles Ray has finished shooting "Gas, Oil and Water," and is preparing the continuity of Charles E. Van Loan's story, "The Deuce of Spades."

John M. Stahl has virtually finished "The Song of Life." Only a few scenes remain to be filmed. These are being taken in the Mojave Desert between Sperry and Shashone.

Norma Talmadge is in the fifth week of "Smilin' Through," which she is making at her New York studio. Herbert Brenon is directing.

Buster Keaton has finished "The Blacksmith," his second production for First National release.

Colleen Moore, recently seen in "The Sky Pilot," is appearing in her final scenes in the Oliver Morosco production, "Slippy Mc Gee," at the Louis B. Mayer studio.

Allen Holubar is busy preparing his next production in which Dorotny Phillips will be featured.

Wesley Barry will soon start work in Marshall Nenlan's photoplay version of Booth Tarkington's "Penrod."

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

"Pickaninny," a recently completed comedy, is ready for New York shipment. This two-reeler includes in its cast "Sunshine Sammy," Joe and Vera White, Ethel Broadhurst, George Rowe, "Tiny" Ward, Mark Jones and Sammy Brooks. H. M. Walker is author of the titles, and Bob Kerr and Jimmy Parrott directed it, with Frank Young at the camera.

"Rainbow Island," one of Harold Lloyd's early one-reelers, has been re-issued. In this picture "Snub" Pollard, who now has his own company, is the star's running mate.

Production has started on a comedy whose locale is "Zululand." George Rowe, cross-eyed comedian, and "Sunshine Sammy" will have important parts. Ethel Broadhurst will play the feminine lead.

AT METRO

Viola Dana will start work presently on "Glass Houses," an original story written by Clara Genevieve Kennedy, for which Edith Kennedy, the authoress' sister, has prepared the continuity. Harry Beaumont, who directed Miss Dana's most recent picture, "The Fourteenth Lover," will again direct her in "Glass Houses."

Bert Lytell will start the filming of "The Right That Failed" within the next week. Bayard Veiller will handle the megaphone for the new picture.

George D. Baker is engaged in the preparation of a new series of productions in which Gareth Hughes will star. There will be five comedy dramas in this new group of Baker productions, to be filmed by S-L Pictures.

PICKFORD'S LATEST FINISHED

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" is finished in its picture form, after several months in the making. Mary Pickford will rest for a time before starting another story.

Current Reviews

"AT THE END OF THE WORLD"

Grauman's

The release of the celluloided version of Ernest Klein's "At the End of the World," marks Betty Compson's debut as a Paramount star. The story is of a cynic's sensitive daughter, her life in a Shanghai cafe and her position in the lives of four men. Opening in an Eastern cross roads of the world, and finding its culmination at that world's end on a lonely lighthouse site, this refreshingly novel picture play holds much of fascination. Moreover, it is the style of setting into which its star best fits. The Edfrid Bingham scenario is excellent and there are comparatively few errors in the Penrhyn Stanlaws direction. Some truly remarkable miniature, lighting and photographic effects have also been accomplished for it under the able supervision of cinematographer Paul Perry.

As we have remarked, Miss Compson is ideally placed as Cherry O'Day, the superficial woman who finds her soul in a love that can include no cynic's reservations. This actress' superb dignity, rare in one so undeniably young, her open-eyed, ingenuous attitude, together with a clever knowledge of technique and proportion, lend her personality much that is irresistible. We will anticipate her forthcoming work in this line.

It has been some time since we have enjoyed Milton Sills in one of his worldly "he-men" more than we did in this picture. He plays Gordon Deane, the adventurer who struggles longest against the recognition of Cherry, his heart's desire. Without being heroic he includes in his character all of the attributes that go to make up the modern American favorite. Sills' fans are certain to be enthusiastic over Deane. He is correctly done.

A striking contrast is created for the story by Mitchell Lewis and Casson Ferguson, who enact respectively Donald MacGregor, a sea-faring combination of fanatical sincerity and a crudity that approaches the bestial, and Harvey Allen, a weakling whose temptation and excuse are invariably a woman. They are both very clever and contend valiantly with each other for highest honors in their scenes. An interestingly even break results.

Spottiswood Aitken, Joseph Kilgour and Goro Kino could not possibly have been improved upon to fill the roles of Terence O'Day, Cherry's father, William Blaine, her husband, and Yong, her Chinese godfather. It is a delight to witness occasionally a sympathetic Oriental.

"At the End of the World" has much of value from the standpoint of entertainment and the box office is bound to report favorably upon it.

"ONE WILD WEEK"

Clune's

A Francis Harmer story, adapted by Percy Heath, serves Bebe Daniels for her latest Realart comedy, "One Wild Week." Miss Daniels' productions are improving from several standpoints, and we wish to go on record as heading the appreciation list. (There isn't a question but that a goodly portion of picture-going humanity will follow closely below.) It takes an unusual combination of intelligence and art to overcome a really bad story, but "One Wild Week" isn't bad at all. In fact, it has many enlivening moments, the audience's appreciation of which was distinctly audible at the opening performance. Although based upon the lighter side of reform school life, it hits rather squarely at some of its abuses in a highly effective manner. The action is sufficently rapid, and not too inconsistent, to proclaim this production a first rate farce.

No very noticeable errors show up in the Maurice Campbell direction, and H. Kinley Martin's photography is very fair, resulting in satisfaction from a technical consideration.

Elinor Hancock

Pauline Hathaway, the reckless and much plotted-against young heroine, is a regulation Daniels' flapper, a bit too startling for practicability, but quite entertaining always. The star lends Pauline a rather colorful personality and some easily handled comedy.

Frank Kingsley, a stranger to us, is ample in the "scientific" juvenile, Bruce Reynolds, who invents an electrical apparatus which is infallible in judging a criminal's guilt. Some achievement?

Mayme Kelso and Edwin Stevens render the exaggerated opposition both amusing and convincing in the roles of Angelica Jessop, Pauline's miserly spinster aunt, and Oliver Tobin, her shyster suitor.

Frances Raymond, Herbert Standing and Edythe Chapman are excellently situated as Mrs. Brewster, Judge Bancroft and Mrs. Dorn.

Carrie Clark Ward and Bull Montana, in small but appropriate positions, are also included in the cast.

"WEALTH"

Tally's

Julia Crawford Ivers' screen version of Cosmo Hamilton's story, "Wealth," is Paramount's latest publication, starring Ethel Clayton. The theme of the photoplay is based upon the much-discussed question of the relationship between riches and happiness and the plot drags in a designing mother-in-law to "help things happen." Taken by and large, it is an ordinary drama intelligently presented so that it results in very acceptable entertainment.

The camera-work for which James C. Van Trees is responsible varies somewhat, but is, taken generally, perfectly adequate.

William D. Taylor also reaches his standard in the direction of the capable cast with which he has to deal.

The star portrays Mary McLeod, one of the workers of the world, who is not given contentment by the money that she marries, despite a great love for her well-meaning husband. We have long admired Miss Clayton's technique but we feel that her appearance in older roles would not only be justified but pertinent. However, she carries conviction here as usual.

Herbert Rawlinson is a suitable type for the young, irresponsible "man about town" that is Philip Dominick, the male lead. Such work is, after all, his forte.

Probably the strongest position in the picture is occupied by Claire MacDowell, who enacts Mrs. Dominick, the aggressive, overbearing controller of her family's much-prized millions. This pronounced heavy proves much concerning its interpreter's adaptability.

J. M. Dumont, in a rather unnecessary sacrifice role, gets over satisfactorily, while Jean Acker and Richard Wayne play calmly the almost irrelative parts, Estelle Rolan and Dr. Howard. Due to some miscalculation evidently, these two are left hanging in the air at the picture's end and in the midst of what we judged to be a promising romance.

Larry Steers and George Periolat complete the list of performers in this Lasky-made production.

"MOTHER O'MINE"

Kinema

"Mother" stories seem to be on the crest of popularity's unsteady wave, at this particular moment. We have had several strong, even overdone, ones lately, so that, largely due to its title, we expected slightly different treatment of the subject matter contained in Thos. Ince's "Mother O'Mine," than it has received. True, the plot is based upon a boy's worship of his mother and her sacrifice to save him, but it is her influence more than presence that is realized throughout. In fact her footage is markedly limited. This Charles Belmont Davis story, however, makes an interesting drama, in the scenario of which Gardner Sullivan has carefully judged the placement of the suspense, heart interest, etc. Fred Niblo has further increased the production's value by handling the script and excellent cast with true artistry and proportion. Photographically "Mother O'Mine" is exceptionally good as it is otherwise technically.

Robert Sheldon, the upright young hero who is unfairly accused of murder, is made very human by Lloyd Hughes, whose work becomes more and more pleasing as his scope widens.

Opposite him we see Betty Ross Clarke in the role of Dolly Wilson, an actress who loves the boy for his cleanness. Miss Clark has ahead of her the brilliant future that is the reward of natural charm and clear headwork. She is quite lovely as Dolly.

In absolute extreme to her situation in "Wealth," Claire MacDowell is seen to advantage as Mrs. Sheldon, the title role in this picture. Her work is handled with well shaded sympathy.

If it is possible Joseph Kilgour offers a more sensational piece of acting in Willard Thaxter than ever. Thaxter is another brutal heavy with which its portrayer will arouse loathing in any audience. It is to his undying credit that he makes that unrepentant monster's death scene pitiful enough to extract a tear from the stoniest hearted.

The Screen Writers' Forum — Conducted by William E. Wing

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

With everyone telling us the ailments of the motion picture, I have been minded to ask the student of the screen to have his little say.

He has done so, and the result is altogether worthy. This special critic who replies, but withholds his name, is of highly trained mind, a keen perceiver and a noted technician. Great corporations have used his analytical mind and have absolutely abided by his decisions. Listen to him then:

THE STUDENT SPEAKS

A young baby's first sign of intelligence, other than the instinct to feed and struggle, is its discovery that it can see something. It begins to note moving objects, lights, colors. It realizes that there are things outside of itself and its material cravings.

This is the birth of the instinct for entertainment. It must be amused, as many mothers and fathers know to their cost, if they indulge the child's whims to be lifted in arms, etc.

Later the child has toys, but is always reaching out to broaden its experiences. The toy gun is exchanged for a real one, and he becomes a hunter or soldier. The doll is exchanged for the baby, and the child joins the ranks of mothers.

No longer are they interested in Mother Goose, or Diamond Dick, or the Youth's Companion. Their minds continually reach out for new experiences, new knowledge, new worlds to conquer. So insatiable are these minds in their discontent that they are never satisfied with the personal experiences of life; but must peer about into other lives for wider and more stimulating experiences. The mind lives and has experiences apart from the body.

Some few, called geniuses or creative minds, live more in the mind than in the body. Beethoven's mind heard music such as his grandest compositions handed down to us do not even approach. Dickens wandered about the streets of his mind-towns, talking with his mind characters as familiarly as we wander in our home towns. The pictures of truly great artists are only faint reflections of mind-scenes whose glories we can only conjecture.

Such persons need no entertainment other than the workings of their own minds; at least in their own specialties.

The rest of us have only fragmentary mind pictures, ideals and memories of emotional experiences. Therefore, our entertainment consists of delightfully recognizing the coordination of experiences whose fragments, beauties, and comic absurdities already exist in our own lives.

Donovan, the teamster, could not comprehend the mouthings of Richard Third or Hamlet, because his honest mind has no fragments or pictures of fine-spun emotions.

Americans may not be cultured people in terms of classics, ethics or psychology; but they know life because they live it. They want their pictures in terms of life, instead of classics.

We have had in pictures the West, the East, the South, the Cumberland Mountains, the Ghetto, Chinatown, etc. No human picture of any of these has yet failed; but every big success is followed by imitators who use the same locale, a mechanical plot, three hundred and sixty-nine close-ups of some star, etc. The audience falls away, and the exhibitor probably cannot see the difference between the real picture and the mechanical.

To illustrate what is the matter with the movies:

I have been associated with college people all my life, and I have yet to meet the movie professor with the white hair, the benign, childish, helpless smile, the black cape and the flat black cap.

Again: we show to a theater full of ex-

June Mathis

Who wrote the screen versions of "The Four Horsemen," "The Conquering Power" and "Camille."

perienced mechanics in a large seaport a hero shoveling coal into the boiler of a ship at sea. Every mechanic there knows that the apparatus in front of the hero is an old cast iron hot water boiler in the basement of some third class office building.

Again: a hard boiled tart who, ten years ago was telling directors where to get off, tries to convince the audience of her youthful worries over the absence of her chaperone.

Therefore, I believe that the public is tiring of pictures just as it tired of Diamond Dick and E. P. Roe and minstrels.

I believe perfect profiled heroes, and many others, are no longer convincing to the audience.

I believe that as powerful a story could be written about the last cent in a girl's purse or the jackknife of a laboring man, as about "TWO GUN BILL" or "THE DEVIL WOMAN."

Therefore, I believe that the stories which will bring people back to the theaters must be simple, human ones, which are each studies of people by careful, sympathetic students, rather than various combinations of the umpty-six dramatic situations.

Let Mrs. O'Grady see in the picture a girl just like her Katy, with Bill Donovan a-walkin' out with 'er; and let Doctor Van der Puyster, who slips into the movies occasionally, learn an entertaining lesson in humanity from the very convincing film Doctor who, true to life, does so much in his droll way to help the story along.

Let's have some titles like: "YOUR KATY," "MY BOY," "OUR DOCTOR," "THE CHAPERONE," "MY BROTHER'S KEEPER," or any other title that comes right up to our back door and says: "I am your problem. Come and see how I work out!"

It is interesting to see pirates, spectacles, forgotten wars, impossible bad men, salacious "problems," etc.; but aren't we a little tired of such things? Furthermore, most of us doubt if there is in existence a really bad person; aren't they merely defectives and weaklings, or egoistic youngsters who need guiding?

The artist student first learns to draw pictures of classical faces which are mathematically perfect; then he branches out into creative work, expressing his own ideas in individual faces.

The musical student first learns the great compositions, then begins to create along original lines.

The motion pictures have passed through the conventional period of a star 'n a triangle 'n everything. We have established the principle of conflict, of thirty-six basic situations, of thirty-six emotions. We built for a long time on the formula: "Make 'em laugh! Make 'em cry! Make 'em wait!" Now we must proceed to more subtle emotions; our scale must have more than three notes.

When Katy ceases to be the well known and heavily advertised star, but is Katy O'Grady, not by subtitle and announcement, but in character and mannerism, right down to the last detail of buttoning her dress as nobody in the world but Katy would do, then people will come back to the theater to see her.

Recently I overheard at a picture house: "That star must be a pupil of X, the director. He always teaches them to walk that way."

There is our trouble. Better that the character walk pigeon-toed or bowlegged, or any other way that would make her a character, and make her different from any one else in the world.

Writing and acting have been so standardized that the public appears to be tired of both.

Yet Griffith, Pickford and others in advance of their time continue to pack theaters with films which are iconoclastic in their originality. In fact, they have even touched the upper notes at times, and presented material for which the theater public is not yet quite ready.

HELP! HELP!

For the love of Little Rollo, what is it all about? It is whispered that a recent story was turned down by several of the large studios because they were "afraid of the censors!" It had been proclaimed by their own experts, "One of the strongest screen stories that ever passed through the department!"

What a wicked story it must have been! Was it vulgar? Indecent? A sex play? Unpatriotic? A menace to public morals? No! Far worse! It had a MURDER in it! True enough, you didn't see it committed. No one did. It was merely an incident, for the whole plot revolved around the mystery of the murderer's identity, the dramatic, complicating circumstances, and the danger to innocent characters, the murderer being duly unmasked and delivered over to the law at the end.

Wonderful! According to that, we will no longer be compelled to shudder over "Hamlet," "Macbeth," "The Witching Hour," "The Third Degree," and a thousand other evil plays and stories that might incite us to run amuck and commit murder!

Surely even the notorious Pennsylvania censors wouldn't go that far. Doesn't it look as if some producers were getting so scared that they are afraid of their own shadows? Sad to say, the more one toadies to a man of the mentality of the average censor, the more domineering and tryannical

"MY BOY" WILL BE TITLE OF JACKIE'S NEW PICTURE

Jackie Coogan's forthcoming five reel photoplay is an original story, written by Jack Coogan, Sr., and Victor Heerman, Jackie's director, and is entitled "My Boy." Work on the new story has commenced at Brunton studios.

CUMMINGS' STORY FOR GIBSON

"The Badge of Fighting Hearts," by Ralph Cummings, which appeared recently in Short Stories, has been purchased by Universal for Hoot Gibson. Mr. Cummings is also the author of "Where Men Are Men," William Duncan's first seven-reel special, which will soon be released by Vitagraph.

PLAYS TITLE ROLE

Lois Wilson will interpret the title role of "Miss Lulu Betts," the current William de Mille Lasky production.

KINEMA TO RUN HAMILTON-WHITE COMEDIES

The Kinema has contracted with Educational for the entire series of Hamilton-White comedies.

Little Jean O'Rourke has recovered from her recent illness and is back in pictures again.

FILM EXPOSITION LAUNCHED

Active preparations were launched this week for the first annual motion picture industry exhibit, the initial cinema exposition to be staged in America. It will be held in Los Angeles as the capital of the film world, and will be thrown open to the public early in January.

Frank B. Davison, exposition executive, has been chosen director-general of the event by the officers of the Ethical Motion Picture Society of America, who are sponsoring the exhibit.

Already it has received the indorsement of Gov. Stephens of California, Mayor Cryer of Los Angeles, State Corporation Commissioner Bellows, Jonathan S. Dodge, State Bank Superintendent, Ralph L. Criswell, president of the City Council, and R. F. McClellan, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, and the motion picture fraternity in general.

The exposition will give a dignified and comprehensive presentation of the motion picture industry in its relation to the economic, business and social conditions, locally and nationally.

The exhibit will present the motion picture industry from its inception to the present date, and its chief purpose will be to inspire better film standards and thereby lay deeper foundations for the nation's fourth largest industry.

The exposition is to be a non-stock, non-profit institution and no subscriptions or contributions will be authorized or asked. The officers of the Ethical Motion Picture Society of America are Edward S. Langley, art director for Douglas Fairbanks, president; Dr. John T. Thompson, first vice-president; Arthur P. Henderson, treasurer; Charles E. Sibert, executive secretary. The directors include Ray E. Nimmo, former president of the Los Angeles Advertising Club; William J. Palmer, Kimpton Ellis and A. Lincoln Hart.

A suitable site for the exposition will be selected, and as soon as this is decided upon contracts will be let for the erection of the buildings.

The exhibit will be maintained for thirty days, with a different feature attraction for each day.

NEW YORK BUSINESS TRIP

Adeline Alvord, who arranges the screen adaptations for many authors, has left for New York on a business trip. Ada McQuillan, assistant to Mrs. Alvord, will look after her business while she is away.

The chief character role in "The Daughter of Brahma" is to be taken by George Periolat. Mr. Periolat recently returned to the coast from Chicago.

Violet Schram has just finished the lead opposite William Fairbanks in his latest production, an untitled Western.

Jean Carpenter, who played the part of the blind child in Clara K. Young's latest picture, has been signed to play in George Beban's new production.

Foreign Atmosphere

that they missed the true Western atmosphere by a mile. It was not so much the mistake in the props, although these struck us like a wallop in the eye—the ridiculous part about it was in the way they acted and carried themselves.

If that film could be exhibited here in Hollywood to an audience of our motion picture producers, directors and stars (with reserved seats for the technical staffs), I believe that it would produce the biggest laugh of the year, but by that very token it might serve as a valuable object lesson. The inevitable thought would come to some that it might behoove us to stop laughing for a moment at their well-meant, but grotesque, efforts to picture us, and see if the shoe doesn't fit the other foot. What about our foreign settings, props, costumes, action? In this day of better pictures, of higher aims, of splendid efforts towards the truth and art on the screen, what about a correct atmosphere in our productions when it comes to anything foreign? May not some of our biggest and most praiseworthy efforts and our most costly productions lose a part of their value by inaccurate work along these lines?

Since my return to this country, after many years' residence abroad, I have had some "wallops in the eye" that recall vividly the impressions of that French attempt to picture us. I have often experienced a real sense of loss when a splendid picture suddenly robs me of all illusion of reality by some careless foreign work. Without mentioning any names, why does ————picture to us a castle, the like of which never existed in France or anywhere else in Europe? How came it that ————kissed his mother on the lips, when the original of the character never did that in his whole life? How could————kneel in prayer before the statue of the Virgin Mary without crossing herself? Why should————'s war zone refugees look as though they were all dolled up for a Sunday School picnic? Why does ————'s village look as though it must have been constructed by someone who got his European atmosphere standing on the Brooklyn Bridge and watching the ships come in?

These are just a few random instances, but the problem goes far beyond that sort of thing. There seems to be a feeling in some quarters that all the foreign atmosphere that is needed has been secured if the actor knows how to kiss the lady's hand and occasionally make a sort of jack-knife bow. The real difficulty, however, comes in picturing the action in little, simple things, such as a Bavarian peasant walking across a field. The problem of the English butler with his "uniform" and side whiskers is one for the kindergarten class, but it takes more than a good guesser to picture a French workingman eating his midday meal.

It must not be forgotten that our country is the melting pot for millions of foreign born, and that our audiences are largely made up of them and their direct descendants. Among those present will also be a scattering of the boys who were "over there," and there will be some, like myself, who have lived and worked and played long enough abroad to know what's what from every angle. A poor, unreal foreign atmosphere will make many of these feel as though they had a claim at the box office for their entrance fee, while just an occasional slip will annoy them and stick fast in their minds to the detriment of an otherwise great picture.

But in this practical day, and with the international problems of the business coming to the fore, it is becoming more and more important every day for the producer to keep his eye on the foreign market for his pictures. What will South America, or England, or the Continent, think of his foreign atmosphere? What will the foreign rights buyer think of it?

This whole subject is a broader one than appears at first glance. It is closely related to artistic achievement and at the same time to box office receipts. Our productions with foreign settings have been meeting with some scathing ridicule of late in foreign publications. It was recently said that some of our dramas have set all England laughing, and it stands to reason that they will grasp every opportunity to knock us. Nevertheless, we are making splendid progress and doing far better work than the European producers could do if they were as often called upon picture us as we them. The Western and Northern pictures are about the only ones that are exclusively our field. Much of what is left takes us overseas, and in this field we must look to our laurels both at home and abroad.

he becomes, and the only possible way to rid ourselves of such an intolerable, un-American situation, is to fight, and fight, and refuse to compromise.

Fortunately we can still write a screen story (unless a contrary ruling comes out within the next few days), and thrill our audiences with the gripping mystery of, "Who Slapped Little Rollo on the Wrist?," but, unfortunately, although some fearless producer might take a chance on it, the "dere peepul" won't pay their hard-earned money to see such mush.

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer

Glen Cedar Ranch,
Burbank, Calif.

My dear, dear Nephew:

What in the world have you been eating lately? Such a bilious letter. It sounds to me very much like cucumbers and ice cream. If this prescription doesn't do any good, I'll send my veterinary over. He brought that little pinto you like so well through as bad a case of colic as I ever saw.

First of all, I want to admit the truth of several of your statements, but I don't agree with the position you take. You say photographers do not receive as much recognition and publicity as others responsible for a production. That their salary is not in comparison with other members of the staff and cast. That you haven't been able to locate your Toggenburg for the last week because the star doesn't like her close-ups, the director worked three days and nights in succession, and the production manager wants sharper photography. You also imply that the term cameraman does not seem dignified enough, and you wind up by asking if I don't think you would be more successful as a director. Young man, if you weren't a relative, I wouldn't prescribe in this case at all. But as these letters are supposed to be from a self-made cameraman to his nephew, I suppose I have got to say something.

I don't like the name cameraman any better than you do. I would rather be called a photographer because there are fewer of them than there are cameramen. But Great Scott, what's in a name any how? A train is operated by a dispatcher, a conductor, and an engineer, sometimes called an engineman. Most anyone will admit that the engineman has considerable to do with getting the train to its destination. While all the men who produce motion pictures will not agree with us, the cameraman also has considerable to do with getting a picture to its destination. And when the last title is in and the label is on the box, we find that we are shy a little gray matter and a few hairs along with the rest of 'em. To my mind the photographer takes just as much interest, has just as much responsibility and works just as hard as anyone else. He is ambitious and feels that he is an exponent of one of the great arts. Publicity—recognition. One can be bought and the other is bound to come in time. Not from the producer perhaps, but from the public.

Artistic lighting, pleasing composition, proper exposure on the one hand and lack of them on the other constitute the sole difference between good and bad photography. The demand for good photography is sure to increase, and so will additions to the "sock." Money is very necessary these days, but when you work, work hard. Give 'em two hundred dollar photography if your only getting a hundred. Be proud to be a photographer. Take pride in your work, and don't spend any time looking or listening for some kind of a reward. If the star or director gets temperamental, its no reason why you should. You would be fired if you did. They say that to be an artist you must be, occasionally at least, temperamental. Personally I don't take any stock in it. It usually indicates a lack of ability.

If you are sure you want to give up your art, why you might as well take up directing as any other profession. You might make more money. Out in Iowa, Illinois or Missouri when the folks read on the screen that the director was so and so, they think it refers to one of the directors of the corporation which produced the picture. Its a great thing, boy, to be able to make beautiful pictures, animated or still, but if I was "Mother O'Mine" is an Associated Producers release.

"FOR THOSE WE LOVE"

California

Another Betty Compson starring vehicle is released locally this week. It is one of the several that she made independently for Goldwyn distribution prior to her Paramount contract, and it was directed by Arthur Rosson. The story, by Perley Poore Sheehan, is a more or less draggy, sentimental chronicle of the misfortunes of a small town family. It is neither cheerful enough for hot weather enjoyment nor sufficiently startling to render its tragedy enthralling.

However, it includes some very artistic photography, although the solt focus may be said to have been a little overdone. Unfortunately there is an inexcusable amount of repetition in the subtitles that detracts from the entertainment value.

The cast is probably the best thing about "For Those We Love," which, by the way, contains no star part worthy the name. Miss Compson plays a straight ingenue, Berenice Arnold, in the story. The girl has sympathy merely through the fact that her motives are misunderstood and her troubles many. She does nothing very courageous and has no important love interest. Even her footage is no more pronounced than is that of several other characters. The part does nothing for Miss Compson; it is not even particularly suitable.

Trix Ulner, a "hard boiled," but exceedingly human gambler, is very appealing in Lon Chaney's hands. This performer's characterizations never miss, no matter what their natures.

Walter Morosco plays a minor part, Johnny Fletcher, which is nevertheless the juvenile lead. He completely fails to recognize the several opportunities that he is allowed in his action, and insists upon playing incessantly over his left shoulder or rather through it. In exactly three shots did we locate his fully revealed face. Evidently inexperience occasioned this diffidence.

A really clever juvenile heavy is accomplished by Richard Rosson who plays Jimmy Arnold, a weakling. He uses his eyes skillfully and is ever alert for his points.

Harry Duffield in the role of the Arnold father, is well cast, as are Camille Astor in Vida, Frank Campeau as Frank, and Bert Woodruff who does Dr. Bailee. An exceptionally good bit of characterization must be credited to George Cooper, who is seen as Bert, a tramp.

Outside of the cast, "For Those We Love," has little to recommend an enthusiastic reception by the public.

May We Criticise the Critics?

It was recently our extreme misfortune to witness a first night showing of an extraordinarily poor production, the output of, however, one of our foremost picture-making companies. It was a dull, uninteresting effort in the farce direction that failed to produce one general laugh throughout its first performance. It was, therefore, a failure from the audience's standpoint; while, when we reproached them for their careless creation, members of its producing staff openly pronounced it a frightful "miss," the least of which said, the better.

And from the pens of the critics? Ah! That was different. Our various reviewers of the daily and trade press insisted, as is pretty much a habit with them, that our unhappy experience was "full of amusing situations that should prove a good summer attraction," that it was "a refreshing, human, good entertainment," "thoroughly satisfactory," etc. Even a more illustrious journal, which boasts as its slogan Ben Franklin's famous remark, "pardoning the bad is injuring the good," justified this particular UN-pardonable by labeling it "good entertainment" and offering it generously to all exhibitors.

What are we then to think of these discerning lights whose monotonous commendation guides the poor trusting to their entertainment and grief? There is, indeed, much to think of their capacities, and several angles of their surrounding limitations to consider before we attempt in justice to place the blame of their stereotyped falsifications.

Of course, it must be realized that the ordinary dramatic critic has the almost impossible to contend with. His employers refuse, in many cases, to allow him free range in his reviews, due to the fact that promiscuous "roasting" is altogether likely to drive out of their paper's columns highly profitable advertising from, in the case of the local newspaper, the theatres presenting the thus favored material, and in the instance of the trade weekly, the distributors of the pictures. General praise is therefore held to be an excellent business policy, no matter what its reaction upon a disillusioned public. The higher ups are willing to gamble, as they have since time immemorial, upon that dear public's tendency to believe implicitly all that it sees in print. And perhaps they are correct, at least, in great measure; for despite disillusionments four out of five of the gullibles return for more, although we can't believe they finish the phrase by "liking it;" besides which, there is always the other one.

Probably a more logical reason why our reviewers get off on the wrong foot, so to speak, with their criticisms, however, is that even if they were always accorded full swing in their departments, only a very small per cent would recognize an inferior picture if it were met face to face. This is proven by the fact that, given one the merit of which is questionable, they will almost invariably commence by worrying its corners or details, and complete the painful process by dodging the issue in a seeming panic at the idea of self-commission. There is much cleverness among our newspaper circles, but it does not follow that the most proficient reporter understands the drama, characterization, or even screen proportion. It might be a timely addition to hazard that neither does the office boy, in whom the authority to judge has been known to have been invested.

Far more stringent requirements for the picture education of the individuals who aspire to these positions should be in existence, for besides the material harm to any paper, resultant of the already mentioned mistrust, even disgust, created at least in some portion of the public's mind by deliberate misstatements, there are, especially with regard to the local situation, other considerations.

If the mediocre and more unworthy hangers on in this industry are to receive equally as much press attention as our sincere artists, the picture business is being injured materially, for due to even such passing influences, we will be longer in ridding our circles of the debris which seems inevitably present in all young institutions, while it is scarcely encouraging to the deserving workers that their reward for effort should be coached in stock phrases setting forth "the same old thing" that anyone might have had.

When our critics are generally reliable and trained in that which they attempt; when they can say with justification, "Your work is good; yours, inexcusable;" an advancement will have taken place which today is scarcely imaginable.—F. R.

"The Three Musketeers"

Mission

The much heralded and long anticipated Douglas Fairbanks screen presentation of Alexandre Dumas' "The Three Musketeers," has arrived for the edification of Los Angeles' entertainment seekers and literary specialists, and it is here to be fairly proclaimed among the year's best, in addition to which it marks the greatest height yet reached by the costume play. Doug's fans will instantly recognize it as incomparably superior to "The Mark of Zorro," which they hailed so enthusiastically a while back, and his professional brothers will see in it a magnificent achievement for which its creator's extreme generosity to his superb cast has been largely responsible.

Edward Knoblock's adaptation of the charming old work is ideal, and we can point to no one who could have accomplished its direction with as much art and grace as has Fred Niblo, whose supreme work it is. Excellent photography by Robert Edeson completes the technical perfection of this masterpiece.

All of the performers judge cleverly the liberties at their disposal in these wonderful old French court characters, and claim them delightfully in a manner which,

Film Capital Production Notes

NORMA TALMADGE BEGINS "SMILIN' THROUGH"

Norma Talmadge has started production on "Smilin' Through," in which she will play the part which Jane Cowl interpreted on the speaking stage. Sidney A. Franklin is directing Miss Talmadge in this play by Allen Langdon Martin, which was picturized by James Ashmore Creelman and Mr. Franklin.

Harrison Ford will be seen in support of the star.

FINIS FOX TO FEATURE LIVINGSTON

Jack Livingston is to be featured by the Finis Fox Productions in a series of five-reel Northwestern stories to be written and directed by Mr. Fox. Ethel Shannon, George Cummings and Kitty Bradbury will have prominent parts in the cast of the first picture.

Associated with Mr. Fox are Jack Livingston, George Cummings, Anthony Kornman and Thomas J. Smeddick.

NEW YORK PRESENTATION FOR FERBER STORY

"No Woman Knows," Tod Browning's Universal-Jewel production of Edna Ferber's novel, "Fanny Herself," is scheduled for a Broadway run, beginning September 4th in the Central Theatre, Broadway and Forty-Seventh Street, and will be followed by "Foolish Wives," the von Stroheim production recently completed at Universal City.

DE MAUPASSANT STORY PATHE RELEASE

Pathe has selected Guy de Maupassant's "The Orderly," picturized in France, for release in this country.

Among those playing the leading characters are K. Kolas, Mme. Nathalie Kovanko, Russian artist, and Paul Hubert.

The date of release will be announced shortly.

RAY AGAIN DIRECTING

Charles Ray is personally directing his latest photoplay, "The Deuce of Spades," assisted by Al Ray. This Van Loan story was adapted for the screen by Richard Andres.

PACIFIC FILM CO. NOTES

T. E. Hancock, one of the executive heads of the Pacific Film Co., has arrived at the studios, after an absence of seven months in the east, with a contract which calls for fifty-two single-reel comedies during the year. These are being filmed one each week, with George Ovey and Vernon Dent as the alternating stars. Milton H. Fahney is directing.

George Silcox, special representative for the Pacific Film Co., is on his way to New York, where he will superintend releases for his producing units.

NEW WESTERNS

Madoc Productions has secured Dixie Baine for its series of twenty-six two-reel westerns.

The first story will be "The Rose of the West," written by Mr. Devere, and which will be directed by Wayne Mack, assisted by Devere.

"Snub" Pollard began production recently on a new comedy as yet untitled.

RAWLINSON STARTS

Herbert Rawlinson will start on his first Universal starring vehicle this week, with Jack Conway directing.

In accord with his determination to eliminate useless expense for film production, Reginald Barker will prepare the continuity and arrange all production details before casting his first independent picture, which will soon be under production.

Robert Brunton, head of the Brunton studios, has returned from an automobile trip through the northern part of the State.

AT LASKY'S

George Melford is engaged in cutting his production, "The Sheik," featuring Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino.

Gloria Swanson is expected to begin work on Clara Beranger's original story, "The Husband's Trademark," which Sam Wood will direct and Thompson Buchanan supervise. Lorna Moon wrote the scenario.

Ethel Clayton is working under Paul Powell's direction in "The Cradle," by Eugene Brieux, which Olga Printzlau arranged for the screen.

Agnes Ayres is preparing to begin work under the direction of Victor Fleming on Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Lane That Had No Turning." This has been adapted to the screen by Sir Gilbert Parker, and Eugene Mullin and Rollin Sturgeon will supervise.

AT REALART

Mary Miles Minter is working on the opening scenes of her forthcoming picture under the direction of Frank Urson.

Wanda Hawley has started work on a production from an original story as yet untitled, the scenario of which has been prepared by Percy Heath. Thomas N. Heffron will direct.

AT GOLDWYN

The photography of "Grand Larceny" will be finished presently under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Rowland V. Lee is completing the final scenes of "His Back Against the Wall," featuring Raymond Hatton.

PARAMOUNT ENLARGES STAFF

Latest to desert metropolitan newspaper offices for the motion picture studio are Tom McNamara of Skinny Shaner fame, and Clive Weed, formerly cartoonist of the New York Evening Sun and other papers.

McNamara and Weed are now on the staff of Paramount.

TO DISTRIBUTE FOR INDEPENDENTS

That Vitagraph will distribute productions for independent producers is the announcement made by W. S. Smith, general manager of the West Coast studios.

MORE FEATURE PRODUCTIONS FOR BRUNTON

M. C. Levee, vice-president and business manager of the Robert Brunton studios, has left for New York to arrange contracts for feature productions to be made on the Brunton lot.

IRVIN V. WILLAT TO WORK AT GOLDWYN

The new Irvin V. Willat studio at Culver City is closed, Mr. Willat having completed his contract for W. W. Hodkinson.

Goldwyn has engaged Willat to direct a Chinese mystery story from the pen of Gouverneur Morris.

DUNCAN ON NEW ONE

William Duncan and Edith Johnson have completed arrangements for the making of "The Come Back," a J. Raleigh Davies story, in which they will co-star.

Willie Mae Carson is playing opposite "Ranger Bill" Miller in his latest Northwest Mounted Police story, nearing completion.

Current Reviews

"FOOTLIGHTS"

Grauman's

Stories of the fairy world of make-believe that is called the stage, are always fascinating things to absorb, whether they appear before one on the printed page or across the silver sheet. Because, due to humanity's dramatic instinct, this is a fact, Paramount's screen version of Rita Weiman's "Footlights" is bound to prove more beguiling than several of Elsie Ferguson's recent starring vehicles. Another point in this production's favor is that by treating of the success of a little New Englander who, after a discouraging vaudeville apprenticeship, becomes, in a moment, as it were, an elaborate foreign artiste, it necessarily provides many legitimate opportunities for the utilization of the emotionalism which is strictly "of" its star. If there ever was an ideal role for an actress to play it must be the actress that she is or knows as herself. Ferguson here is beautifully situated. The slight exaggerations which so many every day Americans have adversely criticized in her work are more than justified—they are requisite. As the ambitious child heart, Lizzie Parsons, she is convincing; as the exotic Liza Parsinova, she is superb in a demeanor that will both amuse and delight the professional probably more than any other. She should do more of such work and she should have oftener such sensitive directors as John Robertson, the man who guided "Sentimental Tommy" to the celluloid. As might be anticipated, he displays his excellent sense of proportion again in this picture. Without overstepping the drama's bounds, he yet spends unsparingly, when and where it is needed, much wholesome comedy. He has watched his production's technique carefully and as a result he has a more than interesting piece of work to which Ray Overbaugh's photography has added a good finishing touch.

Chief in Ferguson's support is Marc McDermott, who does not, however, play the sympathetic male lead. All of this actor's finesse which we have so long admired goes into his creation of Oswold Kane, a theatrical producer to whom art is the ultimate. Without being played heavily at all, Kane probably controls the opposition. The utmost in an atmosphere of refinement, subtlety and world wisdom is won by McDermott for the character.

Probably it is the story arrangement that is to blame for the lack of appeal which surrounds Reginald Denny's juvenile, Brette Page. The young fellow himself neglects nothing that is allowed him but he isn't played up for much sympathy. At that, one half of the audience will never realize its absence and the other half will not require it.

Octavia Handworth in a maid part strengthens the opposing forces and completes the list of more important players.

Adolph Zukor presents this Eastern made Famous Players-Lasky production.

"BEATING THE GAME"

California

Much more successful than his recent comedy sallies in the great campaign for public favor is Tom Moore's "Beating the Game," a Charles Kenyon photoplay just released by Goldwyn. Being a story of a hypocritical crook who sells himself the "honesty" idea which he has been preaching to others with an ulterior motive, this is a comedy drama that will entertain the most exacting, while proving a knockout to the average fan. Provided as it is with at least three novel twists, all of which are handled in a cleverly disguised manner that may be depended upon to disclose to very few the outcome of the plot, "Beating the Game" gains commendation for its director, Victor Schertzinger. It holds many a good laugh but its serious thread is stout enough to maintain a genuine interest throughout the unreeling of the play.

Jane Starr

Who is playing Dolly Demere, the vaudeville actress in "Danger Ahead" at the Superba Theatre. Miss Starr is now under the management of John Lancaster.

"Fancy" Charlie, a nimble-fingered thief, who undertakes an honest man's position for a six month's space only to become exceedingly attached to it, is full of precocious possibilities for the jauntily Irish Moore. This popular performer's agreeable personality has rarely had better material with which to lightly work for sympathy. As has been inferred, the entire thing contrasts happily with his recent offerings.

Opposite the star in the role of Nellie Brown, a naive village maiden, plays a very delightful young woman, Hazel Daly, who, as is evident throughout her footage, expended as much intellect upon this simple role and its comparatively few points as she would have used in dispatching one with three times its weight. There is much in promise for those who give their best unstintingly to whatever piece of business happens at hand.

Dick Rosson, in another weakling heavy, Ben Fanchette, is a good touch to this story of crooks and others; while De Witt Jennings in C. B. Lawson, the plot's enigma man, is responsible for two or three near-thrills.

"Slipper" Jones, Charlie's literal partner in crime, is competently done by Nick Cogley, as are Jules Fanchette and his wife, by Tom Ricketts and Lydia Knott.

Lydia Yeamans Titus and William Orlamond complete the cast.

"Beating the Game's" very pleasing photography is to the credit of Ernest Miller, who has gotten much of interest into his work here.

Eddie Lyons is making his second situation comedy at the Berwilla studios for Arrow release.

"GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE LAW"

Kinema

The Arrow Film Corporation publishes a filmed James Oliver Curwood story entitled "God's Country and the Law," at this time. The statement that this picture is interesting or impressive even in the stereotyped sense is far too much to be responsible for. On the other hand to say that it were insulting to the intellect of the modern cinema audience might be unfair to the intent of those who produced it, and too much to claim for the masses; therefore, it remains only for us to remark that this is an attempt at the "old time thriller," which bears no resemblance to any phase of life as it is, and a tale which is repulsive in many instances. (The villain's advances upon the feminine members of the cast, for example, are too obvious to be especially delicate.) About its only wholesome content is the effective Northwoods scenery, which nevertheless can not redeem the "milled" plot decorated by it. Whatever Chauncy Olcott was doing, with the direction of this film in his hands, we have been unable to discover. It must be said, however, that he didn't make much of a picture. The camera work varies decidedly.

By far the most natural performance in the cast is the one offered by Gladys Leslie in the role of Marie, an impetuous, whimsical child-wife whose world is the forest. Miss Leslie possesses much charm and her character is at least consistent and imaginable.

The brutal heavy, Dore, a whiskey runner, is scarcely that. He is extravagantly done by William H. Tooker, who even approaches the laughable once or twice with the part.

Another melodramatic but apparently well intentioned performer, Fred Jones, enacts Andre, Marie's hot blooded young husband. He is also capable of being rather funny in places.

Cesare Gravina really appears to be in his element as 'Polean, a French gypsy of the north, and he is convincing in the part; as much cannot be claimed for Hope Sutherland who does his half breed daughter. Miss Sutherland is encumbered with as many affectations as she is given footage to display them in.

Truly such pictures, if they must be made, should never be reviewed. It is hard on all concerned.

"WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY"

Symphony

Pathe presents Robert Brunton's production of Rudyard Kipling's East Indian story, "Without Benefit of Clergy," here at this time. This photoplay, although a little draggy in spots, and containing subject matter which is heavier than the public will generally enjoy, we believe, is interesting throughout, and includes some very superior performances.

James Young's careful direction has done much improving on the scenario, which starts off a bit incoherently, and Charles Kauffman and Arthur Todd have provided some good photography.

Virginia Brown Faire is seen in Ameera, the leading feminine role. She is exceptionally human and fundamentally eastern as the little native who ardently loves a white man and their happy babe. Miss Faire gives promise of an unusual screen career.

Thomas Holding, as Ameera's husband and king, John Holden, a construction engineer, is also ample, while a truly beautiful piece of characterization is the achievement of Evelyn Selbie, who portrays the role of

MENJOU IN SCREEN VERSION OF "A TAILOR MADE MAN"

Adolphe Menjou will enact an important role in "A Tailor Made Man," soon to go under production. Mr. Menjou's recent pictures have been "Queenie," with Shirley Mason; "Through the Back Door," with Mary Pickford; "The Three Musketeers," with Douglas Fairbanks, and George Melford's "The Sheik."

IN FARNUM PICTURE

Evelyn Selbie has been engaged by Fox for an important role in Dustin Farnum's forthcoming production. Miss Selbie may now be seen as the Hindu mother in Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy," playing at the Symphony.

NEW COMEDY INGENUE

Buster Keaton will introduce a new ingenue in his next comedy, Sybil Sealey, former bathing girl. Miss Sealey will be remembered as the comedian's leading lady on his advent into stardom more than a year ago.

STANDING SUPPORTS TALMADGE

Wyndham Standing has been chosen to enact one of the principal roles in "Smilin' Through," the current Norma Talmadge production.

MARYLAND MORNE JOINS WALSH'S CAST

R. A. Walsh, producing Peter B. Kyne's novel, "Kindred of the Dust," has selected Maryland Morne for an important role. Recently Miss Morne interpreted the role of Ariel in the outdoor production of Shakespeare's "The Tempest" in the Hollywood Bowl.

Art Lee has completed his engagement with the Ferdinand Earle Productions.

Max Linder is giving his new picture, "Be My Wife," another cutting at the Goldwyn studio.

Wade Boteler has been given a part in "His Back Against the Wall," under production at Goldwyn.

William E. Keefe, formerly with Geo. Kern Productions, has moved his offices to the Brunton lot.

Billy Eugene McClellan is at present playing "Jim" in "The Wall Flower," which E. Mason Hopper is directing for Goldwyn.

Starke Patterson is supporting May McAvoy in "The Morals of Marcus," under William Taylor's direction at Lasky's.

Tom Kennedy has been engaged by Hamilton-White Comedies, Inc., to support Lloyd Hamilton in his latest two-reeler for Educational.

Fanny Stockridge has been added to the cast of "The Wall Flower," in which Elliott Dexter and Claire Windsor have the leading roles.

Gus Leonard, Bert Offord and William Courtright are among those cast in "The Deuce of Spades," Charles Ray's present production.

INGRAM CAST COMPLETE

With the selection of Betty Allen for a part in "Turn to the Right," Rex Ingram has completed the cast for his new Metro production.

Henry Hebert has been cast as the heavy in "The Come Back," a forthcoming Vitagraph production co-starring Wm. Duncan and Edith Johnson.

Sidney D'Albrook is at present playing Archie Warner, the juvenile lead, in Peter B. Kyne's "Motion to Adjourn," a Ben Wilson production.

Marjorie Prevost has been engaged to enact one of the principal roles in Charles Ray's forthcoming picture entitled "The Deuce of Spades."

Rush Hugh, Dana Todd and Emily Rait are cast in "The Wall Flower," the Rupert Hughes story which E. Mason Hopper is directing for Goldwyn.

Frank E. Berier, Xavier Muchado, Paul Detlefoen and Flora Smith are artists associated with Mr. Earle in the filming of his "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

Josa Melville, Eva Lewis, Ernest Butterworth and Jack House are among those cast in the untitled two-reel Western being filmed by the Madoc Productions at Kean's Camp.

William Christy Cabanne, Robertson-Cole director, is working in the East on "The Barricade," from the novel by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, author of "The Wonder Man."

Bebe Daniels gave an informal dinner dance recently for Nina Wilcox Putnam, authoress. Among those present were Harold Lloyd, Lila Lee, May Allison, Adela Rogers St. John and Edward Martindale.

Three-year-old Muriel Frances Dana, "Cupid" in "Mother O' Mine," and who appeared in person recently at the Kinema Theatre, has been chosen for an important part in "White Hands," a Max Grafe production being filmed in San Francisco.

The Screen Writers' Forum —Conducted by William E. Wing

HOW COME?

A one-act play adapted from the notorious work entitled: "Watcha Done to My Story?"

(The curtain rises disclosing a studio editor's office. As usual it is set with a battered, wooden table, soap-box seats and a receptacle on the floor containing sawdust. A faint odor of mingled chewing tobacco and cloves is to be detected. A medley of writing and editing persons, both male and otherwise, hang around limply and spoof each other, awaiting the arrival of the Big Chief.)

Bingem (He of the horn-rim glasses): "Well, what are we here for? The boss sure done a fine job pulling me away from my continuity when I only got a month to grind it out. Gee! How can a gink with my temp'rament do good work when I'm interrupted all the time?"

Alys (It was "Alice" when she was a school teacher): "And my reading; O dear! It does break into one's higher thought to be forced to lay down one's story, just as one's visualization is at its height."

Rumble (he always does): "You two certainly have been handled rough. I agree that you should not have been sent for."

Bingem and Alys (simultaneously): "Just what do you mean by that?"

Rumble (grinning): "Nothing; merely nothing."

(They are interrupted as the Big Chief crawls in at a side window, well out of breath. He has made a sneaky exit from his auto in the back alley, has scaled the studio fence and wormed his way by devious routes to his office, in order to escape the gate man, shine boy, janitor, extras, actors and others who are laying for him with their daily scenarios.)

Big Chief (pantingly): "Well, let us get down to business. Miss Smyth, read the story we are to consider today."

Alys (it used to be Smith): "You told me to write a brief synopsis."

Chief: "Well, let's hear it."

Alys (rustling herself and paper a little): "John Mitchell, King of Wall street, enters library—finds safe open—dead man lying in front safe—calls Bryce, detective, and they look at body—it is long-absent, wayward son of Mitchell—boy, on downward path, has sneaked in, opened safe—found it was his own father's—streak of manhood flares and son kills himself to propitiate the honor of the family name."

Chief: "Well; proceed."

Alys (a little indignantly): "That's all."

Rumble: "Haw! Haw!"

Chief (sharply): "Why the merriment, Mr. Rumble? Miss Smyth's synopsis is quite satisfactory."

Rumble (still laughing): "I meant no offense to Miss Smyth. I was just wondering what fat-head wrote this ancient, trite, dyspeptic—"

Alys (interrupting scornfully): "I want you to understand, Mr. Rumble, that the story was the work of one of our most eminent authors."

Bingem (recovering from his daze): "Why, er, we did that story in the old Bio., although there was more meat to it. We put it on in one reel. Motorman wrote it, as I remember."

Jimmy Aubrey

Chief (snappily): "That will be all. This is the story we are going to do. It is one of the Ten best stories of the year, selected by a national committee of note." (Rather aside.) "Anyway, the author's name ought to put it over. Now come on with your suggestions."

Alys (who has sat up most of the night to dope it out): "It has just occurred to me that we might open it with a gorgeous sunrise in the high Rockies. The silent places, you know; God's own altar and all of that, representing the dawn of life; purity."

Bingem (excitedly): "I got it! I got it! We'll open it up fast and furious. Iris in with the Kid—old man's son, you know—in the rocks, wearing mask, silhouetted as it were, working two fast Colts against a posse. That is the stuff the people want now."

Chief (trying to work out a think himself): "It seems to me—"

Rumble (interrupting): "If you'll excuse me, Chief, I wish to make a suggestion. Let's make the Wall street king a lumber jack and let his erring son return just in time to save the judge's daughter from the break of a log-jam. You see the judge would put the kid on probation and the girl would conclude his regeneration."

Alys (nose getting red): "I thought I was called away from my very important work to have a part in this conference."

Bingem (without noticing): "If we could adopt Rumble's suggestion, but switch the father to the role of a Gypsy chief, I know of some good stuff the motorman put in his story. It was—"

Chief: "Never mind the motorman's story, Mr. Bingem. We are considering fiction written by a very famous author now. Miss Smyth, I will ask for your suggestions."

Alys: "I cannot agree with you men at all. I think we should begin with the girl we are going to put in the story. Let her come from a convent, all unsophisticated, and meet up with some big, strong man who causes her almost to be afraid. In the end let her grow into the masterful role while the man—representing all mankind—"

Rumble: "Haw! Haw! Excuse me, I was thinking of a funny story that Elmer Harris told me yesterday."

Chief (showing sudden interest): "That so? Let's—that is, I think we have discussed the synopsis sufficiently. I will now excuse you, Miss Smyth."

(Alys rises, dabs some powder on her nose, feels of her back hair and exits.)

Chief (eagerly): "Well, come on with the story."

(Rumble begins the story to sneaky music and a slow curtain)—

AND WHEN—

When the story is ready for filming, it is announced under the title of "He Loved Her So," adapted from the famous novel, "The Storm."

The story now runs somewhat after this fashion:

A wood chopper and his wife have a beautiful daughter. She is the one rare and beautiful flower among the rough people of that mountainous section. None but the chopper and his wife know that the girl is not their daughter, but was left in the hollow of a tree, when an infant, to be taken home by the honest toiler.

It has been their life worry that someone might come to deprive them of the darling they have learned to love. A youthful woodchopper, named Tom King, a handsome, stalwart youth, loves the girl.

But, one day, a whirring is heard on the breezes and a beautiful airplane slips from the sky and alights near the cabin.

Of course a handsome city youth steps from the plane. Then he and the beautiful but breathless maiden are confronting each other. Besides these characters, the story also carries two aunts, a gruff, eccentric uncle, a Chinaman comedy relief, a villain and 48 extras.

Such trifles in the original story as the Wall street king; the wayward son; the busted safe; the heroic suicide, have been cut out.

Has it ever happened to you?

Well, mustn't let little things like that disturb you.

"WIFE AGAINST WIFE" RELEASED

Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announces that it has acquired the distribution right and will release on September 12th, Whitman Bennett's personally supervised production, "Wife Against Wife," adapted to the screen from George Broadhurst's stage play, "The Price," in which Pauline Stark, Percy Marmont, and Emily Fitzroy play the leading roles.

"Wife Against Wife" was scenarized by Dorothy Farnum and photographed by Ernest Haller.

Pickups By the Staff

CLIFFORD ROBERTSON OPENS INDEPENDENT CASTING OFFICE

Clifford Robertson, after four years as casting director for Goldwyn, has tendered his resignation to that organization, which same will take effect at the expiration of his contract on September first. Mr. Robertson will assume similar duties with the newly organized firm of Robertson & Webb, in which he is partner with Eugene Webb, Jr., president of the Culver City Commercial and Savings Bank. Clarke Irvine, publicity director, is also associated with the new company.

This new outfit will do casting directly for studios and independent producers, both here and in New York, transferring players east and west as needed. In addition, management of stars and directors, representation for authors, extensive exploitation, and general film management will be undertaken.

AFFILIATED PICTURE INTERESTS PLAN GET-TOGETHER DINNERS

Prominent clergymen, business and professional men will be invited to foregather at a series of dinners planned for a better mutual understanding, through a move made by the Board of Directors of the Affiliated Picture Interests at the Los Angeles Athletic Club recently.

Arrangements for the first of the dinners were placed in the hands of a committee, of which Glenn Harper and Ted Taylor are members. Further details will be announced soon.

GOLDWYN FOSTERS SCENARIO CONTEST

The Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, in cooperation with a Chicago daily newspaper, has inaugurated a moving picture scenario contest, national in its scope, at the close of which will be awarded $30,000 in prizes to the writers of the thirty-one best scenarios entered.

Goldwyn will produce the prize winning scenario as a big special production. The contest will close November 1st.

The judges will be Samuel Goldwyn, D. W. Griffith, Charles Chaplin, Norma Talmadge, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Rupert Hughes, Gertrude Atherton, Gouverneur Morris and Amy Leslie.

ARBUCKLE'S LATEST FOR GRAUMAN'S ANNUAL PARAMOUNT WEEK

In honor of the fourth annual Paramount week, beginning September 5th, Sid Grauman will present Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle in the national premiere of "Gasoline Gus," adapted from the Saturday Evening Post stories, "Drycheck Charlie" and "Gasoline Gus," by George Patullo.

Lila Lee, who has appeared opposite Mr. Arbuckle in his two last Paramount pictures, "The Dollar a Year Man" and "Crazy to Marry," will be seen in a like position in this picture.

IN PREPARATION

Clara Beranger leaves for New York presently where she will prepare William De Mille's next production following the one now in work, after which she will return to the Lasky studio.

Maj. David Kirkland has written the screen version of Myrtle Reed's story, "The Sign of the Jack o' Lantern," which Lloyd Ingraham will direct as a forthcoming feature.

STAGE ENGAGEMENT FOR SALISBURY

Monroe Salisbury, before he starts his second independent production, will play a short stage engagement in San Francisco.

Edward Peil

KEATON FOIL ON VACATION

After playing opposite Buster Keaton in five of his starring vehicles, Virginia Fox is en route to Pittsburgh, where she plans to vacation. Miss Fox will return to the Keaton fold at the conclusion of her Eastern trip.

JACKSON DRAMA FOR VAUDEVILLE

Arrangements are being made for a vaudeville tour of "The Retake," a one-act drama by Jos. A. Jackson, with a motion picture star featured. "The Retake" recently had a showing at the California Theater.

LOS ANGELES SCHUBERT-CURRAN THEATRE

The Shubert-Curran theatre interests will start building a half-million dollar house here this fall at Fifth and Olive, facing Pershing Square.

Les Bates, playing heavies in Joe Rock Comedies, has returned recently from Catalina locations.

"My Boy," starring Jackie Coogan, will have three principal characters and will go to the screen in full five-reel form.

Director Frank Lloyd and family have sailed for Honolulu on a thirty-day vacation. Mr. Lloyd recently completed "The Sin Flood" for Goldwyn.

Clark Comstock has returned from location at Glacier National Park with the Flathead Productions, which is making "Rough Bark Le Noir," featuring Art Staton.

Announcement comes that C. B. de Mille's film, "The Affairs of Anatol," has been passed by the Chicago Board of Censors. Good for the Chicago censors!

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

HELENE CAVERLY

Helene Caverly commenced her dramatic career with the Crescent Stock Company in Brooklyn, with which organization she played ingenues for several years.

Her picture debut occurred on our coast in a Lasky picture, which was followed by several for that concern.

This actress, who later played with May Allison in "Extravagance," and Bill Hart in "Travelin' On," is now supporting Mary Philbin in a Universal production.

There is always room in this business for clever newcomers.

NEW POLICY FOR CLUNE'S

W. H. Clune will inaugurate a new policy in connection with his Clune's Broadway Theater, starting September 3rd, when he will offer Nell Shipman's latest production, "The Girl from God's Country."

Under the new program, arrangements have also been made whereby Mr. Clune will secure first release of the F. B. Warren productions, which include screen plays directed by Lois Weber, Reginald Barker, Victor Schertzinger, Lambert Hillyer, and others.

"Hamilton-White Night" will be celebrated at the Venice Ballroom September 9th, in honor of the company's bathing girls, who won first and second prizes in the annual bathing suit parade held at the beach city recently. The hall will be appropriately decorated, and a program is being arranged by the beach management.

Mrs. Ben Hopkins, of Denver, is at the Hollywood Hotel for a short stay.

Earle Williams has returned from a two weeks' sojourn at Catalina. Mr. Williams recently finished production of "Lucky Carson."

Lois Zellner has completed the continuity of Jackie Coogan's "My Boy," and is preparing an original screen story soon to be filmed.

Frank Smith, assistant manager of Vitagraph, and his brother, Steve Smith, cameraman, have returned from a hunting trip in Northern California.

"The Vagrant" and "For Land's Sake," Mermaid Comedies, are scheduled for an early showing at the Kinema, this theater having contracted for the entire series.

Virginia Adair is playing opposite Big Boy Williams in "The Curse of the Timberland," the third production of the Charles R. Seeling Productions, Inc., to be released thru the Aywon Film Corp. of New York City.

Production Notes

"MY LADY O' THE PINES," NEW HOLMAN DAY TWO-REEL DRAMA.

"My Lady o' the Pines" is the latest of the Holman Day stories of the Maine woods to reach the screen, and has been scheduled for release by Pathe September 11th. Mr. Day supervised the production which was directed by Philip Carle. The title role is played by Mary Astor, winner of a recent beauty contest; and Huntley Gordon plays the leading masculine role.

ROACH SHIPMENTS

Recent New York shipments from the Hal E. Roach Studios include Harold Lloyd's latest three reeler, "Don't Weaken;" "Snub" Pollard's "On Location;" and other Roach comedies, including "Fifteen Minutes," "Law and Order," "Hocus Pocus" and "The Pickanninny;" also the sixth and seventh episodes of Ruth Roland's serial, "White Eagle."

KINEMA THEATRE ANNOUNCES NEW POLICY

The West Coast Theaters, Inc., states that their first-run house, the Kinema Theater, will not hereafter confine its screen presentations to the First National program alone, but will run the output of various other distributors.

Among these bookings are the W. K. Ziegfeld feature, "The Black Panther's Cub," starring Florence Reed, and the Warner Bros.' release, "Schooldays," featuring Wesley Barry.

JOHN BOWERS ENTERS YACHT RACE

Arrangements are being made for the race around Catalina Island for the Commodore Putnam Cup of the Newport Yacht Club. Among the contestants will be John Bowers, Goldwyn leading man, owner of the Uncas.

ONLY ONE UNIVERSAL STARRING PICTURE

Lon Chaney, of "The Miracle Man," "The Penalty," "Outside the Law," etc., denies the report that he is to star in a series of pictures for the Universal Company. Mr. Chaney has been engaged by that company for one picture only, owing to the fact that he is arranging to appear in other productions, and is also considering proposals to head his own company.

EASTERN TRIP

Roy L. Manker, Vice-President of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, left recently for Chicago and New York, where he will confer with national book and magazine publishers—and complete arrangements for branch offices.

"PINCHED," RE-ISSUED HAROLD LLOYD COMEDY

"Pinched" is the next re-issued one-reel Harold Lloyd comedy which has been selected by Pathe for release presently. Bebe Daniels plays opposite Lloyd, and "Snub" Pollard, featured in Hal Roach comedies, is his running mate in the offering.

NEW "U" SALES HEAD

Charles Rosenzweig, heretofore sales manager for Jewel and features in the Big "U" (New York) branch exchange of the Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., has been made General Sales Manager, and hereafter will have complete charge of the Universal sales force in the New York territory.

STEWART DIRECTOR UNANNOUNCED

Anita Stewart will return to Los Angeles around October 1st, to begin "Rose O' The Sea," for First National. Miss Stewart's director has not yet been chosen.

ACTORS DISCARDING DERBY BONNET IN AUTO

"The automobile is blamed for the downfall of the derby lid. Formerly when the driver of a car wore a derby it was apt to be dented when his machine hit the bumps. Also, when getting in or out of the car he was apt to lose his derby bonnet in the doorway. Furthermore, if a man pulled his derby down over his ears in a high wind he might have to soak his head or use a shoe horn to remove it. So the fedora and the golf cap gradually took the place of the derby. The automobile has been of some service, after all."—From Muller Bros. House Organ.

JUANITA HANSEN ON PANTAGES CIRCUIT

Juanita Hansen, the serial star, has signed a contract to play fourteen weeks in vaudeville on the Pantages circuit. She is appearing in a single turn, devised by herself.

Current Reviews

Ameera's Hindu mother. Boris Karloff, Nigel de Brulier and Otto Lederer lend much to the Eastern atmosphere as Ahmed Khan, Pir Khan, and the Afghan money lender.

Little Philippe de Lacy is a lovely baby and commands much heart interest as Tota, the half-caste, at five years of age.

The list of players is completed by Herbert Prior, Ruth Sinclair and E. G. Miller.

"The Three Musketeers"

the foreign art bugs please heed, shows up like interpretations by the players in "Passion," quite desperately. We distinctly recollect the pleasure that they occasioned us, but their technique and subtleties were pretty thin when compared with the rare celluloid concoction that is this latest version of D'Artagnan's adventurings.

As for that battling son of an unmistakable gentleman, who could possibly fill his agile boots as does the inimitable Douglas? He treads the length of his colorful footage, now violently amusing his audience, now raising its hair, and even pushing it once or twice remarkably close to a tear with flashes of simple sincerity. Fairbanks is vivid, as always.

Another as striking characterization in its way as D'Artagnan is Cardinal Richelieu, exquisitely interpreted by Nigel de Brulier. The pose of this actor, his make-up, deliberation and admirable proportion have developed this role, France's diabolical churchman and prime minister, into a classic.

Adolphe Menjou also does with wonderful ease, employing all of his long appreciated cleverness, the impetuous, easily influenced Louis XIII.

An effective contrast is drawn by Mary MacLaren and Marguerite de la Motte, with their respective performances of Queen Anne and Constance, her sympathetic little seamstress. Possibly the former is not as typical in her role as she is competent to handle it, but that is a matter for personal opinion. Certainly the queen is well managed, and Constance, who becomes D'Artagnan's lady fair, is as softly pretty and appealing as she should be in Miss de la Motte's care.

Barbara La Marr and Boyd Irwin are capital types to play Milady de Winter and Du Rochefort, the Cardinal's faithful support in opposition, while equally as well placed is Lon Poff in Father Joseph, Richelieu's gauntly foreboding familiar.

The lusty "three" themselves are actively portrayed by Gene Pallette, George Seigman and Leon Bary. Against the care free hilarity and beautiful loyalty of this trio, the entire play is silhouetted.

A particularly good touch of brusqueness is Captain Detrouville, of the King's Musketeers, who is enacted by Willis Robards.

Charles Stevens as Planchette, Thomas Holding as Buckingham, Sidney Franklin as Bonacieux, and Walt Whitman as D'Artagnan's father, are all well situated and ably dispatch their action.

"The Three Musketeers" can't help proving a sensation universally. We need more such high class entertainment. Is there any way, we wonder, of prevailing upon Mr. Fairbanks to produce Robin Hood? It occurs to us that the jolly outlaw would be an unsurpassable follow-up for this unusual photoplay.

"Behind the Curtain" is the title of the thirteenth episode of the new Pathe serial, "The Yellow Arm," produced by George B. Seitz, for Pathe. Juanita Hansen is starred in this chapter play and Warner Oland with Marguerite Courtot are featured.

INDUSTRY'S DECISION TO ENTER POLITICS COMES LIKE BOMB TO NEW YORK ASSEMBLY

From Moving Picture World

Announcement that every candidate for the New York State Assembly this fall will be required to go on record as to whether or not he is in favor of a state censorship of motion pictures, came like a bomb to the assemblymen and others about the State Capitol at Albany the past week, and caused considerable apprehension among those who would much prefer to "straddle the fence" rather than to openly commit themselves upon any measure, especially before an election which even this early gives every promise of being warmly contested. Several of the joint legislative committees, popularly known as "summer committees," are meeting these days at irregular intervals at the State Capitol, with the result that there is considerable politics brewing.

There is no question but that there will be many changes in the make-up of the New York State Assembly next January. It was in this body that the Clayton censorship bill originated, although later on Senator Clayton R. Lusk, leader in the upper house, assumed a sort of proprietary interest in the measure, at least to the extent that it was later on known as the Lusk bill. Anyhow, Assemblyman Walter Clayton and nearly 150 other assemblymen are now leaving no stone unturned in their various districts to assure a return to the Assembly next November.

In some districts, such as that from which Theodore Roosevelt comes, and where resignations have occurred, there will be new candidates, while in other districts throughout the state there will be hostly contested primary fights.

The fact that the industry is to take an active part this fall in New York State politics in an effort to do away with obnoxious censorship, is an item of much interest to the candidates, realizing as they do, the great power of the screen. It will be remembered that the censorship bill was only passed in the Assembly last April during the closing hours of the final day, and then only after the hardest sort of a struggle, during which several hours were spent in preliminary skirmishing before the "powers that be" were in a position to trust matters to a show-down in the way of a vote.

Had it not been that the censorship bill was one of Governor Miller's pet measures—at least at that time!—it would never have passed. Since the legislature closed, there has been more than one assemblyman who has come out openly and declared that he was sorry that he had ever voted for the measure. It is whispered that H. Edmund Machold, speaker of the Assembly, and who will again be in a position to rule next winter, has been heard to remark that the bill was a foolish one and that in his opinion the governor has since been sorry that it was passed. The very delay that characterized the state chief executive in signing the bill later on and in naming the commission, goes far toward substantiating the allegations on the part of Mr. Machold.

At any rate, the motion picture industry is getting off with a flying start, something which was lacking last year and which might have been powerful enough to have killed the bill almost in its inception. Legislators admit that those who are open in their declarations for a continued censorship will find hard sledding this fall with the well directed advertising power of the screen pitted against them in their own communities.

Some of the legislators back at the Capitol the past week make no bones in saying that the New York State Motion Picture Commission was altogether too exacting in demanding an elimination of the bathing girls in the Pathe News. In fact, these legislators declared that when they voted for the bill last April, it was with the understanding that news weeklies would not only be exempt from examination, but also from the burdensome tax which the commission has seen fit to impose, following a ruling which it is claimed has been made by the attorney general himself.

If the film industry is successful in securing a written declaration from each candidate for the Assembly, outlining his or her viewpoint on motion picture censorship, and then backing those who are opposed to censorship, a big point will be gained before the session begins on January 1. The attitude of the entire body will be virtually known, and it will be a comparatively easy matter to either amend the present censorship law or introduce and pass a bill which will bring about the abolishment of the commission next July.

In accordance with Governor Miller's plan of economy, the Board of Estimate and Control is now using a force of eight investigators in better ascertaining just exactly why and where so much money is spent. It may be possible that one of these investigators will attach himself to the Motion Picture Commission for a few days in making inquiry as to what salaries are paid to this or that one, their qualifications for the work they do, and whether or not this labor justifies the amounts which are being paid, and which, it is rumored, are said to be rather above the ordinary, due not so much on efficiency shown as upon political preference.

The coming campaign for the assemblymen is bound to be an interesting one. In the meantime, as well as during the months to come, the industry will be in a position to do its share toward bringing about the abolishment of the commission. Former Senator George H. Cobb, chairman of the commission, in an interview a few days ago declared that the censorship shears were already becoming rusty, and that with pictures so clean that censorship is unneeded, Governor Miller and the legislature will leave the industry unhampered by censorship, confident that there will be no further need of chastisement, which has already run into thousands of dollars and which has not benefited anyone in particular, except perhaps the three commissioners at $7,500 per, and a rather expensive office force.

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS, INC., AND ASSOCIATE PRODUCERS JOIN FORCES FOR THREE YEARS

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—A $50,000,000 agreement among moving picture interests which leaders said would stabilize the cinema industry and mean better pictures, was announced here today.

The agreement provides for amalgamation for a period of three years, controlling many stars of the Associated Producers' corporation and the Associated First National Pictures corporation, controlling 3500 movie theaters in the United States and Canada.

Announcement of the agreement was made by Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, representing the producers, and Oscar Price, representative of the First National.

Edward L. Moriarty is responsible for the titles in Larry Semon's latest Vitagraph comedy, "The Fall Guy."

"Dead Men's Boots," starring "Ranger Bill" Miller, is nearing completion at the Miller Edendale studio, under the direction of Walter Bell.

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer

Glen Cedar Ranch,
Burbank, Calif.

My dear Nephew:

Your welcome-as-usual letter received, and contents noted. You suggest enough copy for about five reels if I should answer all at once, so I will try about two reels.

It is a wonderful thing to be able to make beautiful things, particularly beautiful pictures. In what better way can we in departing leave behind us footprints on the sands of time? And in making my pictures I would prefer a lens to a brush. There are some who would deny the lens a place in the list of mediums of expression on the ground that it is mechanical. However, it is not. True it will reproduce what it sees; but what it sees in the hands of one worker is vastly different from what it would see in the hands of another. There are masterpieces all about us, but it requires an artist to show them to his lens. An artist sees a beautiful scene early in the morning. Another sees the same setting in the light and shadow of the evening, so another and perhaps more beautiful picture is made. I don't believe there is anyone who has not at some time been deeply stirred by a beautiful picture, though he may consider it a weakness to enthuse over anything artistic.

If our picture is of an interior, we can get more atmosphere or softness by using a combination of natural and artificial light. Strong light and deep shadow in itself is not beautiful, but may depict character both as to set and figure. The set you mentioned appeared harsh on the screen because of insufficient light or because the source of light was too close to the characters. To prevent harshness use more light but diffused. A combination of sunlight and artificial light, as I have said, gives the best diffusion. Cooper-Hewitt is the next best to sunlight for diffusion, and barring Cooper-Hewitt, the arc lamp at the proper distance from objects will give something near the result desired. But diffusion is essential. And of course the source of light must come from certain angles. If double the regular number of lamps are used, simply to play safe, you get in bad with the electrical department, and that's an awful mistake.

You will find quite a difference of opinion as to alternating and direct current in picture making. Personally I am of the opinion that three phase alternating current has more snap and brilliancy than direct, but in making trick stuff the latter will give results free from shutter synchronism. I think we are safe in saying that direct current is the surest all the way around, for the balance on three phase alternating, is a hard proposition for a good many so-called electricians to handle.

Before leaving this subject of lighting, I want to point out, and with some pride too, that a lot of portrait photographers have been learning something on lighting from the despised "movie crank-turner." I don't want you to get the impression, however, that I begrudge them this a bit. There was a time when brotherhood among photographers was unheard of. They were as jealous of each other as Joe Martin and Snookie. If one gallery put out cabinet photographs at three dollars per dozen, the man across the street advertised them at two ninety-eight. We are not all on the same ferry boat yet by any means, but we are getting so we speak as we pass by. If we are willing to help each other, we help ourselves most of all.

We are still at work on the million dollar feature, "Foolish Animals I Have Known." Took on a Catalina goat who is registered by the name of Wrigley, to do a bit. In-

Lillian Guenther's Notes

As I have been in the picture game a short time it would take quite a big book to tell of what I have not done. Although I have never worked with Miss Pickford, I had the extreme pleasure of sitting on Mr. Douglas Fairbanks' lap. It was while I was being "page" in "The Three Musketeers."

That is something to tell my grandchildren. I wish Mr. Doug. needed a "page" every day, for he is certainly O. K.

The Story Idea
that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

The Director's Place in the Sun

Time was and not so long since as years are reckoned when the motion picture industry, being then in its infancy, had, as is the way of all undertakings in that period, many abuses to contend with, at least one of which was the immediate result of the autocratic power exercised by the director of each and every producing company. In those days his word was law; the actor merely his medium of expression. You see the industry was young.

Of course there may have been in the beginning a very reasonable excuse for the director's occupation of such a situation. Certainly when learning its first lessons in profitable existence, some one had to guide the progress of that awkward and unloved little offspring of the theatre, which, nevertheless, threatened to become, with the proper amount of time and effort to its credit, one of the arts before whose shrine the world was destined to worship. Indeed in many instances the director was a wise leader, in a word, a capable gentleman.

There were, however, less pleasant impressions having to do with the injustices of his tyranny that were indelibly imprinted upon the consciousness of those who were then filling more modest positions in the studios or picture camps, the men and women who daily experienced, perhaps for a vision, or perhaps for their livings, the dictation of a slave driver. They were silent to his inconsiderations, even his insults, but they remembered them, so that it was little to be wondered when the wheel of progress rolled on carrying picture creation out of the retarding rut sunken by his bigoted self-conceit, after the actor, having served his apprenticeship and having received recognition as an artist by both his profession and the public, had strayed into a managerial or maybe a big star position, that the ordinary old school director, finding himself lined up before his one time subject for inspection and consideration. was known to feel discomfiture. He deserved to. He learned, however, with the rest of them, and has lived down distasteful first records with new and creditable ones. That is, he has so done if he is yet with us. We have the utmost respect for the breadth that the last generation of motion directors has developed.

It is about some of the successors of these able men that this article is inscribed, for with the late months come those who are not so wise, young devotees of the megaphone who, partly out of the self love that so often accompanies talented inexperience, bid fair to assist history in odious repetition. Particularly is this true of those members of the greener stock who have been so fortunate as to have been engaged during the depression through which we have just passed.
